

R. A. McDonnell M. S

PSYCHOPATHIA SEXUALIS,

WHEN EXPERIENCE ADDRESS OF THE

Contrary Sexual Instinct:

A MEDICO-LEGAL STUDY.

By Dr. R. von KRAFFT-EBING. Protings of Psychology and Bearings, Culturally of Thoma-

AUTHORIZED TRANSLATION

SEVENTH ENLARGED AND REVISED GERMAN EDITION.

CHARLES GILBERT CHADDOCK, M.D.,

Sand of Procuse and Montal Discuss, Married State Office of Medicine, St. Louis Velley of the Discuss Analogy of Medicary, Corresponding Monday of the Dolland Academy of Medicary, Assessed Member of the American Medica-Psychological Association, etc.

PHILADELPHIA AND LONDON | THE P. A. DAVIS CO., PUBLISHERS.

1891.

Entered according to Act of Congrue, in the past SIM, $4" THE F. A. HAVEN CONFACTS; In the Office of the Enterior of Francisco, or Punisagone, D. C., U. & &. All Asplica benevals.

RC556

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

VERY few ever fully appreciate the powerful influence which sexuality exercises over feeling, thought, and conduct, both in the individual and in society. Schiller, in his poem, "Die Weltweisen," recognizes it with the words:—

> "Einstreißen bis den Ban der Welt Philosophie ennemmerhält, Erhält als das Getriebe Danie Hamper und danie Licon."

It is remarkable that the sexual life has received but a very subordinate consideration on the part of philosophers.

Schopenhauer ("The World as Will and Idea") thought it strange that love had been thus far a subject for the poet alone, and that, with the exception of superficial treatment by Plato, Rousseau, and Kant, it had been foreign to philosophers.

What Schopenhauer and, after him, the Philosopher of the Unconscious, E. v. Hartmann, philosophized concerning the sexual relations is so imperfect, and in its consequences so distasteful, that, aside from the treatment in the works of Michelet ("L'amour") and Mantegazza ("Physiology of Love"), which are to be considered more as brilliant discussions than as scientific treatises, the empirical psychology and metaphysics of the sexual side of human existence rest upon a foundation which is scientifically almost puerile.

The poets may be better psychologists than the psychologists and philosophers; but they are men of feeling rather than of understanding, and at least one-sided in their consideration of the subject. They cannot see the deep shadow behind the light and sunny warmth of that from which they draw their inspiration. The poetry of all times and nations would furnish inexhaustible material for a monograph on the psychology of love; but the great problem can be solved only with the help of

<sup>4 &</sup>quot;Memphile, and Philosophy shall at last mate and maintain the world, Hanger and Leve imped it coward."

Science, and especially with the aid of Medicine, which studies the psychological subject at its anatomical and physiological source, and views it from all sides.

Perhaps it will be possible for medical science to gain a stand-point of philosophical knowledge midway between the despairing views of philosophers like Schopenhauer and Hartmann<sup>1</sup> and the gay, nöire views of the poets.

It is not the intention of the author to lay the foundation of a psychology of the sexual life, though without doubt psychopathology would furnish many important sources of knowledge to psychology.

The purpose of this trentise is a description of the pathological manifestations of the sexual life and an attempt to refer them to their underlying conditions. The task is a difficult one, and, in spite of years of experience as alienist and medical jurist, I am well aware that what I can offer must be incomplete.

The importance of the subject for the welfare of society, especially forensically, demands, however, that it should be examined scientifically. Only he who, as a medico-legal expert, has been in a position where he has been compelled to pass judgment upon his fellow-men, where life, freedom, and honor were at stake, and realized painfully the incompleteness of our knowledge concerning the pathology of the sexual life, can fully understand the significance of an attempt to gain definite views concerning it.

Even at the present time, in the domain of sexual criminality, the most erroneous opinions are expressed and the most unjust sentences pronounced, influencing laws and public opinion.

He who makes the psychopathology of sexual life the object of scientific study sees himself placed on a dark side of human life and misery, in the shadows of which the god-like creations of the poet become hideous masks, and morals and aesthetics seem out of place in the "image of God."

* Barlmann's philosophical time of larc, in the "Philosophy of the Unconscious," p. 583, Berlin, 1859, is the following: "Love sittees more point than pleasure. Fleasure is litteeny. Research would cause too to be evoked if it were not for the field sexual instincts therefore, it would be best for a most to have himself castrated." The same opinion, raining the consequence, is also expressed by Schopenhauer ("The West als Wills and Vousielling," & gust., Int. u., p. nit u. 2").

It is the sad province of Medicine, and especially of Psychiatry, to constantly regard the reverse side of life,—human weakness and misery.

Perhaps in this difficult calling some consolation may be gained, and extended to the moralist, if it be possible to refer to morbid conditions much that offends ethical and aesthetic feeling. Thus Medicine undertakes to save the honor of mankind before the Court of Morality, and individuals from judges and their fellow-men. The duty and right of medical science in these studies belong to it by reason of the high aim of all human inquiry after truth.

The author would take to himself the words of Tardieu ("Des attentats aux moeurs"): "Aucune misère physique on morale, aucune plaie, quelque corrempue qu'elle soit, ne doit effrayer celui qui s'est voué a la science de l'homme et le ministère sacré du méderin, en l'obligeant à tout voir, lui permet aussi de tout dire."

The following pages are addressed to earnest investigators in the domain of natural science and jurisprudence. In order that unqualified persons should not become readers, the author saw himself compelled to choose a title understood only by the learned, and also, where possible, to express himself in terminis technicis. It seemed necessary also to give certain particularly revolting portions in Latin <sup>2</sup> rather than in German.

It is hoped that this attempt to present to physician and jurist facts from an important sphere of life will receive kindly acceptance and fill an actual histus in literature; for, with the exception of certain single descriptions and cases, the literature presents only the writings of Moreau and Tarnowsky, which cover but a portion of the field.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>4 &</sup>quot;So physical or moral micry, no suffering, however corrupt it may be, should dighten bias who has devoted himself to a leaderlying of man and the sacred ministry of medicine; in that he is obliged to me all things, let him be permitted to say all things."

I The Latin is left untrunslated.

* The works of Mott and ton Schrenck-Notting have since appeared.-Tause-

TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

THE distinguished author of "Psychopathia Sexualis" speaks for himself and his work in its preface; but there are not wanting others to speak for him.

Dr. A. von Schrenck-Notzing, of Munich, writes ::-

"It may be questioned whether it is justifiable to discuss the anomalies of the sexual instinct apart, instead of treating of them in their proper place in psychiatry. As a rule, they are certainly only symptoms of a constitutional malady, or of a weakened state of the brain, which manifest themselves in the various forms of sexual perversion.

"Moreover, attention has been directed to the baneful influence possibly exerted by such publications as 'Psychopathia Sexualis.' To be sure, the appearance of seven editions of that work could not be accounted for were its circulation confined to scientific readers. Therefore, it cannot be denied that a pornographic interest on the part of the public is accountable for a part of the wide circulation of the book. But, in spite of this disadvantage, the injury done by implanting knowledge of sexual pathology in unqualified persons is not to be compared with the good accomplished. History shows that unmism was very wide-spread long before the appearance of 'Psychopathia Sexualis.' The courts have constantly to deal with sexual crimes in which the responsibility of the accused comes in question.

"For the physician himself, sexual anomalies, treated as they are in a distant manner in text-books on psychiatry, are in greater part a terra incognita. Exact knowledge of the causes and conditions of development of sexual aberrations, and of the influence on them of hereditary constitution, education, the impressions of every-day life, and modern refined civilization, is the prerequisite for a rational prophylaxis of sexual aberrations, and for a correct sexual education. Without careful study of the circumstances which attend the development of sexual anomalies, we should never be in a position to use effectand therapensis. The majority of these unfortunates-Krafft-Ebing calls them Nature's step-children-are devoid of insight into their malady; like insome patients destitute of understanding of the ethical development of man, they are happy in their abnormal instinctive tendency. For this reason, in spite of the great prevalence of uranism, very few of its subjects seek medical treatment. While the terminal forms of sexual aberrations end in asylums for the insune, the doubtful cases, in which incompleteness of development or apparent viciousness render correct diagnosis difficult, make up the majority. But a thorough knowledge of the aberrations of the sexual instinct is absolutely indispensable to the jurist. The reasons given are thus sufficiently important to demonstrate the need of a hand-book on *psychopathia sexualis."

* Die Suggestione Therapie, etc., F. Ruke, Stuttgart, 1891.

These words also hold true for English-speaking physicians and jurists,—who can scarcely fail to welcome the translation of a work so systematic and comprehensive as "Psychopathia Sexualis"; a work conceived and executed in the highest scientific and humane spirit; a work which not only broadens and systematizes our knowledge of psycho-sexual phenomena, but also demonstrates, in the results of hypnotic suggestion, how important mental therapeusis must ultimately become in the hands of the physician; a work which is a trustworthy guide in the study of the concrete case of sexual crime, and a philosophical treatise on the inter-relations of sexual crime, and a philosophical criminal authropology.

The difficulties of translation have not been slight; but minor errors cannot destroy the author's meaning.

For much encouragement in the work of translation my gratitude to Dr. James G. Kiernan and Dr. G. Frank Lydston, of Chicago, both well-known investigators in this domain of psychopathology, is here expressed; and to Dr. William A. Stene, Assistant Superintendent at the Michigan Asylum, Kalamazoo, I am greatly indebted for assistance in the preparation of the manuscript.

CHARLES GILBERT CHARDOOK.

Ser Lores, No., November, 160.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

				100	20.00
LIII	FRAGMENT OF A PSYCHOLOGY OF THE SEXUAL LAFF.				1
	Power of the sexual instinct,	× 0			1
	Sexuality as the foundation of ethical feeling, .				1
	Love as a passion,				3
	History of development of sexuality,				2
	Modesty,				2
	PROFESSION				×
	Monogamy,				4
	When you have been be follows				5
	Sensuality and morality,				3
		1			4
	Development of sexual feelings in the individual; a	abert	5.		7
	Sensuality and religious outhorinem,				3
	Relations between the spheres of religion and sexus			,	2
	Sensoality and art,				10
	With the first and the state of				11
	True love,				u
	A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF TH				11
	Marie Transfer of the Control of the				12
	Love and friendship,				12
	Difference between male and female love,				13
	Cellisoy,				14
	Walter Williams				15
	Marriago,			*	15
	AND THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY O			1	16
	Facts of physiological fetichism,				ir
	Religious and spotic feticleism,				17
	Eyes, odors, voices, and mental qualities as detiches				21
	Hair, hand, and foot of woman as fetiches,				22
	Maria and and several advantage residence.
	Business				23
	Parsiotour,
	Sexual maturity,				23
	Duration of sexual instinct,		xi)		23
		- 10	1,1,1

									F40.
	Sexual sense,	4		4	4		-	*	2
	Localization (?),	-	-		4	Ŷ.	100		8
	Physiological development of					3	2	×	2
	Erection; rection-centre,	4	+		-	4	*	+	4
	Sexuality and the effectory ser	nne,	100	4				4	20
	Flageliation an excitant of sea	cent o	livite			4		*	29
	Sects of fingellants;				+	-			28
	Paullini's "Flagellum Salutis,"				+	-	-	-	27
	Erogenous zones,				*			1	31
	Control of the sexual instinct,		4						- 85
	Cohabitation,	8	4	+	*	4			88
	Ejaculation,		2		2	4	2	-	23
п	I. GENERAL PATROLOGY, .								24
	Frequency and importance of								34
	Schema of the sexual neuroses					1			34
	Spinal neuroses,	,							35
	Cerebral neurosce,								36
	Paradoxia sexualis,						1		33
	Anasthesia sexualis (congenito		41						41
	Anasthesia sexualis (nequired)				-		ž.		0
	Hypernethesia sexualis, .		1						-
	Panesthesia sexualis,						v.		55
	Perversion and perversity,		4		-				45
	Sedian,						į.	1	57
	An attempt to explain sadism,			1	į.				65
	de de la		4	1				10	62
	Authropoplagy				C				64
	Violation of corpres,					2	2	1	67
	Injury of women,								70
	No. of Contract of								19
	Symbolic sadism,					-	*	-	81
	D. Maria and Association						1	7
	where a color of the desire			1				1	82
	Sadistic sets with unimals,					-	•	-
	Sadism in woman,						*	*	84
	Mesochism,					7	V.	7	87
	Relation of passive flagellation	to a	(a.coe)	diam	3		*		169
	The state of the s					100	100	-

			TAB	LE DE	CON	TEN	13.					XIII
	Ideal masor	Bellion.										PACE
					*	*	*		*			115
	Symbolic m				X	*	4		4	*	X	- 500
	Bousseau,			-	-	6	*	-		*		1119
	Larvated m						*				-	123
	Feminine m						*		×		*
	An attempt										- 9	139
	Masociásm							10	*	17		148
	Petickism,								- 1		7	152
	Part of the		-						*		4	167
	Female atti							=	7.		7	167
	Special mat			1000					+	*	4	180
	Contrary se										*	185
	Acquired h							X			1	188
	Simple reve									-	4	191
	Eviration a										1	197
	Transition !								6		1	202
	Metamorph					4	-		*	-		216
	Congenital					1				-	1	222
	Psychical b	ermopl	troditi	em,	1	3					4	230
	Umings.		-			1		-	-		4	250
	Effeminatio	n ani	rimgia	my,	-	4	-			4		219
	Androgyny	and g	ynandi	y.		1		9	Y.		4	304
	Diagnosis,	progno	eis, an	I ther	apy e	T es	utra	y #65	malit	y	14	319
Y	SPIRIAL PA	THUL	18	4		4						358
	Pathologica	d sexu	ality	in the	vari	ous	form	a of	men	tal :	die-
	ease,			4		4				4		358
	Imbeeility,				6	91			4		4	359
	Dementia,						1		4		1	361
	Paretic des			4		1		14	-	4		363
	Epidopsy, .				2						3	354
	Periodical i						-		+		4	310
	Psychopath										-	371
	Mania,						1	-	_	1		372
	Satyriasis a	nd nyr			-	4	-	9				373
	Melancholis	-					. 6					374
	Hysteria,											375
	Paranois,		1		0	4	-		-		-	376
	THE RESERVE AND ADDRESS OF THE PERSON NAMED IN

				-					246
. Parmodoscal Sexuality							2	- 1	278
Dangers to assisty from	50.53	nal erri	maen,			4	E	- 4	-818
Increase of sexual crime	4	14	1	- 1	4		*	-	279
Camel,			4		10		8		378
Defective appreciation of	in mark	heri	tres b	y ju	rists,	-			1329
Conditions necessary to	FELLE	ove le	gal re	ирюя	elbeik	ty,	4	4	231
Eshibition,	1		4		*		4		382
Violation of statues, .									295
Rape and Instemurder,									397
Bodily injury, injury to								de-	- pendent on sadism,	-	-						1	460
Fetichism,							-		460
Violation of chibiren,			4				-	3	110
Sodomy,							4	-0	414
Petersty,							-	3	465
		-	-				-		414
Social life of pederasts,				1			-		415
Ball of the woman-hater			-	-		0		3	417
Padicatio malierum.					7		-		-
			-9						120
Lesbinn love,			7	-	-		-		125
Necrophilia,	17	-	4	6	-	2	-	*	4290
Incest,					8			-	181
Immoral acts with person	ns in	the e	stre o	CHEL	CO'S.		-	-	433

I. A FRAGMENT

OF A

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE SEXUAL LIFE.

The propagation of the human species is not committed to accident or to the captice of the individual, but made secure in a natural instinct, which, with all-conquering force and might, demands fulfillment. In the gratification of this natural impulse are found not only sensual pleasure and sources of physical well-being, but also higher feelings of satisfaction in perpetuating the single, perishable existence, by the transmission of mental and physical attributes to a new being. In coarse, sensual love, in the lastful impulse to satisfy this natural instinct, man stands on a level with the animal; but it is given to him to mise himself to a height where this natural instinct no longer makes him a slave; higher, nobler feelings are awakened, which, notwithstanding their sensual origin, expand into a world of beauty, sublimity, and morality.

On this height man overcomes his natural instinct, and from an inexhaustible spring draws material and inspiration for higher enjoyment, for more earnest work, and the attainment of the ideal. Mandsley (Deutsche Klinik, 1873, 2, 3) rightly calls the sexual feeling the foundation for the development of the social feeling. "Were man to be robbed of the instinct of procreation and all that arises from it mentally, nearly all poetry and, perhaps, the entire moral sense as well, would be torn from his life."

Sexuality is the most powerful factor in individual and social existence; the strongest incentive to the exertion of strength and acquisition of property, to the foundation of a home, and to the awakening of altruistic feelings, first for a person of the opposite sex, then for the offspring, and, in a wider sense, for all humanity.

Thus all ethics and, perhaps, a good part of aesthetics and religion depend upon the existence of sexual feeling.

Though the sexual life lends to the highest virtues, even to the sacrifice of the ego, yet in its sensual force lies also the danger that it may degenerate into powerful passions and develop the grossest vices.

Love as an unbridled passion is like a fire that burns and consumes everything; like an abyes that swallows all, honor, fortune, well-being.

It seems of high psychological interest to trace the developmental phases through which, in the course of the evolution of human culture to the morality and civilization of to-day, the sexual life has passed. On primitive ground the satisfaction of the sexual appetite of man seems like that of the animal. Openness in the sexual act is not shunned; man and woman are not ashomed to go naked. To-day we see savages in this condition (comp. Ploss, "Dus Weib," p. 196, 1884); as, for example, the Australians, the Polynesians, and the Malays of the Phillipines. The female is the common property of the males, the temporary booty of the strongest, who strive for the possession of the most beautiful of the opposite sex, thus carrying out instinctively a kind of sexual selection.

Woman is a movable thing, a ware, an object of bargain and sale and gift; a thing to satisfy lust and to work.

The appearance of a feeling of shame before others in the manifestation and satisfaction of the natural instinct, and modesty in the intercourse of the sexes, form the beginning of morality in the sexual life. From this arose the effort to conceal the genitals ("And they knew that they were naked") and the secret performance of the sexual act.

The development of this degree of culture is favored by the rigors of climate and the necessity for complete protection of the body thus entailed. Thus in part the fact is explained that among northern races modesty may be proved anthropologically earlier than among southern races.

A further stage in the development of culture in sexual life is marked when the female ceases to be a movable thing. She becomes a person; and if still for a long time placed far below the male socially, yet the idea that the right of disposal of herself and her favors belongs to her is developed.

Thus she becomes the object of the male's wooing. To the harbarous sensual feeling of sexual desire the beginnings of ethical feeling are added. The instinct is intellectualized. Property in women ceases to exist. Individuals of the opposite sexes feel themselves drawn toward each other by mental and physical qualities, and show love for each other only. At this stage woman has a feeling that her charms belong only to the man of her choice, and wishes to conceal them from others. Thus, by the side of modesty, the foundations of chastity and faithfulness—as long as the bond of love lasts—are laid.

Woman attains this degree of social elevation earlier when, at the transition from nomadic life to a state of fixed habitation, man obtains a house and home, and the necessity arises for him to possess in woman a companion for the household,—a housewife.

Among the nations of the East, the Egyptians, the Israelites, and the Greeks, and among those of the West, the Germans, early attained this stage of culture. Among all these races, at this stage of advancement, the esteem in which virginity, clustity, modesty, and sexual faithfulness are held is in marked contrast with other nations which offer the female of the house to the guest for his sexual enjoyment.

That this stage in the culture of sexual morality is quite high and makes its appearance much later than other developmental forms of culture—as, for example, asthetics—is seen from the condition of the Japanese, with whom it is the custom to marry a woman only after she has lived for a year in the ten-houses (which correspond with European houses of prostitution), and to whom the nakedness of women is nothing shocking. At all events, among the Japanese every unmarried woman can prostitute herself without lessening her value as a future wife,—a proof that with this remarkable people woman possesses no ethical worth, but is valued in marriage only as a means of enjoyment, procreation, and work.

* Comp. Wintermarck, "History of Human Marriage." McMillan & Co., 1861.

Christianity gave the most powerful impulse to the moral elevation of the sexual relations by raising woman to social equality with man and elevating the bond of love between man and woman to a religio-moral institution.

The fact that in higher civilization buman love must be monogamous and rest on a lasting contract was thus recognized. If nature does no more than provide for procreation, a commonwealth (family or state) cannot exist without a guaranty that the offspring shall flourish physically, morally, and intellectually. Christendom gained both mental and material superiority over 4 This generally externated five, also held by many hysterium, requires some limitation, in that the symbolic and sacramental character of marriage was first made clear and mangainteen by the Connell of Treat, even though there was ever in the spott of Christianty that which would five woman and raise her from the inferior position woughed by her in the motion would not the Old Terminent.

That this took place so his may well be due in part to the traditions of Greens of the secondary resultion of woman from the 1th of man, and of her part in the Pall, and the consequent carse: "Thy will shall be to thy hardward." Stace the Pall, for which the Cal Testament made woman responsible, became the representation of the falter of churchtractings, the wife's social position qualitative counts indictor antil the spirit of Christianty had guined a victory over tradition and schulasticism.

It is remarkable that, with the surspices of the intentiction of putting away a wife (Mart. gir. 5), the grapels comists melling favoring woman. Gradients haven the minimum and the expension Magdaient does not affect the position of the wife in itself. The Epictics of Fant specifically declare that the position of woman shall not be about (II Contath, xi, 3-12; Epice, v. 32; "Wives, infamily promotives tonly your husbanding" and 33, " And the wife are that she reverence for fracture! ").

Passages in Terbollian show how the Pathern of the Church were projudiced against sensure by Eco's guilt; "Woman, then shoulded forever go in source and may, the year filled with tensor! Them hast brought man to the ground!" St. Hierocomes has soulding good to any of woman. He says, "Woman is a door for the dwell, a way to well, the sting of the scorpins." ("Be cults formioneum," 1, 1.)

Capmirel Law declares: " Only seen was created in the image of God, not women;

therefore, summa should serve him and be his maid !"

The Provincial Council of Maron, in the sixth century, currently debated the ques-

The effect of these ideas in the Church in the peoples embracing Christianky was direct. Among the Germain, after the acceptance of the new faith, for the dangeing reason, the samplet for a wife-the simple expression of his value-decreased (J. Faffer, ii Decreased by Germany 1998). To be subjectively Germains of each set among the Jersa, role Levillens, Karis, 3 and 4.

Moreover, polygoner, which to expressly recognized in the Och Testament (Bent 22), in mostere explicitly introducted in the New Testament. Christian princes (e.g., the Mareringher kings, Cloise I, Chitchert E, Pepin L, and many of the royal females) lived in polygony; and at that time the Counch made no apposition to it (Weinbook, "Die deutschen Frence in Mitchister," is, p. 15). Comp. sine Ungre, "Die Ele," etc., and the protection work by Louis Scidel, "La famour et is death," Paris, 1984.

the polygumous mees, especially Islam, through the equalization of woman and man, and by establishing monogamous marriage and securing it by legal, religious, and moral ties.

If Molammed was actuated by a desire to raise woman from her place as a slave and means of sensual gratification to a higher social and matrimonial plane, nevertheless, in the Mohammedan world woman remained far below man, to whom alone divorce was allowed and also made very easy.

Islam kept woman from any participation in public life under all circumstances, and thus hindered her intellectual and moral development. In consequence of this the Mohammedan woman has ever remained essentially a means of sensual gratification and procreation; while, on the other hand, the virtues and capabilities of the Christian woman, as housewife, educator of children, and equal companion of man, have been allowed to unfold in all their beauty. Islam, with its polygamy and harem-life, is glaringly contrasted with the monogamy and family life of the Christian world.

The same contrast is apparent in a comparison of the two religious with reference to the conception of the hereafter. The picture of eternity seen by the faith of the Christian is that of a paradise freed from all earthly sensuality, promising the purest of intellectual happiness; the fancy of the Mussalman fills the future life with the delights of a barem full of houris.

In spite of all the aids which religion, law, education, and morality give civilized man in the bridling of his passions, he is always in danger of sinking from the clear height of pure, chaste love into the mire of common sensuality.

In order to maintain one's self on such a height, a constant struggle between natural impulses and morals, between sensuality and morality, is required. Only characters endowed with strong wills are able to completely emancipate themselves from sensuality and share in that pure love from which spring the noblest joys of human life.

It is yet questionable whether, in the course of the later centuries, mankind has advanced in morality. It is certain, however, that the race has become more modest; and this phenomenon of civilization—this biding of the animal propensities is, at least, a concession that vice makes to virtue.

From a reading of Scherr's works ("History of German Civilization") one would certainly gain the impression that, in comparison with those of the Middle Ages, our own ideas of morals have become refined, even when it must also be allowed that in many instances finer manners, without greater morality, have taken the place of earlier obscenity and coarseness of expression.

When widely separated periods of history are compared, no doubt is left that public morality, in spite of occasional temporary retrogression, makes continuous progress, and that Christianity is one of the most powerful of the forces favoring moral progress.

To-day we are far beyond the sexual conditions which, as shown in the audomitic worship of the gods, in the life of the people, and in the laws and religious practices, existed among the ancient Greeks,—to say nothing of the worship of Phallus and Priapus among the Athenians and Babylonians, of the bacchanals of ancient Rome, and the prominent place prostitutes took among these peoples. In the slow and often imperceptible progress which human morality makes there are variations or fluctuations, just as in the individual sexuality manifests an ebb and flow.

Periods of moral decadence in the life of a people are always contemporaneous with times of effeminacy, sensuality, and luxury. These conditions can only be conceived as occurring with increased demands upon the nervous system, which must meet these requirements. As a result of increase of nervousness, there is increase of sensuality, and, since this leads to excesses among the masses, it undermines the foundation of society,—the morality and purity of family life. When this is destroyed by excesses, unfaithfulness, and luxury, then the destruction of the state is inevitably compassed in material, moral, and political ruin. Warning examples of this character are presented by Rome, Greece, and France under Louis XIV and XV. In such times of political and moral destruction monstrous perversions of the sexual life were frequent, which, however, may in part be referred to psycho-pathological or, at least, neuro-pathological conditions existing in the people.

<sup>1</sup> Comp. Trioflinder "Bittengeschichte Rone" Wiofemeister, "Der Cannewahrten." Steinen. Moren, "Der aberratione in sein gehöhtige."

It is shown by the history of Babylon, Nineveli, Rome, and also by the "mysteries" of life in modern Capitals, that large cities are the breeding-places of nervousness and degenerate sensuality. The fact which may be learned from reading Ploss's work is remarkable, viz., that perversion of the sexual instinct (save among the Aleutians, and in the form of masturbation among the females of the East and the Nama Hottentots) does not occur in uncivilized or half-civilized races,

The study of the sexual life in the individual must begin at its development at puberty, and follow it through its different phases to the extinction of sexual feelings. In his "Physiology of Love," Mantegazza describes the longings and impulses of awakening sexual life, of which presentiments, indefinite feelings, and impulses have existed long before the epoch of puberty. This epoch is, physiologically, the most important. In the abundant increase of feelings and ideas which it engenders is manifested the significance of the sexual factor in mental life.

These impulses, at first vague and incomprehensible, arising from the sensations which are awakened by organs which were previously undeveloped, are accompanied by a powerful excitation of the emotions. The psychological reaction of the sexual impulse at puberty expresses itself in a multitude of manifestations which have in common only the mental condition of emotion and the impulse to express in some way, or render objective, the strange emotionality. Religion and poetry lie close to it, which, after the time of sexual development is past and these originally incomprehensible feelings and impulses have cleared up, receive powerful incentives from the sexual sphere. He who doubts this has only to think how often religious authusiasm occurs at the time of puberty; how frequent sexual episodes are in the lives of the saints; how powerfully sensuality expresses itself in the histories of religious fanatics; and in what revolting scenes, true orgies, the religious festivals of antiquity, no less than the "meetings" of certain sects in modern times, express themselves,—to say nothing of the lustful mysteries which characterized the cults of the ancients. On the other hand, we see that unsatisfied sensuality very frequently finds an equivalent in religious enthusiasm.

I These elaborates, however, are opposed to Prindreum ("Eldh. d. periodesimil Presis," 1, p. 371, 1843), and also Londreum (op. of., p. 42), according to whom policiesty is very frequent among the unstriffered Americans.

This relation between religious and sexual feeling is also shown on the basis of unequivocal psycho-pathological states. It suffices to recall how intense sensuality makes itself manifest in the clinical histories of many religious maniacs; the motley suixture of religious and sexual delusions that is so frequently observed in psychosos (e.g., in maniacal women, who think they are or will be the Mother of God), but particularly in masturbatic insanity; and, finally, the sensual, cruel self-punishments, injuries, self-castrations, and even self-crucifixions resulting from abnormal sexual-religious feeling.

Any attempt to explain the relations between religion and love has difficulties to encounter. Many analogies present themselves. The feeling of sexual attraction and religious feeling (considered as a psychological fact) consist of two elements.

In religion the primary element is a feeling of dependence,—a fact which Scaleicensecher recognized long before the later studies in anthropology and ethnography, founded on the observation of primitive condtions, had led to the same conclusion. It is only at a higher stage of enture that the second and essentially ethical element—love of God, enters into religious Seeling. In the place of the ovil spirits of the primitive peoples came the two-faced—now hind, new angry—creations of the more complicated mythologies, until, finally, the field of love, as the giver of sternal imprimess, is reverenced, whether this is hoped for from Johovah, as a blessing on earth; from Allah, as a physical blessing in Paradise; from Christ, as sternal bliss in heaven; or as the Nirvana of the Buddhists.

"Comp. Friedmich, "Diagnostik der pepch. Krankheiten," p. 347 u. f.; Neumann, "Lehrle ü. Pepchamin," p. 80.

*Comp. Finoducich, "gericht!, Perclictogic," p. 399, who has relicioned numerous examples. Then the sim Blantskin was always troubled with the thought about which had become of the part best at the streamerism of Christ. Veronica digitant, canonical by Pope Prac II, is memory of the divisor itom, took an actual itom is feer best and historic, and let it suck from her beneat; and stree secreted a few despend with for it. St. Catherine, of them, other terms of the memory of the divisor is made from the property of the second the down on the ground and cry "Love, love, I can colore it his imager!" At the same time sto felt a promite in instantion for her contensor. One day she lifted his hand to bee some and smalled an observable preservated to her heart, "a hearently perfuse, as delightful that it would make the dead." St. Armelio and St. Elimbeth were troubled with a similar longing for the child Jesus. The temperature of St. Articles, of Pades, are well known. An old proper is significant "O, that I had then it my best to mining designt to body and soul. Come and to mine, and my heart shall be tag nestrophises."

In sexual desire, love, the expectation of unbounded happiness is the primary element. The feeling of dependence is of secondary development. The nucleus of this feeling exists in both parties, but it may remain undeveloped in one. As a rule, owing to her passive part in procreation and social conditions, it is more presourced in woman; but exceptionally this is true of men having minds that approach the Seminine type.

In both the religious and sexual spheres love is mystical, transcendental. In sexual love the real purpose of the instinct, the propagation of the species, does not enter into consciousness; and the strength of the desire is greater than any that consciousness of purpose could create. In religion, however, the good sought and the object of devotion are of such nature that they cannot become a part of empirical knowledge. Therefore, both mental processes give unlimited range to the imagination.

But both have an immortal object, in as far as the blins which the sexual sentiment creates in fancy seems incomparable and infinite in contrast with all other pleasurable feelings; and the some is true of the promised blessings of firith, which are conceived to be sternal and supreme.

From the correspondence between the two states of consciousness, with reference to the commanding importance of their objects, it follows that they both often attain an intensity that is irresistible, and which overcomes all opposing motives. Owing to their similarity in that their objects cannot be attained, it follows that both socily degenerate into silly enthusiasm, in which the intensity of Soling for surpasses the cientees and constancy of the ideas. In both cases, in this enthusiasm, with the expectation of a happiness that cannot be attained, the necessity of unconditional submission plays a part.

Owing to the correspondence in many points between these two emotional states, it is clear that when they are very intense the one may take the place of the other; as one may appear by the side of the other, since every intensification of one element of mental life also intensifies its associations. The constant emotion thus calls into consciousness now one and now the other of the two series of ideas with which it is conmeted. Either of these mental states may become transformed into the impalse to cruelty (actively exercised or passively suffered).

In the religious life this is expressed by sacrifice. Primarily this is done with the idea that the victim is materially enjoyed by the drity; then, in reverence, as a sign of submission, as a tribute; and, finally, with the bellef that sine and transpressions against the drity are thus atomed for and blessing obtained. If, however, the offering consist of self-punish ment, which occurs in all religious, in individuals of very excitable in ligious nature, it serves not only as a symbol of automotion and as an squirezient in the exchange of present pain for future hiles, but everything that is thought to come from the drift, all that happens in obedience to divine mandate or to the bence of the godhead, is felt directly as pleasure. Thus religious outhusiasm leads to costany, to a condition in which consciousness is so prooccupied with feelings of mental pleasure that the concept of suffering endured can only be appeared without its painful quality.

The explication of religious enthusiasm may lend actively to pleasure in the sacrifice of another, if pity be overcompensated by feelings of religious pleasure.

Sadism, and particularly associated (a. (a/ra), show that in the aphere of the sexual life there may be similar phenomena. Thus the well-egishished relations between religion, lust, and crucity! may be comprehensed in the following formula: States of religious and sexual excitement, at the name of their development, may correspond in the amount and quality of excitement, and, therefore, under favoring discumstances, one may take the place of the other. Both, in pathological conditions, may become transformed into ernosity.

The sexual factor proves to be no less influential in awakening mathetic feelings. What would poetry and art be without a sexual foundation? In (sensual) love is gained that warmth of fancy without which a true creation of art is impossible; and in the fire of sensual feelings its glow and warmth are preserved. It may thus be understood why great poets and artists have sensual natures.

This world of ideals reveals itself with the inception of the processes of sexual development. He who, at this period of his, cannot become authorisatic for all that is great, noble, and beautiful, remains a Phillistine all his life. At this epoch does not the least of natural poets forge rerses?

At the limits of physiological reaction there are events which take place at the time of puberty in which these obscure feelings of longing express themselves in paroxysms of despuir i The relation of this little finds its representation not only in the events of small life, as above indicated, but also in romanou, and even in the scalphare of degenerate even. As an example we may point in the group of St. Thereas, by Sernint, who " sinks in an hyderical faint on a marklet cloud, with an amoroter angel phosping the arrow (of drains lave) too har beart " (Limbo).

of self and the world, which may go on to teolism vite, and are often accompanied by a desire to do harm to others (weak analogies of a psychological connection between lust and eruelty).

Youthful love has a romantic, idealistic character. It elevates the beloved object to apotheosis. In its inception it is platonic, and turns to forms of poetry and romance. With the awakening of sensuality there is danger that this idealizing power may be brought to bear upon persons of the opposite sex who are mentally, physically, and socially of inferior station. Thus there may occur méssulliances, seductions, and errors, with the whole tragedy of a passionate love that comes in conflict with the dictates of social position and prospects, and sometimes terminates in suicide or double suicide.

Over-sensual love can never be lasting and true. For this reason the first love is, as a rule, very fleeting; because it is nothing rise than the flare of a passion, the flame of a tire of straw.

Only the love that rests upon a recognition of the social qualities of the beloved person, only a love which is willing not only to enjoy present pleasures, but to bear suffering for the beloved object and sacrifice all, is true love. The love of a strongly constituted man shrinks before no difficulties or dangers in order to gain and keep possession of its object.

Love expresses itself in acts of heroism and daring. Such love is in danger, under certain circumstances, of becoming criminal, if moral principles be weak. Jealousy is an ugly spot in this love. The love of a weakly constituted man is sentimental. It sometimes leads to suicide when it is not returned or meets with obstacles, while, under like conditions, the strongly constituted man may become a criminal.

Sentimental love is in danger of becoming a cariculare, i.e., when the sensual element is weak (the Knight of Toggenburg, Don Quixote, many minnesingers and troubadours of the Middle Ages).

Such love is flat and soft, and may be even silly; but the true expression of this powerful feeling awakens appropriate pity, respect, or sorrow in the hearts of others. Frequently this weak love expresses itself in equivalents in poetry, which, however, under such circumstances, is effectionate; in aesthetics which are overdrawn; in religion, in which it gives itself up to mysteries and religious enthusiasm; or, where there is a more powerful sensual foundation, founds serts or expresses itself in religious insanity. The immature love of the age of puberty has something of all this in it. Of all the poems and rhymes written at this time of life, they only are rendable that are the product of poets divinely endowed.

Notwithstanding all the ethics which love requires in order to develop into its true and pure form, its strongest root is still sensuality. Platonic love is an impossibility, a self-deception, a false designation for related feelings.

In as far as love rests upon sensual desire, it is only conectivable in a normal way as existing between individuals of opposite sex and capable of sexual intercourse. If these conditions are wanting or destroyed, then, in the place of love, comes friendship.

The rôle which the retention of sexual functions plays in the case of a man, both in originating and retaining the feeling of self-respect, is remarkable. In the deterioration of manliness and self-confidence which the coanist, in his weakened nervous state, and the man that has become impotent, present, may be estimated the significance of this factor.

Gyarkovechky (mound, Impotens. Vienna, 1889) says, very justly, that old and young uses escentially differ mentally, on secount of the condition of their virility, and that impotence has a detrimental effect upon the feeling of well-being, mental freshness, activity, asifeconfidence, and the play of finery. This loss becomes the more important the younger a man is when he loses his virility and the more sensually be was constituted.

Under such circumstances a solden loss of visility may induce severe melancholla, and even lead to suicide. For such natures life without love is unboundle.

But, also, in cases where the reaction is not so deep, the man beneft of his virility is more and spiteful, egotistic, jealous, contrary, listless, has but little self-respect or sense of honor, and is cowardly. Analogies are seen in the Skopsens, who, after their castration, change for the worse. The loss of virility is still more noticeable in certain weakly constituted individuals, where it expresses itself in formal efemination in infra).

In a woman who has become a matron the condition is of much less importance psychologically, though it is noticeable. If the past period of sexual life has been satisfactory, if children delight the heart of the aging mother, then she is scarcely conscious of the change of her personality.

The situation is different, however, where sterility or circumstances have kept a woman from the performance of her natural functions and denied her that happiness.

These facts place in a clear light the differences which exist between man and woman in the psychology of the sexual life, and in all the sexual functions and desires.

Undoubtedly man has a much more intense sexual appetite than woman. As a result of a powerful natural instinct, at a certain age, a man is drawn toward a woman. He loves sensually, and is influenced in his choice by physical beauty. In accordance with the nature of this powerful impulse, he is aggressive and violent in his wooing. At the same time, this deniend of nature does not constitute all of his mental existence, When his longing is satisfied, love temporarily retreats behind other vital and social interests.

With a woman it is quite otherwise. If she is normally developed mentally, and well bred, her sexual desire is small. If this were not so the whole world would become a brothel and marriage and a family impossible. It is certain that the man that avoids women and the woman that socks men are abnormal.

Woman is woold for her favor. She remains passive. This lies in her sexual organization, and is not founded merely on the dictates of good breeding.

Nevertheless, the sexual sphere occupies a much larger place in the consciousness of woman than in that of man. The need of love in her is greater than in man, and is continual, not intermittent; but this love is rather more spiritual than sensual. While a man loves a woman first as wife and then as mother of his children, a woman is primarily conscious of a man as the father of her children and then as husband. In the choice of a life-companion a woman is influenced much more by the mental than the physical qualities of a man. When she has become a mother she divides her love between child and husband. Sensuality disappears in the mother's love. Thereafter, in marital intercourse, the wife finds less sensual satisfaction than proof of the love of her husband.

A woman loves with her whole soul. To her love is life; to a man it is the joy of life. To him misfortune in love is a wound; but it costs a woman her life, or at least her happiness. A psychological question worthy of consideration is whether a woman can truly love twice in her life. Certainly the mental inclination of woman is monogamous, while in man it is polygamous.

The weakness of men in comparison with women lies in the great intensity of their sexual desires. Man becomes dependent upon woman, and the more, the weaker and more sensual he becomes; and this just in proportion as he becomes neuropathir. Thus may be understood the fact that, in times of effeminateness and luxury, sensuality flourishes luxuriantly. Then arises the danger to society that mistresses and their dependents may rule the state and compass its ruin (the mistresses of the courts of Louis XIV and XV; the prestitutes of ancient Greece).

The biographies of many statesmen of ancient and modern times show that they were the instruments of women, owing to their great sensonlity, which had its foundation in their neuropathic constitutions. The fact that the Catholic Church enjoins celibacy upon its priests, in order to emancipate them from sensuality and preserve them entirely for the purpose of their calling, is an example of discerning psychological knowledge of mankind; but it is unfortunate that the priests, living in relibacy, lose the elevating effect which love and matrimory exert upon the development of character.

From the fact that man by nature plays the aggressive vôle in sexual life, he is in danger of overstepping the limits which morality and law have set. The unfaithfulness of a wife, in comparison with that of a husband, is morally much more weighty, and should be more severely punished legally. The unfaithful wife dishenors not only herself, but also her husband and her family, not to speak of the possibility of pater incertsa. Natural instinct and social position favor unfaithfulness on the part of a husband, while the wife is afforded much protection. In the case of an unmarried woman, sexual intercourse is something quite different from what it is in an unmarried man. Of a single man society demands decency; of a woman, also chastity. In the cultivated social life of to-day, woman, occupying a sexual position and concerning herself in the interests of society, can only be thought of as a wife.

The aim and ideal of woman, even when she is sunken in the mire of vice, is, and remains, marriage. Woman, as Mantegazza justly remarks, desires not only satisfaction of her sexual feeling, but also protection and support for herself and her children. A man of right feeling, no matter how sensual he may be, demands a wife that has been, and is, chaste. The emblem and ornament of a woman sceking this, her only worthy purpose in life, is modesty. Mantegazza finely characterizes modesty as "one of the forms of psychical self-respect" in woman. This is not the place for anthropological and historical consideration of this, the most beautiful attribute of woman. Probably, feminine modesty is an hereditarily evolved product of the development of civilization."

In remarkable contrast with it, there is occasional exposition of physical charms, conventionally sanctioned by the law of fishion, in which even the most discreet maiden allows herself to indulge in the ball-room. The reasons which lead to this display are evident. Fortunately the modest girl is as little conscious of them as of the reason for the occasionally recurring mode of making certain portions of the body more prominent (panniers); to say nothing of corsets, etc.

In all times, and among all races, women show a desire to adorn themselves and be charming. In the animal kingdon mature has distinguished the male with the greater beauty. Men designate women as the beautiful sex. This gallantry clearly arises from the sensual desire of men. As long as this personal adornment has a purpose only in itself, or the true psychological reason of the desire to please remains unknown to the woman, nothing can be said against it. When it is done with knowledge, the effort is called flirting.

Under all circumstances a dandified man is ridiculous. We are accustomed to this slight weakness in a woman, and find no finit with it, so long as it is but a subordinate manifestation. When it has become the all-absorbing aim, the French apply to it the word coquetry.

Woman far surpasses man in the natural psychology of love, partly because, through heredity and education, her native element is love; and partly because she has finer feelings (Mantegazza). Even in a man of the very highest breeding, it cannot be found objectionable that he recognizes woman as a means of satisfying his natural instinct. But it becomes his duty to belong only to the woman of his choice. In a civilized state this becomes a binding social obligation,—marriage; and, inasmuch as the wife requires for herself and children protection and support, it becomes a marriage right.

It is of great importance psychologically, and, for certain pathological manifestations to be later described, indispensable, to examine the psychological events which draw a man and a woman together and units them; so that, of all other persons of the same sex, only the beloved one seems desirable.

If one could demonstrate design in the processes of nature,—adaptation cannot be defied them,—the fact of fascination by a single person of the opposite sex, with indifference toward all others, as it occurs between true and happy lovers, would appear as a wonderful creative provision to insure monogaisous unions for the promotion of their object.

A This is not literally the case. "It is expressly stated, of the woman of second sarrage proples, that they are less desirance of self-deconation than the min."—Westermarch, up. air, p. 154. And the series writer (p. 182) may that " it is a common notion that without are by nature nature and more addition to decoring and deconating themselves that now. This portably they and hold good for savage and burbarous proples in general ".—Takes.

To the executific observer, however, this lave, or "harmony of sonis," this "heart-bond," does not, by any means, appear as a "aculonystery;" but, in the majority of cases it may be referred to certain physical or mental peculiarities, as the case may be, by which the attractiveness of the beloved person is exerted.

Thus we speak of what is called fetich and fetichesse. In the term fetich we are wont to comprehend objects, or parts, or simply prouliarities of objects, which, by virtue of associative relations to an intense beiling, or to a personality or idea that awakens deep intenst, exert a kind of charm ("fetiaso," Pertuguess), or, at least, owing to paculiar individual coloring, produce a very deep impression which does not belong to the external sign (symbol, Setich) in itself."

The individual valuation of the fetich, which may go to the extent of an unreasoning enthusiasm in the individual affected, is called fetichism. This interesting psychological phonomenon is explicable by an empirical law of association,—the relation of a particular to a general concept,—in which, however, the essential thing is the pleasurable emotional coloring of the particular concept peculiar to the individual. It is most common in two related mental spheres,—those of religious and crotic feelings and ideas. Beligious fetichism differs in relation and significance from sexual fetichism, for it found, and still finds, its original motive in the defusion that the object of the fetichism, or the idol, possesses divine attributes, and that it is not simply a symbol; or peculiar wonder-working (relies) or protective (annulet) virtues are superstitiously ascribed to the fetich.

It is otherwise with protic ficticitism, which finds its psychological motive in fetiches which counsist of physical or mental qualities of a person or even merely of objects which a person has used. These always awaken intense associative ideas of the personality as a whole, and moreover, are always colored with a lively feeling of sexual pleasure. Analogies with religious fetchism are always discernible; for, under certain circumstances, in the latter, the most insignificant objects (boxes, nails, hair, etc.) become feticlies, and are associated with pleasurable feelings which may reach the intensity of costasy.

With respect of the development of physiological love, it is probable that its nucleus is always to be found in an individual fetich (charm) which a person of one sex exercises over a person of the opposite sex.

The case is the simplest where the sight of a person of the opposite sex occurs simultaneously with sensual excitement, and the latter is thus increased.

Comp. Max Million, who derives like wend fethels etymologically floor problems (with firth), an ineignificant (hing).

Emotional and visual impressions are brought into associative connection, and this association is strengthened in proportion as the recurring emotion awakens the visual memory-picture, or the latter (another meeting) renews sexual excitement, which may possibly reach the intensity of orgasm and pollution (dreampicture). In this case the whole physical personality has the effect of a fetich.

As Binet and others show, merely parts of the whole, simply peculiarities, either physical or mental, may affect the person of the opposite sex as a fetich, when the perception of them is associated with (accidental) sexual excitement (or induces it).

It is well known from experience that accident determines this mental association, that the objects of the fetich may be individually very diverse, and that thus the most peculiar sympathies (and antipathies) arise.

These physiological facts of fetichism explain the individual sympathies between husband and wife; the preference of a certain person to all others of the same sex. Since the fetich represents a symbol that is purely individual, it is clear that its effect must be individual. Since it is colored by the most intense pleasurable feeling, it follows that possible faults in the beloved object are overlooked ("Love is blind"), and an exaltation of it is induced that to others is incomprehensible, and even silly under some circumstances. Thus it is clear why lovers are not understood by their unaffected fellow-men; and why they deify their idols, develop a true cult of devotion, and invests them with attributes which objectively they do not possess. Thus we may understand why love appears sometimes more like a passion, sometimes as a formal, exceptional mental state, in which the unattainable seems attainable, the ugly beautiful, the profue sacred, and every other interest, every duty, disappears.

Tarde (Acchives de l'authropologie criminalle, v year, No. 30) rightfully emphasizes the fact that the fetich may vary with nations as well as with individuals, but that the general ideal of heauty remains the same among civilized people of the same cth.

Binet deserves great credit for having studied and analyzed in detail the fetichism of love. The particular sympathies all spring from it. Thus one is attracted to slender, another to plump beauties, to blondes or brunettes. For one a peculiar expression of the eyes; for another a peculiar tone of the voice, or a particular (even an artificial) odor (perfume); or the hand, the foot, the ear, etc., may be the individual fetich (charm), the beginning of a complicated chain of mental processes which, as a whole, represent love, i.e., the longing to possess, physically and mentally, the beloved object.

This fact is important, as showing a condition for the origin of a fetichism that falls within physiological limits. The fetich may constantly retain its significance without being pathological; but this is possible only when the particular concept is developed to a general concept; when the resulting love comes to take as its object the whole mental and physical personality.

Normal love can be nothing but a synthesis, a generalization. Ladwig Brunn, under the heading, "The Fetichism of Love," eleverly says:—

"Thus normal love appears to us as a symphony of tones of all kinds. It results from the most various stimuli. It is likewise polytheistic. Fetishism recognizes only the tone of a single instrument; it results from a certain stimulus; it is monotheistic."

On slight reflection any one will see that real love (this word is only too often abused) can be spoken of only when the whole person is both physically and mentally the object of adoration. Love must always have a sensual element, i.e., the desire to possess the beloved object, to be united with it and falfill the laws of nature. But when merely the body of the person of the opposite sex is the object of love, when satisfaction of sensual pleasure is the sole object, without desire to possess the soul and enjoy mutual communion, love is not genuine, no more than that of platonic lovers, who love only the soul and avoid sensual pleasure (many cases of contrary sexuality). For the former merely the body, for the latter simply the soul, is a feticle, and the love fetichism. Such cases certainly represent transitions to pathological fetichism. This assumption is even more justified when, as a further criterion of real love, mental<sup>1</sup> satisfaction must be given by the sexual act.

I Bentuckes Mostagethar: Berlin, August 20, 1981.

There remains to be mentioned, within the physiological phenomena of fetichism, the fact that among the many things that may become fetiches there are certain ones that gain such significance for a majority of persons.

As such for a man may be mentioned the bair, the hand, the foot of a woman, the expression of her eyes. Certain ones of these gain a remarkable significance in the pathology of fetichism. These facts clearly play a rôle in the feminine mind, either consciously or unconsciously.

One of the greatest cares of women is the cultivation of the bair, to which often an unreasonable amount of time and money is devoted. How a mother cares for her little daughter's hair! What a part the hair-dresser plays! Falling of the hair would cause despair in a young lady. I recall a proud lady who became insone over it, and died by suicide. Young ladies like to talk of coiffures, and are envious of beautiful hair.

In the important part played by the hair of the head as a situation of strail passion appears in a customs way from Mr. Filters's account of King Bridging's attempt to netrodice European customs among the Borar of Madaganean. As soon as to had adopted the minister names of the English, he unineed that all his offeres and addition should have minist bair cut, but, this command produced to great a disturbance among the woman of one capital that they assembled in great numbers to protect against the hing's order, and could not be quested that they were summed to prove the proof, and their leaders create appeared."—Westermarch, sp. ed.

Here male hale was a physiological fetch of females. It represents a relation of the error that overlandies has gradually reverseld. While is obtained society stomas suff-

&quot;Magazar's "aginal circlinal posterior," who finds pleasure in every woman, and on whom every woman looks with favor, has only desire to satisfy his last. Purchised in favoral lave is not real lave (Mantegarra). The con who originated the saying, "Saliaba Isperia terilian discretives more issuant," and have been a syste halloof. Power in a man to perform love but in no proof that this makes possible the greatest pleasure of two. There are, indeed, are large who are potent for teamen,—near who do not love their street, that who are still able to perform the manual "daip." In most cases of this kind, indeed, there is no lastful pleasure; it is essurably a kind of manualtic art, for the most part make possible by mouse of help of imagination that calls up another belowed posses. By this deception sesseal pleasure can be induced, but this ruffmentary populated satisfactors is the result of a westful block, just us in indicate, consists, where family has to assist in cofer to induce senses) pleasure. As a role, the degree of urgans, necessary as a mean to the attainment of institut pleasure seems attainable only when the imagination interverse Where mental temperature senses attainable may when the imagination interverse where mental temperatures exist (indifference, reparature, diagrat, fear of infection or preparately, etc.), senses pleasure seems usually wanting.

Beautiful hair is a powerful fetich with many men. In the legend of the Loreley, who lured men to destruction, the golden hair, which she combs with a golden comb, appears as a fetich. Frequently the hand and foot possess an attractiveness no less powerful, when, indeed, often (though by no means invariably) masochistic and sadistic feelings aid in determining the peculiar kind of fetich.

By a transference through association of ideas, the gloves or shoes may obtain the significance of a fetich.

Brunn (op. cit.) justly points out that among the customs of the Middle Ages drinking from the shor of a beautiful woman (still to be found in Poland) played a remarkable part in gallantry and homage. The shoe also plays an important rôle in the legend of Aschenbrödel.

The expression of the eyes is particularly important as a means of kindling the sparks of love. A neuropathic eye frequently affects persons of both sexes as a fetich. "Madame, vos beaux yeax me font mourir d'amour" (Molière).

There is superfluity of examples showing that odors of the body may become fetiches.

This fact is also taken advantage of in the ore anusadi of woman, either consciously or unconsciously. Ruth sought to attract Boaz by perfuming herself. The demi-monde of ancient and modern times is noted for its use of perfume. Jager, in his "Discovery of the Soul," calls attention to many olfactory sympathics.

Cases are known where men have married ugly women simply because their personal odors were exceedingly pleasing.

Binet makes it probable that the voice may also become a fetich. He relates a case in point of Dumas, who used it in his class her ingressity is increase her altra-tiveness, among arrayes it is the sees who are avaious to increase their physical charms. Thes reversal of the primitive relation is a very interesting fact, and is probably as he explained by the transference of the "litterty of chalve" from woman to man which circlivation his gradually induced. Westermarck (op. of., p. 180) sace: "It should be noted that it is, as a rule, the man only that runs the risk of being obliged to lend a single life. Hence it is obvious that, to the best of his shiftly, be trust embrace to be taken into throw by making abused as attractive as possible. In arritand Europe, on the other hand, the opposite occurs. Here it is the woman that has the greatest difficulty in getting married, and she is also the values of the tree."—Trace.

novel, "La Maison du Vent." It was the case of a wife who fell in love with a tenor's voice, and thus became untrue to her husband. Belot's romance, "Les Baigneuses de Trouville," speaks in favor of this assumption. Binet thinks that many marriages with singers are due to the fetich of their voices. He also calls attention to the interesting fact that among singing-birds the voice has the same sexual significance as odors among quadrupeds. The birds allure by their song, and the male that sings most beautifully flies at night to his charmed mate.

The pathological facts of mosochism and sudism show that mental peculiarities may also act as fetiches in a wider sense,

Thus the fact of idiosynemsies is explained, and the old saying, "De gustibus now est disputandam," retains its force.

II. PHYSIOLOGY.

Drains the time of the physiological processes in the reproductive glands, desires arise in the consciousness of the inflividual which have for their purpose the perpetuation of the species (sexual instinct).

Sexual desire during the years of sexual maturity is a physiological hw. The duration of the physiological processes in the sexual organs, as well as the strength of the sexual desire manifested, vary, both in indivolumes and in races. Have, climate, heredity, and social circumstances have a very decided influence upon it. The greater sensuality of southern races as compared with the sexual needs of those of the North is well known. Sexual development in the inhabitants of tropical curves takes place much earlier than in those of more northern regions. In women of northern countries ovulation, recognizable in the development of the hode and the commence of a periodical flow of blood from the genitals (mendrustion), mently begins about the thirteenth or afteenth year; in men pelierty, recognizable in the deepening of the voice, the appearance of hair on the face and the mous reneris, and the occasional occurrence of pollutions, etc., takes place about the liftcenth year. In the inhabitants of tropical countries, lowever, sexual development takes place several years earlier in women, sometimes as early as the eighth year.

It is worthy of semark that girls who live in cities develop about a year earlier than girls living in the country, and that the larger the town the earlier, ceteris purities, the development takes place.

Heredity, however, has no small influence on fibido and sexual power. Thus there are families in which, with great physical strength and longevity, great libido and virility are preserved until a great age, while in other families the vita sexualis develops late and is early extinguished.

In women the time of the activity of the reproductive glands is shorter than in men, in whom the sexual function may lest until a great age. Osulation ceases about thirty years after pulserty. This period of assention of activity of the ovaries is called the clunge of life (climacterium). This biological phase does not represent merely a countion of function and final atrophy of the reproductive organs, but also a transformation of the whole organism. In Middle Europe the sexual muturity of men begins about the eighteenth year, and their virility reaches its acme at forty. After that age it slowly declines.

The potentia generardi ceases usually at the age of sixty-two, but potentia coundi may be present even in old age. The existence of the nexual instinct is continuous during the time of sexual life, but it varies in intensity. Under physiological conditions it is never intermittent (periodical), as in animals. In men it manifests an organic variation of intensity in consonance with the collection and expenditure of sensu; in women the increase of sexual desire coincides with the process of evaluation, sail in such a way that libido sexualis is greater after the measural period.

(23)

Sexual instinct—as emotion, ides, and impulse—is a function of the percent cortex. Thus far no definite region of the cortex has been proved to be exclusively the sext of sexual sensations and impulses.

Owing to the close relations which exist between the sexual instinct and the offactory sense, it is to be presumed that the sexual and offactory centres he close together in the corotal cortex. The development of the sexual life has its beginning in the organic sensations which arise from the developing reproductive glands. These excite the attention of the individual. Readings and the experiences of every-day life (which, infortunately, to-day are too early and too frequently suggestive) conventhese notions into clear ideas. These become accontinued by organic senentions which are pleasurable. With this accontinuation of crotic ideas by lustful feelings, an impulse to induce these (sexual desire) is developed.

Thus there is established a mutual dependence between the ceretral cortex (as the place of origin of sensations and ideas) and the reproductive seguns. The latter, by reason of physiological processes (hyperteria, accretion of senses, ovulation), give rise to sexual ideas, images, and impulses.

The cerebral cortex, by means of appercrived or reproduced senseal ideas, reacts on the reproductive organs, inducing hypersenis, secretion of somen, erection, ejaculation. This results by means of centres for ensometer innervation and ejaculation, which are situated in the lumber portion of the cord and he close together. Both are reflex centres.

The crection-centre (Goltz, Eckhard) is an intermediate station placed between the brain and the genital apparatus. The nervous paths which connect it with the brain probably run through the pedinculi corolir and the peas. This centre may be excited by central (psychial and organic) stimuii, by direct irritation of the nerve-tract in the pedinculis cerebri, peas, or cervical postion of the cord, as well as by peripheral irritation of the sensory nerves (penis, clitoris, and sanexa). It is not directly subordinated to the will.

The excitation of this centre is conveyed to the corpora cavernous by means of nerves (nervi origentes—Eckhard) running in the first three second nerves.

The action of the nervi origentes, which renders erection possible,

A The offsetory control is presented by Ferrier C* Panetices of the Boain ") to be in the region of the spiral instinated. Exclorated C* United dis Riestonstress," (802), from securities in compensitive mealings, concludes that the affectory control has its end in Amount's both.

is an ishibitory one. They inhibit the ganglionic nervous mechanism in the corpora cavernosa upon the action of which the smooth muscle-fibers of the corpora cavernosa are dependent (Köniker and Könikussch). Under the influence of the action of the nervi origentes these fibres of the corpora cavernosa become relaxed and their spaces fill with blood. Simultaneously, as a result of the dilatation of the capillary net-work of the corpora cavernosa, pressure is exerted upon the veins of the penis and the return of blood is impeded. This effect is aided by contraction of the bulbo cavernosas and inchio inversors muscles, which are inserted by means of an aponourous on the dorsal surface of the penis.

The exection-centre is under the influence of both exciting and inhibitory innervation arising in the versieum. Ideas and sense-perceptions of sexual content have an exciting effect. Also, according to observations made on men that have been hung, it is evident that the erection-centre may be excited by excitation of the tract in the spinal cord. Observations on the insume and those suffering with excelved discase show that this is also possible as a result of organic irritation in the cerebral cortex (psycho-sexual centre?). Spinal discusses (tabes, especially asyelitis) affecting the lumbar portion of the cord, in their carlier stages, may directly excite the crection-centre.

Reflex excitation of the centre is possible and frequent in the following ways: by irritation of the (peripheral) sensory nerves of the genitals and surrounding parts by friction; by irritation of the urethra (genorrheen), of the rectum (hemorrhoids, expuris), of the bladder (distension with urine, especially in the morning, irritation of calculi); by distantion of the vesiculæ seminales with senson; by hypersemin of the genitals, occasioned by lying on the tack, and thus inducing pressure of the intestines upon the blood-vessels of the pelvis.

The erection-centre may also be excited by britation of the nervous gaugha which are so abundant in the prostatic tissue (prostatitis, introfaction of outheter, etc.).

The experiment of Goltz, according to whom, when (in dogs) the lumber portion of the oceal is severed, erection is more easily induced, shows that the crection-centre is also subject to inhibitory influences from the train.

In men the fact that the will and emotions (fear of unsuccessful coitus, surprise inter actum sexualem, etc.) may inhibit the occurrence of crection, and cause it, when present, to disappear, also indicates this.

The duration of erection is dependent upon the duration of its exriting causes (sensory atimals), the absence of inhibitory influences, the forevous energy of the centre, and the early or late occurrence of ejaculation (n. in/ro).

The central and highest portion of the sexual mechanism is the tenchral cortex. It is justifiable to presume that there is a definite region of the cortex (excelural centre) which gives rise to sexual feelings, ideas, and impulses, and is the place of origin of the psycho-sematic processes which we designate as sexual life, sexual instinct, and sexual desire. This centre is excitable to both central and peripheral stimuli.

Central stimuli, in the form of organic excitation, may be due to discusses of the cerebral certex. Physiologically they consist of psychical stimuli (memory and sensory perceptions).

Under physiological conditions these stimuli are essentially visual perceptions and memory-pictures (i.e., lastivious stories) and also tactile impressions (touch, pressure of the hand, kiss, etc.).

Within physiological limits auditory and elflattory perceptions certainly play but a very subordinate role. Under pathological conditions (v. én/ra) the latter have a very decided influence in inducing sexual excitement.

Among animals the influence of olificitory perceptions on the sexual sense is ministakable. Althous ("Beitrage zur Physiel, and Pathal, des Olifictorius." Archie für Paych., xii, II 1) declares that the sense of smell is important with reference to the reproduction of the species. He shows that animals of opposite sexes are drawn to each other by means of olifictory perceptions, and that almost all suimals, at the time of entiting cost a very strong odor from their genitals. An experiment by Schiff is confirmatory of this. He extirpated the olifictory nerves in puppies, and found that, as the animals grow, the male was mable to distinguish the female. On the other hand, an experiment by Mantogann ("Hygiene of Love"), who removed the eyes of rabbits and found that the defect constituted no obstacle to procreation, shows how important in animals the olifictory sense is for the vita sexualis.

It is also remarkable that many animals (musk-ox, civetest, beaver) possess glands on their sexual organs, which secrets materials having a very strong ofter.

Althous also shows that in mon there are certain relations existing between the offsectory and sexual senses. He mentions Cloquet (* Onjhrésiclogue, * Paris, 1826), who calls attention to the sensual picusure excited by the odors of flowers, and tells how Richelleu lived in an atmosphere louded with the heaviest perfemes, in order to excite his sexual functions.

Zippe (Wien. Med. Wockenschrift, 1879, Nr. 24), in connection with a case of kleptomania in an omniet, likewise establishes such relations, and cites Hibdebrard as authority, who in his popular physiology says:

"It cannot be doubted that the olfactory sense stands in remote connection with the sexual apparatus. Odoes of flowers often occasion pleasurable sensual feelings, and when one remembers the passage in the "Song of Solomon," And my hands dropped with myrrh and my fingers with assect-smelling myrrh upon the handles of the lock," one finds that it did not escape Solomon's observation. In the Orient the pleasant perfunsions esteemed for their relation to the sexual organs, and the wanter's apartments of the Sultan are filled with the perfunces of flowers."

Most, professor in Rostock (comp. Zippe), relates: "I barried from a sensual young persons that he had excited many a chaste girl exactly, and easily gained his end, by carrying his handkerchief in his axilla for a time, while denoting, and then wiping his partner's perspiring face with it."

The case of Henry III shows that contact with a person's perspiration may be the exciting cause of passionate love. At the betruthal feast of the King of Nevarre and Margaret of Valois, he accidentally dried his face with a garment of Maria of Cleves, which was moist with her perspiration. Although she was the bride of the Prince of Conds, Henry conceived immediately such a passionate love for her that he could not resist it, and made her, as history shows, very unhappy. An analogous instance is related of Henry IV, whose passion for the besutiful Gabriel is said to have originated at the instant when, at a ball, be wiped his brow with her handkerchief.

Professor Jüger, the "discoverer of the soul," refers to the same thing in his well-known book (2d ed., 1880, chap, xv, p. 113); for he regards the sweat as important in the production of sexual effects and as being especially seductive.

One learns from reading the work of Ploes ("Das Weils") that attempts to attract a person of the opposite sex by means of the perspiration may be discerned in many forms in popular psychology.

In reference to this, a custom which holds among the natives of the Philippine Islands when they become engaged, as reported by Jager, is remarkable. When it becomes necessary for the engaged pair to separate, they exchange articles of wearing-apparel, by means of which each becomes assured of faithfulness. These objects are carefully preserved, covered with kisses, and smelled.

The love of certain libertimes and sensual women for performent indicates a relation between the olfactory and sexual senses.

A case mentioned by Heschl (Wiener Zenschraft f. pract. Heilkandr, March 22, 1861) is remarkable, where the absence of both offictory lobes was necompanied by imperfectly developed genitals. It was the case of a man aged 45, in all respects well developed, with the exception of the testicles, which were not larger than beans and contained no seminal canals, and the laryna, which seemed to be of feminine dimensions. Every trace of effectory nerves was wanting, and the trigom officetoria and the furrow on the under surface of the anterior lobes were absent. The perforations of the ethnoid plate were sparingly present, and occupied by nerveless processes of the dura instead of by terres. In the nurcous membrane of the nose there was also an absence of nerves. Finally, the clearly-defined relation of the olfactory and sexual senses in mental discusses is worthy of notice, in that in the psychoses of both sexus dependent on masturbation, as well as in insurity due to discuss of the sexual organs of the female, or during the slimaeteric/ officetory ballocinations are expecially frequent, while in cases where a sexual cause is wanting they are very infrequent.

&lt;sup>3</sup> Comp. Laycock, who (" Nervous Diseases of Women," 1840) frond that is wessess the box for mark and similar performs was related to separal excitoment.

I am inclined to doubt that offsetory impressions in man, under normal conditions, as in animals, play an important rôle in the excitation of the sexual centre. On account of the importance of this consensus for the inderstanding of pathological cases, it is necessary here to theroughly consider the relations existing between the offsetory and sexual senses.

The sexual sphere of the covebral cortex may be excited, in the sense of an excitation of sexual concepts and impulses, by processes in the generative organs. This is possible as a result of all conditions which also excite the erection-centre by means of centripetal influence (stimulus resulting from distansion of the seminal vesicles; enlarged Grandan follows; any sensory stimulus, however produced, about the genitals; hypersemia and targescence of the genitals, especially of the creetile tissue of the corpus cavernosum of the penis and citoria, as a result of incurious, sedentary life; plethora abdominalis, high extensit temperature, warm beds, clothing; taking of cantharides, papers, and other spices).

Libido sexuniu may also be influced by stimulation of the glated region (castigation, whipping).<sup>5</sup>

This fact is not unimportant for the understanding of certain pathological manifestations. It sometimes happens that in boys the first excitation of the sexual instinct is caused by a spanking, and they are thus incited to masteristics. This should be remembered by those who have the care of children.

On account of the dangers to which this form of punishment of children gives rise, it would be better if purents, teachers, and nurse were to avoid it entirely.

Passive flagellation may excite sensuality, as is shown by the sects of flagellants, so widespread in the thirteenth and fifteenth centures. They were normstomed to whip themselves, partly as atomerent and partly to kill the flesh (in accordance with the principle of shoulty

I Also in the insents of postation.-Thank

*The following star, reported by Black, seems to be in appositing to this line. Undertonately nothing is said conversing the regard characteristics of the poses. In any event, it is correctly confirmatory of the relations estating between the offsetory and seems!

D., a medical strategy, was sented on a brack in a public park, reading a took (mpathology). Suddenly a visionit erection distorted him. By looked up and extend that a lady, redukent with perfuse, but taken a out upon the other and of the teach. It wall apprior the section to exhibit but the naveauches offsetory impresses made upon the promigated by the Church, i.e., the connecipation of the acui from aroundity).

Mephrasias, "De Explorant tria in re-modice," Lambou, 1765; Rollene, "The Retury of the Fingelizate," London, 1783.

These sects were at sest favored by the Uhurch; but, since sensuality was only excited the more by flagellation, and the fact became apparent in unpleasant occurrences, the Church was finally compelled to oppose it. The following facts from the lives of the two heroines of flagellation, Maria Magdalens of Pazzi and Elizabeth of Genton, clearly show the significance of flagellation as a sexual excitant. The former, a child of distinguished purents, was a Carmelite sum in Florence (about 1980), and, by her flagellations, and, still more, through the results of them, she became quite calciunted, and is mentioned in the Annals. It was her greatest delight to have the prioress bind her hands behind her and have her whipped on the naked loins in the presence of the assembled sisters.

But the whippings, continued from her earliest yearth, quite destroyed her nervous system, and perhaps no other heroine of flagellation lad so many hallocinations ("Entwickungen"). While being whipped her thoughts were of love. The inner fire threatened to consume her, and she frequently cried, "Enough! Fan no longer the flame that consumes me. This is not the death I long for; it comes with all too much pleasure and fielight." Thus it continued. But the spirit of impurity were the most sensual, inscivious funcies, and she was several times mur losing her clustity.

It was the same with Elimbeth of Goston. As a result of whipping she actually passed into a state of teschanalism madness. As a rule, she rested when, excited by musual fingellation, she believed herself united with her "ideal." This condition was so exquisitely pleasant to her that she would frequently ery out, "O love, O sternal love, O love, O you reastures! cry out with me, love, love!"

It is known, on the authority of Taxil (op. cit., p. 175), that rakes sometimes have themselves flageflated, or pricked until blood flows, just before the sexual act, in order to stimulate their diminished sexual power.

These facts find an interesting confirmation in the following experiences, taken from Pauliini's "Plagethum Salutis" (1st sit, 1698; reproduction, Stattgart, 1847):—

"There are some nations, viz., the Persans and Russians, where the women regard blows as a peculiar sign of love and favor. Strangely stough, the Russian women are never more pleased and delighted than when they receive hard blows from their bushneds, as John Barclay relates in a remarkable marrative. A German, named Jordan, went to Russia, and, pleased with the rountry, he settled there and took a Russian wife, whom he loved dearly and to whom he was always kind in everything. But ste always wore an expression of dissatisfaction, and went about with sighs and downcast eyes. The bushned saked the reason, for he could not understand what was wrong. "Aye," she said, "though you love me you do not show me any sign of it.' He embraced her rail begged to be told what he had carelessly and unconsciously done to tast her feelings, and to be forgiven, for he would never do it again. 'I was nothing,' was the answer, 'but what is emstormery in our country, the whip, the real sign of love.' Josean observed the custom and acconstrued himself to it, and then his write began to love him dearly. Similar stories are told by Peter Petrus, of Erlesmid, with the addition that the humbands, immediately after the wedding, among other indispensable household articles, provide themselves with whips."

On page 78 of this remarkable book, the author says further: "The celebrated Count of Mirindula, John Piens, relates of one of his intimate argunintances that he was an insutiable fellow, but so lary and incepable of love that he was practically impotent until he had been rengile handled. The more he tried to satisfy his desire, the heavier the blors be needed, and he could not attain his desire until he had been whinted until the blood came. For this purpose he had a suitable whip node. which was placed in vinegar the day before using it. He would give this to his companion and on landed knees begins not to spare him, but to strike blows with it, the heavier the better. The good count thought this singular man found the pleasure of love in this punishment. While in other respects he was not a bad man, he understood and hated his weakness. Coelius Rhodigin relates a similar story, as dees also the celebrated jurist, Andreas Timquell. In the time of the skillful physician, Otton Brunfelson, there lived in Munich, then the Capital of the Basarian Electorate, a debauchee who could never perform his [sexual] duties without a serere preparatory beating. Thomas Barthelin also knew a Venetian who had to be bestes and driven before he could have intercourse,-just as Capid himself moved reluctantly driven by his followers with sprays of hyscinth. A few years ago there was in Libeck a cheese. monger, living on Mill Street, who, on a complaint to the authorities of unfaithfulness, was ordered to leave the city. The prostitute with whom he had been went to the judges and begged in his behalf, telling how offficult all intercourse last become for him. He could do nothing until be had been mercilessly beaten. At first the fellow, from shame and to avoid diagrace, would not confess, but after exceed questioning he could not deny it. There is said to have been a man in the Netherlands who was similarly incapable, and could do nothing without blows. On the decree, of the authorities, however, he was not only removed from his position, but also properly punished. A credible friend, a physician in an inportant city of the kingdom, told me, on July 11th, last year, how a woman of had character had told a companion, who had been in the haspital a short time before, that she, with another woman of like character. had been sent to the woods by a man who followed them there, ret rollfor them, and then exposed his notes, communding them to belabor him well. This they did. It is easy to conclude what he then did with them.

Not only neu have been excited and infinmed to insciviousness, but also nonsen, that they too might experience greater intensity of pleasure. For this reason the Roman woman had herself whipped and beaten by the loperois. Thus Juvenal writes:—

> " Storties morenture, et illia Tangida non produst contina pepcido Lyde : Neo produst agili palmas praction Luperro."

In men, as well as in women, erection and organs, or even ejaculation, may be induced by irritation of various other regions of the skin and unious membrane. These "erogenous" zones in woman are, while she is a virgin, the clitoris, and, after deforation, the vagina and corvix utesi.

In woman the nipple particularly seems to possess this quality. Trilllatio hojos regionis plays an important part in the are cretica. In his "Typograpical Assatomy," 1865, Bd. i. p. 552, Hyrtl-cites Val. Hilds-handt, who observed a peculiar anomaly of the sexual instinct in a girl, which he called ascrimingeness. She had her mamme nocked by her lover, and finally, by gradually drawing on her nipples, she became able to suck them herself,—an act that gave her most intense pleasure. Hyrtl also calls attention to the fact that cows sometimes suck the milk from their own udders. I. Brunn (Zenty, f. Liberatur, etc., d. Hamburg, Correspondent, 1889, Nr. 21), in an interesting article on "Sensembry and Love of Kin," points out how realously the nursing mother gives herself to mining the labe, " for love of the weak, undeveloped, helpless being."

It is easy to assume that, by the side of the ethical motives, the fact that the sucking may be attended by feelings of physical pleasure plays a part. The remark of Brunn, which is correct is itself, but one-sided, that, according to Houzeau's experience, among the majority of animals it is only during the time of nursing that the relations between mother and offspeing are close, and thereafter indifferent, also speaks in favor of this assumption.

Bastian found the same thing (blunting of the feeling for the offspring after wouning) among savages.

Under pathological conditions, as is shown by Chamburd, among others, in his thesis for the doctorate, other portions of the body (in hysterical persons) about the mamma and genitals may attain the signifstance of "erogenous" somes.

In man, physiologically, the only "erogenous" zone is the glaus penis, and, perhaps, the skin of the external genitals.

Under pathological conditions the same may become an "erogenous" area. Thus small auto-maxturbation, which seems to be only too frequent, and passive pederasty would be explained. (Comp. Garnier, "Anomalies semelles," Paris, p. 516; F. Moll, "Contribute Sexual emphasimon," p. 163.)

The psycho-physiological process comprehended in the idea of sexual instinct is composed of (1) concepts awakened centrally or peripherally;

(2) the pleasurable feelings associated with them.

The longing for sexual satisfaction (libido sexualis) arises from them. This desire grows stronger constantly, in proportion as the ancitation of the cerebral sphere accentrates the feeling of pleasure by appropriate concepts and activity of the imagination; and the pleasurable sensations are increased to lustful feeling by excitation of the erecutor centre and the consequent hypersenia of the genitals (entrance of liquer prostations into the urethra, etc.).

If circumstances are favorable for the performance of the seami act satisfactorily, the constantly-increasing desire is complied with; If, her ever, conditions are unfavorable, liabilitary concepts occur, overcome the sexual longing, and prevent the sexual set.

To civilized man cultivation of a readiness with ideas which inhing sexual desire is necessary and distinctive. The moral freedom of the individual, and the decision whether, under certain circumstances, expenand even crime, be committed or not, depend, on the one hand, upon the strength of the instinctive concepts and the accompanying organic seasations; on the other, upon the power of the inhibitory concepts. Constitution and, especially, organic influences have a marked effect upon the instinctive impulses; education and entitivation of self-control layers decisive influence on the opposing concepts.

The exciting and inhibitory powers are variable quantities. Own indulgence in alcohol in this respect is very fatal, since it awakers and increases libido sexualis, while at the same time it reduces moniresistance.

THE ACT OF COMMERCENCE.

The essential condition for the man is sufficient erection. And (Arch. for Paych., viii, II. 2) calls attention to the fact that in axial excitement the crection centre is not alone influenced.—the nervous excitement is distributed to the entire vasomotor system of nerves. The proof of this is the turgescence of the organs in the sexual act, injection of the conjunctive, promisence of the eyes, distantion of the pupils, and cardiac pulpitation (resulting from puralysis of the vasomotor nerves at the heart, which arise from the cervical sympathetic, and the consequent dilutation of the cardiac arteries, and the increased stimulation of the cardiac ganglia induced by the consequent hypersonia of the earlier walls). The sexual act is accompanied by a pleasurable feeling, which, in the male, is conditioned by the passage of season through the dectar ejeculatoria to the methra, caused by sensory stimulation of the gentlat. The pleasurable sensation occurs earlier in the male than in the feasible grows rapidly in intensity until the moment of commencement of spec-lation, reaching its height in the instant of free emission, and disappears quickly post speculationers.

<sup>8</sup> Comp. Brubend, "Trulté de l'impulsemen et de la mitrifia." "Fara, 1676

In the female the pleasurable feeling securs later and comes on more slowly, and generally outlasts the set of ejaculation.

The distinctive event in coltus is spaculation. This function is dependent on a centre (genito-spinal), which Budge has shown to be situated at the level of the fourth lumbar vertebra. It is a redex centre. The stimulus that excites it is the ejection of sperms from the vesicals seminals into the pars membraneses urethrae, which follows reflexly from stimulation of the glans penis. As soon as the collection of semen, with everturerosing pleasurable sonsition, has reached a sufficient amount to be effectual as a stimulus of the ejeculation-centre, the centre arts. The reflex motor path lies in the fourth and fifth involve streets. The action consists of a convolute excitation of the bulbs-covernous muscle (unervated by the third and fourth seemal nerves), which forces the sense out-

In the female as well, at the height of sexual and pleasurable exeffement, a referr movement occurs. It is induced by stimulation of the sensory gential nerves, and consists of a peristaltic movement in the takes and atterns as far down as the portio vaginalis, which presses our the uncons-secretions of the tubes and aterus. Inhibition of the speculation centre is possible as a result of cortical influence (want of desire in coitus, smotions in general, influence of the will, in a measure).

Under normal conditions, with the completion of the sexual set, boids sexually and erection disappear, and the psychical and sexual excitement gives place to a comfortable feeling of lassitude.

IIL GENERAL PATHOLOGY.

(NEUHOLOGICAL AND PRECEDENGICAL)

Assonmators of the sexual functions proves to be especially frequent in civilized races. This fact is explained in part by the frequent abuse of the sexual organs, and in part by the circumstance that such functional anomalies are often the signs of an abnormal constitution of the central nervous system, which is, for the most part, hereditary ("functional signs of degeneration")

Since the generative organs stand in important functional connection with the entire nervous system, and especially with its psychical and somatic functions, it is easy to understand the frequency of general neuroses and psychoses arising in sexual (functional or organic) disturbances.

SCHERA OF THE SERVAL NEUROSES.

I. PERIPERAL!	Sensory.    Secretory.    Motor.	( a. Amethesia. b. Hypernethesia. c. Nessalgia. d. Aspernia. b. Polyspernia. a. Pollutions (spaces). b. Spermatorrison (paralysis).
IL SPINAL	1. Affections of the crection centre. 2. Affections of the spanilation centre.
III. CEREBRAL	1. Paradoxia. 2. Assesthesia. 3. Hyperaesthesia. 4. Parasthesia.

J. Literature: Parent Duchalesci, Prominentes dans in vite de Paris, 1837.—Rombaum, Ratistèrium, der Spphilis, Halle, 1839; also, Duc Lustenche im Alterthem, Rein, 1839.—Rescriet, La subtreite des position, Faris, 1848.—Carper, Elia, Norden, 1835.—Bartian, Der Mensch in der Grechteite.—Priedländer, Steinspeachiches Bonn.—Wassenster, Caramanaharian.—Schon, Deutsche Carman and Stronge, activitée, Bd. 1, Op. 9.—Turdien, Des attention und terrain, 7 cm., 1838.—Emmingham, Parthopaliel, pp. 6, 225, 180, 225.—Schole, Hamiltonic der Gentechtungheiten, p. 114.—Marc, Des Grecohtenheiten, iberus, überus, Marindhamh der Gentechtunkteiten, p. 114.—Marc, Des Grecohtenheiten, iberus, Mehr, p. 123.—V. Keafft, Lehrb der Psychiatrie, 4 Auf., j., 201; Leutsch ger. Psychopatred., 1 Aufl., p. 294; Archite f. Psychiatria, 12.—Morean, Des denses die ema prodeingen, Paris, 1994.—Kira, Alig. Zemate, f. Psychiatrie, acara. End in I.—Lembresco, Geschierbinisch u. Verberechten in Boon papensentigen Benishung (Geschierbinische Reitz, 1998.—Tarthemaky, Die konstituties Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reitz, 1998.—Tarthemaky, Die konstituties Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reitz, 1998.—Tarthemaky, Die konstituties, Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reitz, 1998.—Tarthemaky, Die konstituties, Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reschungen der Geschierbinische Reitz, 1998.—Tarthemaky, Die konstituties, Sexual Impören.

• Figs. Bitmann, Senito-Universe Neurons in the State (published by The E. & Davis Co., Publishephia), no discussion of peripheral neurons.

Co., Philadephias, for chemica of perspectal prefoun

IL SPINAL NEUROSES.

L. Affections of the Erection Centre.

- (a) Irrelation (pringism) arises reflexly from peripheral sensory irritants (e.g., generators); directly, from organic irritation of the nerretracts from the brain to the section centre (spinal disease in the lower cerrical and upper densil regions), or of the centre itself (certain poisons); or from psychical irritation. In the latter case satyrinsis exists, i.e., shnormal duration of crection, with libido sexualis. In simply reflex or direct organic irritation, libido sexualis may be wanting, and the pringism be accompanied by unpleasant feelings.
- (b) Paralysis from destruction of the centre or of the nerve-tracts (nersi origentes), in discusce of the spinal cord (paralytic impotence). A milder form is that of irasened excitability of the centre, resulting from neerstimulation (in sexual excesses, especially in oranism), or from alreadelle intoxication, abuse of broundes, etc. It may be necompassed by corebral amosthesia, and often with amosthesia of the external genitals, Cerebral hyperasthesia is here more frequent (increased libido sexualls, but). A peculiar form of diminished excitability is shown in those ones where the centre responds only to certain stimuli. Thus there are seen for whom sexual contact with their virtuous wives does not supply the necessary stimulus for the excitation of an erection, but in whom it occurs when the set is attempted with a postitute, or in the form of some manniural sexual set. As for as psychical sthmill are here concerned, they may be insolequate (v. infra, paraesthesia and perversion of sexual instinct).
- (e) Inhibition. The erection centre may become functionally incapable as a result of cerebral influence. This inhibitory influence is an emotion (diagnot, four of contagion), or an idea? of impotence. There are many men in the first condition who have an uncomparable leathing for their wives, or four of infection, or are suffering with perverse sexual festings. In the latter condition are neuropathic individuals (neurosthenics, hypochondrises), frequently weakened sexually (masturbators), who have reason, or think they have, to mistrust their sexual power. This idea nots as an inhibitory concept, and makes the act with the person concerned of the opposite sex temporarily or absolutely impossible.
- (d) Irritable acceives. In this condition there is abnormal impressional-filty of the centre, but accompanied by mped dimension of its energy. There may be functional disturbance of the centre back, or weakness of the innervation through the newsi erigentes; or there may be

An interesting enterple of few as insperative concepting of measurement content can enter an influence is related by Maguan (Ann. mid. psych., 1883); Stationt, agod St., strongly prelimped bereditarily, previously a master-takin, resetabily strongles with the sampler 15 as an impossible conception. As more as for allempts content the importance may harfly precise and makes the art impossible.

weakness of the inchlo-currencess muscle. Cases in which the erection is ineffectual, on account of abnormally early ejaculation, form a transition to the following anomalies:—

2. Affections of the Ejaculation Centre.

(a) Atnormally may circulation from absence of cerebral inhaltion, resulting from excessive psychical excitement or irritatio weakness of the centre. In this case, under certain circumstances, the simple conception of a hadrons situation is sufficient to set the centre in action (high degree of spinal normathenia, usually resulting from sexual along). A third possibility is hypermethesis of the arethra, by virtue of which, when the semen enters it, so immediate and excessive reflex action of the spinulation centre is induced. In such a case, simple proximity to the female genitals may be sufficient to induce ejaculation (sate pertur).

In case of hyperesthesis of the srethra as a cause, the spendation may be accompanied by painful, instead of pleasurable, sensitions. Usually, in cases where there is hyperesthesis of the arethra, there is, at the same time, irritable weakness of the centre. Both functional disturbances are important in the production of pollutio nimis and dinma.

The accompanying pleasurable feeling may be pathologically alsent. This occurs in defective men and women (amesthesia, aspermic), and, further, as a result of disease (neurasthesia, hysteria); or (in pretitutes) it follows overstimulation and the Munting thus induced. The intensity of the pleasurable feeling depends on the degree of psychical and motor excitement accompanying the sexual set. Under pathological conditions this may become so pronounced that the movements of columtake on the character of involuntary convulsive movements, and even pass into general convulsions.

(b) Absorbailly difficult ejeculation. It is occasioned by inexcite bility of the centre (absence of libble, paralysis of the centre organic, from disease of brain or spinal cord; functional, from sexual shares, marasmus, diabetes, morphinism), and, in this case, for the most part, in connection with muesthesia of the genitals and paralysis of the erection centre. Or it is the result of a besion of the refex are, or of peripheral uncerthesia (urethra), or of aspermin. The ejeculation occurs not at all, or tardily, in the course of the sexual act, or only afterward, in the form of a pollation.

III. CEBEBRAL NEUROSES.

- Paradoxia, i.e., sexual excitement occurring independently of the period of the physiological processes in the generative organs.
  - 2. Anarshasia (absence of sexual instinct). Here all organic impulses arising in the sexual organs, as well as all concepts, and visual, auditory, and olfactory sense-impressions, fail to excite the individual sexually. This is physiological in childhood and old age.

- 3. Hypercenthesia (increased desire, satyriasis). In this state there is an abnormally increased impressionability of the vita sexualis to organic, psychical, and sensory stimuli (abnormally intense libido, lustfulness, lusciviousness). The stimulus may be central (nymphomania, satyriasis) or peripheral, functional or organic.
- Pornethesia (perversion of the sexual instinct, i.e., excitability of the sexual functions to inadequate stimuli).

These cerebral anomalies fall within the domain of psychopathology. The spinal and peripheral anomalies may occur in combination with them, but these affect persons, as a rule, that are free from mental disease. They may occur in various combinations, and become the cause of sexual crimes. For this reason, they demand consideration in the following description. However, the cerebral anomalies claim the principal interest, since they very frequently lead to the commission of perverse and even criminal acts.

A. PARABORIA. SEXUAL INSTINCT MANUFACTING STREET INDEPENDENTIAL OF PRINCIPOLOGICAL PROCESSES.

L Sexual Institut Manifested in Childhood,

Every physician conversant with nervous affections and diseases incident to childhood is aware of the fact that manifestation of sexual instinct may occur in very young children. The observations of Ultzmann concerning masturbation in childhood, are worthy of attention in relation to it. It is necessary here to differentiate between the numerous cases where, as a result of phimosis, balanitis, or oxymis in rectum or vagina, young children have itching of the genitals, and experience a kind of pleasurable sensation from manipulations thus induced, and thus come to practice mustarbation; and those cases in which sexual ideas and impulses occur in the child as a result of cerebral processes without peripheral rauses. It is only in this latter class of cases that we have to do with the early manifestation of sexual instinct. In such cases it may always be regarded as an accompanying symptom of a neuropsychopathic constitutional condition. A case of Marc's ("Die Geisteskmakheiten," etc., von Ideler, i, p. 66) illustrates very well these conditions. The subject was a girl of eight years, of respectable family, who was devoid of all child-like and mend feelings, and had musturbated from her fourth year; at the same time she consorted with boys of the age of ten or twelve. She had thought of killing her parents, that she might become her own mistress and give herself up to pleasure with men. In these cases of early manifestation of libido the children come also to musturbate; and, since they are greatly predisposed constitutionally, they frequently sink into dementia, or become subjects of severe degenerative neuroses or psychoses.

*Longer-Villermay speaks of masterization in a girl of 3 or 4 years, and Mornan ("Abstraction du sons girololgue," I told., p. 200) of the same in one of I years. See, fasther, Mandaley. "Physiology and Pathology of Mind;" Hirschepung (Kopenhagen), Berlin, Min. Wochensche., 1800, No. 35; Loudenea, "The Officianal," Cases in, 19, and 31.

Lombroso (Archive de Psichiotria, Iv., p. 22) has collected a number of cases of children affected with very decided hereditary taint, which belong in this entegory. One was that of a girl who masturbated shane-leasly and almost constantly at the age of three. Another girl began at the age of eight, and continued to practice masturbation when married, and even during pregnancy. She was pregnant twelve times. Five of the children died early, four were hydrocephalic, and two boys began to masturbate,—one at the age of seven, the other at the age of four.

Zambaco (L'Escopéole, 1882, Nr. 1, 2) tells the disgusting story of two sisters affected with promature and perverse sound desire. The sides, R., masteriated at the age of seven, practiced lewdness with boys, stole, wherever she could, seduced her four-year-old sister into masteriation, and at the age of ten was given up to the practice of the most revolting sizes. Even forcess condens ad obtavidess had no effect in overcoming the practice, and she masteriated with the cussook of a priest while he was exhorting her to reformation.

2. Rearrakeving of Serval Instinct in Old Age.

There are infrequent cases in which the sexual instinct persists until a great age. "Senectus non quidem annis sed viribus magis restimatur" (Zittmann). Oesterlen (Maschka, Handb., iii, p. 18) mentions the case of a man aged 83, who was sentenced to three years' imprisonment by a Wurtemberg court on account of sexual misdemeaners. Unfortunately nothing is said of the sature of the crime or of the mental condition of the criminal.

*Comp. Elen, Schiecht f. Papels ; Sd. varia. Legrand du Saulie, Annal Capatens, Oct.

The manifestation of sexual instinct in old age is not in itself pathological; but presumption of pathological conditions must necessarily be entertained when the individual is decrepit and his sexual life has already long become extinct; and when the impulse, in a man whose sexual needs were in his early life, perhaps, not very marked, manifests itself with greater strength, and strives for even perverse satisfaction in a shameless and impulsive manner. In such cases there is at once suggested a presumption of pathological conditions. Medical science recognizes the fact that such an impulse depends upon the merbid alterations of the brain which lead to senile dementia. This abnormal manifestation of sexual life may be the precursor of senile dementia, and make its appearance even long before there are any well-defined manifestations of intellectual weakness. The attentive and experienced observer will always be able to detect in this prodromal stage an alteration of character in peiss, and a deterioration of the moral sense accompanying the peculiar sexual manifestation.

The libide of those passing into senile dementia is at first expressed in laseivious speech and gesture. The next objects of the attempts of these senile subjects of brain strophy and psychical degeneration are children. This sad and dangerous fact is explained by the better opportunity they have of falling in with children, but more especially by a feeling of imperfect sexual power. Defective sexual power and greatly diminished moral sense explain the additional fact of the perversity of the

The translator has backy seen a case of this kind that illustrates the lack of case taken by our criminal counts. A very infirm true, aged 50 to 60, under faceting execustrates, made an unsercovered except assent on a piri aged about 18. At his trial he made full confusion, and explained his set as due to ordinary statistics. He was the father of a family and litting with his sets, and up to that lime blassions occurily. He was sentenced to five years of hard later! He was inexpable of almost the lightest work. Convention with him while in juil showed at once that he was well observed in scales formed in Legal Question concerning his mental constition was not mixed,—because he confined, probably i sexual acts of these aged men. They are the equivalents of the impossible physiological act.

The annals of legal medicine distinguish, as such, exhibition of the genitals, lustful handling of the genitals of children, inducing them to perform manustupration of the seducer, and performing masturbation or flagellation on the victim.

In this stage the intellect may still be sufficiently intact to allow avoidance of publicity and discovery, while the moral sense is too far gone to allow consideration of the moral significance of the act and resistance to the impulse. With the progress of dementia, these acts are more and more shamelessly committed. Then care on account of defective sexual power disappears, and adults also become the objects of the senile passion; but the defective sexual power necessitates equivalents for cottus. Not infrequently sodomy results, and, as Turnowsky (op. cit., p. 77) points out, in the sexual act performed with geese, chickens, etc., the sight of the dying animal and its death-struggles at the time of coitus afford complete satisfaction. The perverse sexual acts with adults are quite as horrible, and may be explained psychologically in the same way.

Case 49, in the author's "Text-Book of Legal Psychopathology," second ed., p. 161, demonstrates how enormously increased sexual lust may be during the course of sende dementia. Quam senex libidinosus germanam suam filiam semulations motus necaret et adspectu pectoris sciosi puella moribandas delectasetur.

Erotic delirium and states of satyriasis may occur, in the course of the malady, with or without maniacal episodes, as the following case shows:—

Case I. J. Rend always given to indulgence in sensuality and several picesures, but always with regard for decorum, has shown, since his severally eight year, a progressive less of intelligence and increasing perversion of his moral sense. Previously bright and outwardly noval, be now wested his property in reservines with prostitutes, frequented brothels only, asked every woman on the street to marry him or allow coltus, and thus became so publicly obnexious that it was necessary to place him in an asylim. There the sexual excitement increased to a veritable satyrisis, which lasted until he died. He manurbated continuously, even before others; took delight only in obscene ideas; thought the men about him were women, and followed them with indecent proposals (Legrand du Saulle, "La Folis," p. 523).

<sup>5</sup> Corn, ride Lawlgur . "Les enhibitionistes," Unue motione, 1977, May let.

I Legrand du Saulle, La filie devant les netamann, p. 500.

*Kiro, Maschin's Hamito of ger. Mod., pp. 312, 304; Alig. Zeltschrift f. Papchistric, Bd. storic, p. 509;

Moreover, women previously miral, when affected with senile dementia, may manifest similar conditions of great sexual excitement (nymphomania, furor sterimus).

It may be seen from a reading of Schopenhauer, that, as a result of senile dementia, the abnormally excited and perverse instinct may be directed exclusively to persons of the same sex (v. infes). The manner of the satisfaction is here passive pederasty, or, as I ascertained in the following case, mutual masturbation:—

Case 2. Mr. X., aged 80, of high social position, from a family having bereditary taint. He was always very sensual and a cycle, of uncontrollable temper, and, according to his own confession, as a young man, preferred masturbation to coitus. However, he never showed signs of contrary sexual instinct, and kept mistresses, raising a shild by one. At the age of forty-eight he married, out of inclination, and begat six children, and never gave his wife cause for complaint. I could obtain but an incomplete history of his family. It was certain that his brother was suspected of love for men, and that a nephew became became as a result of excessive masturbation.

The patient, always peculiar and quick-benquered, for years has been growing more extreme in obseracter. He has become exceedingly suspicious, and slight opposition to his wishes induces attacks of anger which may become actual raving, and in which he may raise his hand against his wife. For a year there have been unmistakable signs of intipient sentle dementic. The patient has become forgetful, localizes past events incorrectly, and has false ideas of time. For fourteen months it has been noticed that he manifests affection for certain male servants, especially for a gardener's boy. Otherwise rude and overbearing to servants, he surfaits his favorite with favors and precents, and commundation family and his hourse officials to treat the loy with the greatest respect. The aged patient awaits the hour of rendezvous in true sexual excitement. He sends his family away, that he may be with his favorite unliaturbed, and remains shut up with him for hours; and when the does are opesed again, he is found lying on the bed exhausted. Besides this object of his passion, the patient had intercourse spisodically with other servants. It is certain that he entired them, asked them for kisses, exhibited himself, allowed manipulation ad genitalia, and practiced mutual maximisation. By these practices also late demoralization was brought about. The family was poweriess; for any opposition caused violent outbranks of anger and even threats against his relatives. The patient was completely without appreciation of his perverse sexual acts; and therefore the only course left to the affected family was to remove all numberity from his hands and place him is an asylum. No crotic inclination toward the opposite sex was observed, though the patient occupied a sleeping-apartment with his wife. With reference to the perverse semislity and the defective moral sense of this unfortunate man, it is worthy of note that he questioned the servants of his daughter-in-law as to whether she had a lover.

* Die Welt als With und Verstellung, 1859, B. H, p. 40t et aq.

R. ANASTHESIA SEXUALIS (ADDESCR OF SEXUAL PRELING).

1. As a Congenital Anomaly.

Only those cases can be regarded as unquestionable examples of absence of sexual instinct dependent on cerebral causes, in which, in spite of generative organs normally developed and the performance of their functions (secretion of semen, menstrustion), the corresponding emotions of sexual life are absolutely wanting. These functionally sexless individuals are seldom seen, and are, indeed, always persons having degenerative defects, and in whom other functional cerebral disturbances, states of psychical degeneration, and even anatomical signs of degeneration, are observed. Legrand du Saulle describes a classical case that falls under this head (Anaolis médico-psychol., May, 1876).

Case 3. D., aged 23, had a mother who suffered with insmity of persecution. The mother's father also suffered with persecutory insmity, and committed suicide. Her mother was insure, and this woman's mother because insure in the purposal state. Three of her mother's children field in bubyhood, and those that lived longer had an abnormal character. As early as his thirteenth year, D. was troubled with the thought of becoming insure. At fourteen he attempted suicide: Later, vagabunday, and, as a soldier, repeated insubsedication and crazy pranks. Bis intelligence was very limited; no sign of degeneration, genitals normal. At screeneen or eighteen he had emissions of season, had never musturbated or had sexual feeling, and never had sought intercourse with women.

Case 4. P., aged 34, common laborer, was received at my clinic in the beginning of November on account of spartic spinal paralysis. He declares to comes of a healthy family. A stutterer from his youth, Crunium microcophalic (cf. 53 cm.). Patient somewhat imbesile. He was never sociable, never had a sexual emotion. The sight of a woman never. had mything enticing for him. He never had a desire to musturbate. Rections frequent, but only on waking in the storning with a full bladder. and without a trace of sexual feeling. Pollutions very infrequent,-about once a year, in sleep, and usually while dreaming that he is concerned with a female. These dreams, however, as his dreams in general, are not markedly gratic. He says the act of pollution is not accompanied by any pleasurable sensation. Patient does not feel this absence of sexual sensations. He gives the assumance that his brother, aged 34, is in exactly the same sexual condition as himself, and he makes it seem probable that a sister, aged 21, is in a similar state. A younger brother, he says, is normal sexually. The examination of his genitals reveals nothing abnormal besides phinosis.

Hammond ("Sexual Impotence"), even with his wide experience, reports only the following three cases of amesthesia sexualis:—

Case 5. Mr. W., aged 53; strong, healthy, with normal genitals. He had rever experienced libido, and had eatily sought to awaken his defective sexual instinct by means of obscene stories and intercourse with possitiates. On the occasion of such attempts he experienced only disgust, with even a feeling of nancea, and became norvously and mentally exhausted. Only once, when he forced the situation, did he have a transitory erection. W. had never masturbated, and had had pollutions about once every two mouths from his seventeenth year. Important interests demanded that he marry. He had no horror feminer, and longed for a home and a wife, but felt that he was inespatic of the sexual act. He lied, answeried, in the American civil war.

Case 6. X., aged 27; genitals normal; never felt libide. Mechanical or thermic atlimili easily induced erection, but instead of libide sexualis there was regularly a desire for alcoholic instalgence. Such excesses also induced erections, and he then sometimes musturbated. He had a dissistingtion for women and a leathing of coltus. If, with an erection, he made an attempt at coltus, it disappeared at once. Death in count during as attack of cerebral hyperaguia.

Case 7. Mrs. O., normally developed, healthy, meastrusted regularly; aged 35, fifteen years married. She never experienced libido, and never had any crotic excitement in sexual intercourse with her husband. She was not averse to coltus, and sometimes seemed to experience pleasure in it, but she never land a wish for repetition of columnitation.

In connection with such pure cases of ansesthesia there should be considered other cases in which the mental side of the vita sexualis is a blank leaf in the life of the individual, but where elementary sexual sensations manifest themselves at least in masturbation (comp. the transitional Case 6). According to Magnan's ingenious classification, which, however, is not strictly correct and somewhat too dogmatic, in such cases the sexual life is so limited as to be designated spinal. Possibly in some such cases there exists virtually a mental side of the rita sexualis, but it is very weak, and undermined by masturbation before it attains development. These represent the transitional cases from the congenital to the acquired (psychical) anaesthesia sexualis. This danger threatens many masturbators of vicious constitution. It is psychologically interesting that when the sexual element is early vitiated, then an ethical defect is manifesteid.

The two following cases, previously published by me in 'the Archie für Psychiatrie, vii, are given here as illustrations worthy of consideration:—

Case 8. F. J., aged 19, student; mother was nervous, sister epiloptic. At the age of four, neute brain affection, lasting two weeks. As a child he was not affectionate, and was cold toward his parents; as a student be was peculiar, retiring, preoccupied with self, and given to much reading. Well endowed mentally. Masterbetion from lifteenth year. Eccentric ofter puberty, with continual alternation between religious cuthusiasm and unterialism, now studying theology, now untural sciences. At the university his fellow-students took him for a fool. He read Jean Paul almost exclusively, and wasted his time. Absolute absence of sexual feeling toward the opposite sex. Once he inhalped in intercourse, experienced no sexual feeling in the art, found coitus absurd, and did not repeat it. Without any emotional cause whatever, he often had a thought of suicide. He made it the subject of a philosophical dissertation, in which he contended that it was, like masterbation, a justiful to not. After repeated experiments, which he made on himself with various poisons, he attempted suicide with fifty-seven grains of opium; but he was saved, and sent to an savium.

Patient is destitute of moral and social feelings. His writings disciose incredible frivolity and vulgarity. His knowledge is of a wide range, but his logic is peculiarly distorted. There is no trace of anoticeality. He treats everything (even the sublime) with incomparable cyalciem and fromy. He pleads for the justification of snicide with false philosophical premises and conclusions, and, as one would speak of the most indifferent affeir, he declares that he intends to accomplish it. He regrets that his peaking has been taken from him. If he had it he would open his veins as Sencea did,—in the bath. A short time before a friend had given him, instead of a poison as he supposed, a cathartic. Instead of having been a means to send him to the palier world, it had sent him to the mater-closet. Only the Great Operator could continue his foolish and fatal idea by removing too senses, etc.

The patient has a large, rhombic, distorted skull, the loft half of the flowhead being flatter than the right. The occiput is very straight. Earn far back, widely projecting, and the external meature forms a narrow allt. Genitals very lon; testicles assumily soft and small.

Now and then the patient suffers with oncommonnia. He is compelled to think of the most useless problems and give up to an interminable distressing and worrying thought; and is so fatigued after it that he is no longer capable of any rational thought. After some months the patient was sent home unimproved. There he spent his time in reading and frivolities, and busied himself with the thought of founding a new Christianity, because Christ had been subject to grand delineous and had dereived the world with wonders (I). After remaining at home some years the endden occurrence of a manifest outbreak brought him again to the asylam. He presented a mixture of primordial delirium of percecution (deril, anti-christ, percention, polecuing, percentory voices) and debusions of grandeur (Christ, redemption of the world), with impulsive, incoherent actions. After five months there was a remission of this intercurrent acute mental disease, and the patient returned to the lovel of his original intellectual pseudanty and moral defect.

Case 9. E., aged 36, journeymon-pointer, was arrested while trying to cut off the scrotum of a boy he had cought in the woods. He gave as a metive for this set that he wished to cut into it in order that the world should not multiply. Often in his youth, with like purposs, he had cut into his own genitals.

It is impossible to learn anything of his ancestry. From his childhood he was mentally abnormal, violent, never lively, very irritable, irracible, selfish, and weak-minded. He hated women, loved solimite, and read much. He sometimes laughed to himself and did stily things. Of late years his hatred of women had increased, especially of those that were pregnant, they being responsible for the misery of the world. He also hated children, and cursed his father. He entertained communisticideas, and herated the rich and the ministry, and God, who had allowed him to come into the world so poor. He declared that it would be better to eastrate all children than to allow others to come into the world that could only be fated to endure poverty and misery. He had always had the intention, from his lifteenth year, to restrate himself, in order to have no part in increasing unhappiness and adding to the number of men. He hated the female sex because it was a means of procreation. Only twice in his life had be allowed women to practice manustrapration on him, and, with the exception of this, he had never had anything to do with them. Occasionally he had sexual desire, but never for a natural satisfaction of it. When nature did not help him, he occasionally helped himself by arount of maxturbation.

He is a powerful, muscular man. The formation of the genitals persents no abnormality. On the scrotum and penis are numerous sears, which resulted from his attempts at self-emisculation, but which he asserts, were not curried out on account of pain. Genn valgum of right limb. No evidence of omnism could be discovered. He is mostly, defaut, irritable. Social feelings are absolutely foreign to him. With the exception of imperfect sleep and frequent headashes, there are no functional disturbances.

From cases of this kind, depending on cerebral causes, there must be distinguished others where the absence of function arises from an absence or malformation of the generative organs, as in certain hermaphrodites, idiots, and cretius. A case belonging here is found in Muschka's hand-book.

Case 10. Complainant plends for divorce on account of impotence of her husband, who has never had intercourse with her. She is thirtyone years old, and a virgin. The husband is somewhat weak mentally, physically strong; the genitals well developed. He derians that he has never had a complete erection or a flow of semen, and says that he is totally indifferent about intercourse with women.

Ultzmann's' observations show that ancesthesia sexualis is not caused by aspermia simply. He shows that even in congenital aspermin the vita sexualis and sexual power may be entirely satisfying; an additional proof that defective libide of origins is to be sought for in cerebral conditions.

The nature frigidos of Zacchias are examples of a milder form of aniesthesia. They are met more frequently among women than among men. The characteristic signs of this anomaly are: slight inclination to sexual intercourse, or pronounced disinclination to coitus without sexual equivalent, and failure of corresponding psychical, pleasurable excitation during enitus, which is indulged in simply from sense of duty. I have often had occasion to hear complaints from husbands about this. In such cases the wives have always proved to be neuropathic ab origins. Some were at the same time hysterical.

<sup>* *</sup> Union minution Statistics," Whoser mod. Press, 2078, No. 1. * Taker Puberial generated at correct, "Whoser Kanik, 1985, Heft 1. S. 5. Translated under the title of Graits Crimby Neurosca, etc. The F. A. Davis Company, Philadelphia.

2. Acquired Austhoria.

Acquired diminution of sexual instinct, extending through all degrees to extinction, may depend on various causes. These may be organic and functional, psychical and somatic, central and peripheral. The diminution of libido, as age advances, and its temporary disappearance after the sexual act, are physiological. The variations with reference to the duration of the sexual instinct are dependent upon individual factors. Education and manner of life have a great influence upon the intensity of the vita sexualis. Intense mental activity (hard study), physical exertion, emotional depression, and sexual continence decidedly diminish sexual inclination. Continence at first induces increase, but sooner or later, according to constitutional conditions, the activity of the generative organs decreases, and with it libido. At all events, in a person sexually mature, a close etemection exists between the activity of the generative glands and the degree of libido. That this relation is not determinate is shown by the cases of sensual women, who, after the climacterium, continue to have sexual intercourse, and may manifest states of sexual excitement (cerebral). Also in cumuchs it is seen that libido may long outlast the production of ACCRECATION.

On the other hand, however, experience teaches that libido is essentially conditioned by the function of the generative glands, and that the facts mentioned are exceptional manifestations. As peripheral causes of diminution or extinction of libido, may be mentioned castration, degeneration of the sexual glands, manasmus, sexual excesses in the form of coitus and masturbation, and alcoholism [cocainism]. In the same way, the disappearance of libido in general disturbances of nutrition (diabetes, morphinism, etc.) may be explained. Finally, the atrophy of the testicles should be remembered, which has sometimes been observed to follow focal lesions of the brain (cerebellum).

A diminution of the vita sexualis, from degeneration of the tracts of the cord and genito-spinal centre, occurs in discusses of the spinal cord and brain. A central interference with the sexual instinct may be organically induced by cortical discuss (dementia paralytica in its advanced stages); functionally, by hysteria (central amesthesia?) and emotional insanity (melancholia, hypochondria).

C. Hypermeterska (Absormatic Increased Sexual Desire).

Pathology has no easy task, in the single case, when it has to decide whether the impulse to sexual satisfaction has reached a pathological degree. Emminghaus ("Psychopathologie," p.
225) declares that the immediate re-awakening of desire after satisfaction, with its occupation of the entire attention, and no less the excitation of libido by the sight of persons and things which in themselves should have but an indifferent sexual effect, are decidedly abnormal. In general, sexual instinct and its corresponding needs are in proportion to physical strength and age. Sexual desire rapidly increases after puberty, until it reaches a marked degree; is strongest from the twentieth to the fortieth year, and then slowly decreases. Married life seems to preserve and control the instinct. Sexual intercourse with many persons increases the desire.

Since woman has less sexual need than man, a predominating sexual desire in her arouses a suspicion of its pathological significance; and the more, when this finds expression in desire for adornment, coquetry, or male society, which, passing beyond the limits set by good breeding and manners, becomes quite noticeable.

The constitution, in both sexes, is of the greatest significance. An abnormally strong sexual instinct is frequently accompanied by a neuropathic constitution; and such individuals pass a great part of their lives heavily burdened with the weight of this constitutional anomaly of their sexual life. The power of the sexual impulse in such cases may at times rise to the importance of an organic necessity, and really endanger the freedom of the will. The want of satisfaction of this impulsive desire may, under such conditions, induce a condition allied to actual rutting, or a psychical condition, accompanied by emotions of fear, in which the individual gives up to the impulse, and responsibility becomes doubtful. If the individual does not give up to his powerful impulse, he is in danger, by reason of his enforced abstinence, of ruining his nervous system by inducing a neurasthenia, or seriously increasing such a con-dition if it be already present. In normally constituted individuals, too, the sexual instinct is an inconstant quantity. Aside from the temporary indifference following satisfaction, and the diminution of sexual desire in long-continued contimence after a certain reactionary stage of sexual desire is overcome, the manner of life has a great influence. Those living in large cities, who are constantly remanded of sexual things and incited to sexual enjoyment, certainly have more sexual desire than those living in the country. A dissipated, luxurious, sedentary manner of life, preponderance of animal ford, and the consumption of spirits, spices, etc., have a stimuslating influence on the sexual life. In woman the sexual inclination is post-menstrually increased. At this time, in neuropathic women, the excitement may reach a pathological degree.

The great libido of consumptives is remarkable. Hofmann tells of a consumptive peasant who satisfied his wife sexually on the evening before his death.

The sexual acts are coitus (eventually rape) and, faute de nieuz, masturbation; and, with defective moral sense, pederasty or bestiality. If sexual power is diminished or extinet, with excessive sexual desire, all manner of perversity of sexual acts becomes possible.

Excessive libido may be peripherally or centrally induced. The former manner of origin is the more infrequent. Pruritus and exzems of the genitals may cause it; and likewise certain substances, like cauthorides, which powerfully stimulate sexual desire. Not infrequently, in women at the climacteric, sexual excitement occurs, occasioned by pruritus; and also in eases where there is neuropathic taint. Magnan (Assades médico-psychol., 1885, p. 157) reports the case of a lady who was afflicted mornings with attacks of frightful crethismus genitalis, and the case of a man, aged 55, who was tormented at night by unbearable priapism. In each case there was a neurosis.

The central origin of sexual excitement is of frequent occurrence in persons having neurotic taint or hysteria, and in conditions of psychical exaliation. Here, where the cortex and the psycho-sexual centre are in a condition of hyperesthesin (abnormal excitability of the imagination, increased case of association), not only visual and tactile impressions, but also anditory and olfactory sensations, may be sufficient to call up lascivious concepts.

Magnan (op. cit.) reports the case of a young woman who had an increasing sexual desire from pulserty, and satisfied it by measurisation. Gradually she grew to become sexually excited at the sight of any man pleasing to her; and, since she was unable to control horself, she would sometimes shut herself up in a room until the storm had passed. At last she gave herself up to men of her choice, that she might get rest from her tormenting desire; but neither coitus nor masturbation brought relief, and she went to an acquire.

The case of a mother of five children is added, who, in despair about her incertirate sexual impulse, attempted suicide, and then sought as asylum. There her condition improved, but she never trusted herself to leave it.

There are several illustrative cases in men and women in the author's article, "On Certain Anomalies of Sexual Instinct," Cases 6 and 7 (Archiv für Psychiatric, vii, 2); Cases 3 and 5 are given here.

*In individuals in whom intense extend hypermethes is associated with acquired combile weakness of the account apparatus, it is possible that simply at the sight of a pressing female figure, without peripheral critication of the generals, not only the pochasion of eventue, but also that of speculation, may be rectifed to action from the psycho-small compos. For such individuals, all that to recovery to induce a space, or even operature, is to imagine the macrony in a second estimation with a female that also opposite them in relievy coupl or draw approxime. However, if or ed., p. 80) describes moved cases to this hard that came to him to treatment for importance that followed; and be mentione that these individuals used the term " ideal cotton." for the next Ty, Moli, of Berlie, told us of a simple case; and so this instance use according to the storage of a simple case; and so this instance use same designation was shown for the act.

Case 11. On the afternoon of July 7, 1874, Clemens, engineer, being on his way, on business, from Trieste to Vienna, left the train at the town of Bruck, and, passing through the town to the neighboring village of St. Ruprecht, attempted a rape on an old woman, aged 70, wheen he found sless in a house. He was seized by the neighbors and arrested by the local police. At his hearing he declared that he had tried to find the pound, in order to satisfy his sexual desire with a bitch. He said that he ofter suffered with such sexual excitement. He did not deer his act, but excused it as the result of disease. The land, the motion of the cars, and anxiety about his family, to which he wished to go, had confused hier and made him ill. Shame and nemone were not shown. His condoes was open, his timen gay; eyes red and bright, head bot, forgue coated; rules full, soft, leating over 100; fagers somewhat tremulous. The statemusts of the necessed were precise, but burried; his glance uncertain, and with an annishkalfo expression of lastiviousness. To the medical expert. supposed to examine him, he gave the impression of one sufering with discuse, as if he were in the beginning of alsoholic insanity.

C. is forty-five years old, married, father of one child. He does not know what discuss his purents or other members of his family have had, In childhood he was weak and neuropathic. At the age of five his head was injured by a blow with a box. A scar one-half cm, broad by one cm. long, situated on the right parietal and frontal bones, dates from that injury. The bone is here somewhat depressed. The overlying skin is united to the bone. Pressure at this point causes pain, which radiates along the lower branch of the trigeminus. This spot is also frequently spontaneously painful. In his youth he had frequent attacks of " fainting": before pulserty, pnearoosis, rhoumstirm, and intestinal catarra. a certain superior. Whenever he saw this man he had a peculiar feeling in his heart; kissed the ground he walked on. At ten he fell in love with a certain deputy. Later he had an enthusiasm for men, though it was entirely platonic. He began to musturbate at the age of fourteen; first interrestrate at seventeen. Then the earlier monifestations of contrary sernal feeling disappeared entirely. At that time he passed through a peculiar neuto perchapathic condition, which he described as a kind of chircovance. From afteen, hamorrhoids, with symptoms of picthoen abdominatis. When he had profuse immerrhoidal incourringe, which becurred usually every three or four weeks, he was better. At other times he was constantly in a condition of painful sexual excitament, which he satisfied partly by means of onanism and partly by coitus. Every woman he mot excited him; even when he was among female relatives he was impelled to make indecent proposals. Sometimes it was possible for him to master his steam; sometimes he was driven to indecent acts. If, after these, he was kicked out-of-doors, it somed perfectly right to him ; for he thought that we needed such correction and support against bispowerful impulse, which was a burden to him. No periodicity in this sexual excitement was recommended.

Until 1861 he committed excesses in venery and was several times infected with genorehors and chancres. In 1861, marriage. He was sexually satisfied, but become a fourden to his wife on account of his great scannality. In 1864 he passed through an attack of munin in the hospital at Fiame, and in the same year he again fell ill, and was taken to the insane asylum at Yhbs, where he remained until 1867. There he suffered with recurrent mania accompanied by great sexual excitement. He says that intestinal entarch and anxiety were the cause of his illness at that lime.

Thereafter he was well, but he suffered much on account of his excessive sexual desire. If he were absent from his wife but a short time, the impulse became so powerful that man or animal was indifferent to him for the satisfaction of his last. In summer these impulses were much stronger, and were always accompanied by addominal plethors. Some thing that he remembered in medical reading, made him think that in his case the gauglionic system was more powerful than the cerebral. In October, 1873, on account of husiness, he had to leave his wife. From that time until Easter, with the exception of occasional masterbation there was no sexual indulgence. After that he made use of women and hitches. From the middle of June until July 7, he had no opportunity for sexual includence. He felt nervously excited, relaxed, and as if he were going crazy. Of late he had slept budly. A longing for his wile, who lived in Vienna, drave him to leave his business. He obtained burn of absence. The heat and the noise of the train confused him, and he could no longer hold out against his sexual excitement and the pressure of blood in his abdomen. Everything elanced before his eyes. He left the car at Bruck, and was absolutely confused, not knowing where he went; and for a moment the thought came to him to throw himself in the water; all was like a mist before his eyes. Then he saw a woman, expected his genitals, and tried to embrace her. She cried for help, and time he was arrested.

After the attempt it suddenly became clear to him what he had done. He openly confessed his crime, which he remembered in all its details, but which seemed to him to be something abnormal. He could not help it. For some days after this, C. suffered with hardeds and congestions, and was now and then excited and restless, and dept tailly. His mental functions are undisturbed, but he is, nevertheless, a semponitally possible man, with a character weak and devoid of energy. The facial expression has something lascivious and pseudiar about in. He suffers with hormorphoids. The genitals present nothing abnormal. The crimium is narrow and retreating at the forebead. Body large on well nourished. With the exception of diarrhous, there is no disturbance of the vegetative functions.

Case 12. Mrs. E., aged 47. Uncle on father's side was insone; father was sanguine, and given to excess in emery. Patient's brother died of an acute cerebral affection. Patient from childhood has been noryous, eccentric, and rementic, and while little more than a child manifosted excessive sexual desire, and at ten began sexual indulgence. At sinctors, marriage. Unhappy married life; her husband, who was normal, did not satisfy her, and until recent years she constantly had other friends besides her husband. She was well aware of the immorality of her life, but felt her powerlessness against her insatiable desire, which she sought to keep, at least outwardly, a secret. Later she thought that she had suffered with a "mania for men." Patient has borne six children. Six years ago she was thrown from a wagon and received a severe-cerebral concussion. Following this there was melancholia, with definious of persecution, which sent her to the asylum. She is approaching the climarterium, and of late the meases have been profitse and too frequest. Since this period she is pleased to note that the previously powerful sexual impulse has declined. Proper behavior, Slight degree of descensor uteri and prolapsus ani.

Hyperæsthesia sexualis may be continuously present with exacerbations, or it may be intermittent or periodic. In the latter case it is a cerebral neurosis per se (vide "Special Pathology"), or an accompanying symptom of a condition of general psychical excitement (mania; episodically in dementia paralytica, dementia sentilis, etc.).

Lentz has published a remarkable case of intermittent satyriasis (Bulletin de la société de méd, légule de Belgique, Nr. 21):—

Case 13. For three years the generally respected farmer D., married, aged 35, has manifested states of sexual excitement, with increasing frequency and acceptity, which, during the past year, have become true paroxysms of satyrinsis. It was impossible to discover hereditary or other organic cause. D. was compelled, at times when his sexual excitement was excessive, to perform the sexual act from ten to follow times in twenty-four hours, without deriving may feeling of satisfaction. Gradually he developed a condition of general nervous hyper-irritability (infoliume pinimal) with increased contional irritability to the extent of pathological outbreaks of anger, and impulse to over-indulgence in alcohol, which induced symptoms of alcoholism. His attacks of satyriasis became so violent that consciousness was interfered with, and the potient raged shout in blind impulse to sexual acts. He demanded that his wife give herself to other men or to animals in his presence: that she allow compilation with him, presentions filiabar, because this would afford him greater enjoyment. Memory for the events at the height of these attacks, in which the extreme unitability even ted to outbreaks of maniscal rage, was entirely wanting. D. himself thought that he must have had memeric in which he no longer had control of his source, and without satisfaction from his wife would have been compelled to seize the next best female. After an attack of violent emotion, these attacks of sexual excitement authority disappeared entirely.

The two following cases show how powerful, dangerous, and poinful sexual hyperaesthesia may become in those afflicted with this anomaly ;—

Case 14. Hyperwattenia Sexualis—Delirium Acutum en Abatismuia, —On May 28, 1882, F., aged 29, single, shoemeder, was received at the etimic. Father was of passionate temper; mother acuropathic, and had an insure brother. Patient had never been sexually very passionate. Five days before, be was taken nearby ill mentally. He made two attempts at mpc in broad daylight, before witnesses, and when arrested talked in definion only of observe things, and musturbated without slint, and for three days had been raving mad. On admission he presented the picture of a severe acute delirium, with violent motor symptoms of irritation, and fever. Under treatment with ergotin a cure was effected.

On January 5, 1888, second admission, in a state of violent main. On January 4, he had become morous, irritable, whining, and alorphus; and then, after vain assemble on women, had manifested symptoms of increasing angry excitement.

On January 6, progress of the condition to severe neate delirium (great disturbance of consciousness, jactation, grinding of the teeth, grinnering, and other motor symptoms of irritation; temperature as high as $0.7° C.); impublive most arbation. Recovery was complete by January $1, under energetic treatment with ergotin.

After his recovery the patient gives an interesting account of the cause of his illness. Always very possionate sexually; first coltus at the age of sixteen. Continents caused heathers, great psychical irritability, hastitude, great loss of pleasure in work, and sleepleasures. Since he had few opportunities in the country to entisfy his desire, he had recourse to masturbation. It was necessary for him to musturbate ever or twice shilly. No coltus in two mouths. Increasing sexual excitement; could think of nothing save means for the gratification of his impulse, Masturbation was not sufficient to banish the constantly increasing torment ex obtainestic. During the last four days violent impulse to coitus; increasing sleepleasures and irritability. There was only a summary recollection of the height of the illness. Patient recovered in December: A very respectable man; he considers his inordinate desire social-dly pathological, and is anxious about his fature.

Case 15. On July 11, 1884, E., aged 33, servant, was admitted suffering with paranola persecutoria and neurosthesia sexualis. Mother was seuropathin; father died of spinal disease. From sholthood he leed an intense sexual flexire, of which he became conscious as early as his sixth year. From this age, manturbation; from lifteenth year, faute de micrae, pederasty; occasionally, sodomitic indulgences. Later, abusins cottus in marriage cum axore. Now and then even perverse impulse to commit cantilingua and to administer cantharidas to his wife, because her libido did not equal his own. His wife died after a short period of married life. Polical's circumstances became straightened, and he had no means to indulge himself sexually. Then masturbation again; employment of lingua carns to induce operabilities. At times, primping and conditions approaching satyriasis. He was then driven to masturbate, in order not to become stuporous. Beneficial diminution of the libido minin, with the grabually predominating sexual necessitions and hypochombria.

The following case, valuable for an understanding of many Messalinas, some of whom are historically celebrated, is a classical example of pure hypenesthesia sexualis, which I take from Trelat's "Folie lucide":—

Case 16. Mrs. V. has suffered with a passion for men since her sartiest youth. Of good family, well bred, of pleasant disposition, exceedingly modest, she was, as a little girl, a terror to her family, because the could scarcely be above with a person of the opposite sex, no matter whether it was with child or man of any age, without exposing herself introdictly and demanding satisfaction for her sexual possion, even going so far as to by hold of him. An altempt was made to cure her by marriage. She loved her husband possionately, but even with him she could not keep from demanding soitus of every one with whom she could be alone, no matter whether it was servant, laborer, or school-boy.

Nothing could cure her of this impulse. Even when she became a grandmother, she was still a Messalina. One day she locked a twelve-year-old boy in her room and tried to seduce him. The boy defended himself and escaped. She was severely punished by his brother. All was in vain. She was put in a cloister. There she was an example of atorality, and gave not the slightest cause for blame. Immediately after her return the samfal began again. The family banished her, and set aside money to-support her. She carned by her own band-work enough to buy herself lovers. Any one swing this neatly dressed textron, of good manners and amable disposition, would never suspect how recklessly passeonate she still was at the age of sixty-five. On January 7, 1854, her family, in despair at new scandals, placed for in an asylum. She lived there until May, 1858, when she died of apoplexia cerebri, in her seventy-timed year. Her conduct in the asylum was exemplary. Left to investf, and under favorable conditions, her sexual impulses manifested themselves shortly before her death. With the exception of this, during an observation of four years by physicians of the saylum, she never showed a sign of mental abnormality.

D. PARAMERISIA OF SEXUAL PERSONS (PERSONS OF THE SEXUAL INSPIROT).

In this condition there is perverse emotional coloring of the sexual ideas. Ideas physiologically and psychologically accompanied by feelings of disgust, give rise to pleasurable sexual feelings; and the abnormal association finds expression in passionate, uncontrollable emotion. The practical results are perverse acts (perversion of the sexual instinct). This is more easily the case if the pleasurable feelings, increased to passionate intensity, inhibit any opposing ideas with corresponding feelings of disgust; or the influence of such opposing concepts may be impossible on account of the absence or loss of all ideas of morality, aesthetics, and law. This loss, however, is only to frequently found where the spring of ethical ideas and feelings (a normal sexual instinct) has been poisoned from the beginming.

With opportunity for the natural satisfaction of the sexual instinct, every expression of it that does not correspond with the purpose of nature,—i.e., propagation,—must be regarded as perverse. The perverse sexual acts resulting from parasthesis are of the greatest importance clinically, socially, and forensically; and, therefore, they must here receive careful consideration; all asthetic and polite disgust must be overcome.

Perversion of the sexual instinct, as will be seen from what follows, is not to be confounded with perversity in the sexual act; since the latter may be induced by conditions which are not psychopathology. The concrete perverse act, monstrous as it may be, is not decisive. In order to differentiate between disease (perversion) and vice (perversity), one must investigate the whole personality of the individual and the original impulse SARISM. 5 leading to the perverse act. Therein will be found the key of diagnosis (e. infra).

Paraesthesia may occur in combination with hyperaesthesia. This association seems to be frequent clinically. Sexual acts are then confidently to be expected. The perverse direction of sexual activity may be toward sexual satisfaction with the opposite or the same sex. Thus two great groups of perversions of the sexual life may be distinguished.

I. Season Inclination toward Persons of the Opposite Sex, with Perverse Activity of the Instinct.

I. Association of Active Cruelty and Violence with Lust—Sudism.'—That lust and cruelty frequently occur together is a fact that has long been recognized and not infrequently observed. Writers of all kinds have called attention to this phenomenon.* The not infrequent cases where individuals of very excitable sexual natures bite or scratch the companion in intercourse fall within physiological limits.* The older authors have called attention to the relation between lust and cruelty.

Binnröder (" Ueber Irresein," Leipzig, 1836, p. 51) are a min who had several wounds bitten into the pertonal muscle, which a woman, in great sexual excitement, had given him at the neme of instful feeling foring coitss. Binnröder (" Ueber Lust und Schmurz," Priedrotek's Magains für Scelentunde, 1839, n. 5) calls especial attention to the psychological connection between but and murder. In relation to this, be especially refers to the Indian myths of Sira and Durga (Death and last); to human sacrifice with sensual mysteries; and to sexual instinct at patenty with a Institut impulse to satisfy sixual desire. In priedrote (" Verzeni e Agnoletti," Rome, 1874) absorties numerous examples of the occurrence of a desire to murder with greatly increased lust,

I do named from the notations Manquin do Sade, whose observe moveds treated of last and creatity. In Founds literature the expression "Sadism "has been applied to this personner.

* II. A. Noralla, in his "Fragments" | Blorrei, "Chemillelie Myellk," Ed. iii, p. 400. * Comp. also Alfred feMinest's famous verses to the Ardabatan guil :--

&quot;Qu'elle est superior en non discribis-quanti elle vonde les setts nun-

Qu'on la roit, biante, as tordre-stans les baises de rage et mordre-En harteut des mots incontant?"

On the other hand, when murderous just has been excited, lust itself often follows. Lombroso (op. cit.) alludes to the fact, mentioned by Mantegazza, that, with fear of being plundered by bandits, there was always a dread of brutal lust. These examples form transitions to the pronounced pathological cases.

The examples of the disponents Cassars (Nero, Tiberius) are also instructive. They took delight in having youths and maidens slaughtened before their eyes. Not less so is the history of that monster, Marselalls Gillo, de Rays (Jacob, "Curiosités de l'histoire de France," Pare, 1858), who was executed in 1449, on account of mutilation and murder, which he had practiced for eight years on more than eight hundred children. As the monster confessed it, it was from reading Sustantia and the descriptions of the orgies of Tiberius, Caraculla, etc., that the idea was gained of locking children in his costles, tecturing them, and then killing them. This inhuman wretch confessed that in the commission of these acts be enjoyed inexpressible pleasure. He had two assistants. The hodies of the unfortunate children were burned, and only a number of heafs of particularly beautiful children were preserved—as momorials.

In an attempt to explain the association of lust and ernelty, it is necessary to return to a consideration of the quasi-physiological cases, in which, at the moment of most intense lust, very excitable individuals, who are otherwise normal, commit such acts as biting and scratching, which are usually the result of anger. It must further be remembered that love and anger are not only the most intense emotions, but also the only two forms of active (sthenic) emotion. Both seek their object, try to possess themselves of it, and naturally exhaust themselves in a physical effect on it; both throw the psycho-motor sphere into the most intense excitement, and thus, by means of this excitation, reach their normal expression.

From this stand-point it is clear how lust impels to arts that otherwise are expressive of anger. The one, like the b During the environment of battle the bles of last forces in way into communication.

Comp. the description of a battle by a soldier, by Grillpurns >--

&quot;And so the signal rang out, the arrains met, because to become read of the godelbers, there, the correlerous steel slays enough, friend. Given and taken—draft and showed works warring change—wildly raping to fromty."

<sup>4</sup> Schalz (Wiener Med. Wochenschrift, No. 45, 1869) reports a remarkable cust of a man, aged 46, who could purform collais with his wife only after working himself into an artificial fit of larger.

SADUSE. 59

other, is a state of exaltation, an intense excitation of the whole psycho-motor sphere. Thus there arises an impulse to react on the object that induces the stimulus, in every possible way, and with the greatest intensity. Just as maniscal exaltation easily passes to furibund destructiveness, exaltation of the sexual emotion often induces an impulse to expend itself in senseless and apparently harmful acts. To a certain extent these are psychical accompaniments; but it is not simply an unronscious excitation of innervation of muscles (which also senetimes occurs as blind violence); it is a true hyperbulia, a desire to exert the most intense effect on the individual giving rise to the stimulus. The most intense means, however, is the infliction of pain.

Through such cases of infliction of pain, during the most intense emotion of lust, we approach the cases in which a real injury, wound, or death, is inflicted on the victim.\ In these cases, the impulse to cruelty, which may accompany the emotion of lust, becomes unbounded in a psychopathic individual; and, at the same time, owing to defect of moral feeling, all normal inhibitory ideas are absent or weakened. Such monstrous, andistic acts have, however, in men, in whom they are much more frequent than in women, another source in physiological conditions. In the intercourse of the sexes, the active or aggressive ride belongs to man; woman remains passive, defensive,3 It affords a man great pleasure to win a woman, to conquer her; and in the are amondi, the modesty of a woman who keeps berself on the defensive until the moment of surrender, is an element of great psychological significance and importance. Under normal conditions a man meets obstacles which it is his part to overcome, and for which nature has given him an aggressive character. This aggressive character, however, under pathological conditions, may likewise be excessively developed, and express itself in an impulse

<sup>1</sup> Concerning analogous acts in rurning animals, side Loudenso, " The Criminal."

Among animals it is always the make who pursues the female with profites of love. Playful or artisal flight of the female is not infrequently observed; and then the relation to the that between the burst of prey and the victor.

to subdue absolutely the object of desire, even to desirely to

If both these constituent elements occur together,—the abnormally intensified impulse to a violent reaction toward the object of the stimulus, and the abnormally intensified desire to conquer the woman,—then the most violent outbreaks of sadism occur.

Sadism is thus nothing else than an excessive and minstrous pathological intensification of phenomena,—possible, too, in normal conditions in rudimental forms,—which accumpany the psychical vita sexualis, particularly in males. It is, of course, not at all necessary, and not even the rule, that the sadistic individual should be conscious of his instinct. What he feels is, as a rule, only the impulse to cruel and violent treatment of the opposite sex, and the coloring of the idea of such acts with lustful feelings. Thus arises a powerful impulse to commit the imagined deeds. When the actual motive of this instinct is not comprehended by the individual, the sadistic acts have the character of impulsive deeds.

When the association of lust and cruelty is present, not only does the lustful emotion awaken the impulse to emely, but eice versa; cruel ideas and acts cause sexual excitement, and in this way are used by perverse individuals.

I The compact of woman lakes place to day in the social form of courting, is seliction and deception. From the history of civilization and anthropology we know that from large toom times, as there are savages to day that practice it, where tental flave, which, or your thorn that made a woman powerless, were made use of to obtain levels disks. It is provide that bendencies to each outbreaks of vallent are atassets.

In the Jahrleicher für Perchöngte, it, p. 128, Schüler (Jenn) seitre to the reputaed two mass by A. Payer. In the first mass status of grout sexual enritement were indeed by the night of harties to of paintings of them; in the second, by creet testuring of small sample (sub-Case 16). If is added; "The pirasure of faittle and marrier is at periodmatily as artifacts of the male on throughout the animal tringston, that there is to quantity adont the close relation emitting between this side of the manuality closurer and male sexuality. I believe, too, that by appropriately, the first indeed to in men who are adoptately mental mortally and physically, the first indeed and how probability premises of sexual excitorinat may be induced by reading sexuality of the closes and true, of a, they give the to measurement segings for a bind of additions in warific games (wronting), in which, also, the fundamental sexual impulse in the field juriest and intense contact with a companion is expressed, with the maps or less theredefined secondary throught of companion."

* It cometimes happens that an accumumal sight of blood, etc., is what him exclusthe preference provides a mechanism of the sadistic individual, and awakens the highest.

SADOSM. 61

A differentiation of original and acquired cases of sadism is scarcely possible. Many individuals, tainted obsorgious, for a long time do everything to conquer the perverse instinct. If they are potent, at first they are able to lead a normal vita sexualis, often with the assistance of subjective ideas of a perverse nature. Later, after the opposing motives of an ethical and asthetic kind have been gradually overcome, and after the constantly repeated experience that the natural act does not bring complete satisfaction, the abnormal instinct bursts forth. Owing to this late expression, in acts, of an originally perverse disposition, the appearances are those of an acquired perversion. As a rule, it may be safely assumed that this psychopathic state exists ob origine.

Sadistic acts vary in monstrousness with variation in the power of the perverse instinct over the individual afflicted, and with variation in the strength of opposing ideas that may be present, which almost always are more or less weakened by original ethical defect, hereditary degeneracy, or moral insanity. Thus there arises a long series of forms which begins with capital crime and ends with silly acts which afford the perverse desires of the sadistic individual merely symbolic satisfaction.

Sadistic acts may be further differentiated with reference to their nature; either as they are included in after consummated coitus by which the libido nimia remains unsatisfied; or, with diminished virility, as they are used to stimulate the diminished power; or, finally, where virility is absolutely wanting, as they become an equivalent for the impossible coitus, for the induction of ejaculation. In the last two cases, notwithstanding the impotence, there is still intense libido; or there was, at least, intense libido in the individual at the time when the sudistic acts became habitual. Sexual hypenesthesia is always to be regarded as the basis of sadistic inclinations. The impotence which occurs so frequently in the psychopathic and neuropathic individuals here considered, as a result of excesses indulged in from early youth, is usually dependent upon spinal weakness. Often, too, there is a kind of psychical impotence, induced by concentration of thought on the perverse act with simultaneous fading of the idea of normal satisfaction. No matter what the external form of the act may be, the mentally perverse predisposition and instinct of the individual are essential to an understanding of it.

(a) Lust-Marder¹ (Lust Potentiated as Crasity, Murderous Lust Extending to Authropophagy).—The most horrible example, and one which most pointedly shows the connection between lust and a desire to kill, is the case of Andreas Biehel, which Feuerbach published in his "aktenmässige Darstellung merkwürdiger Verbrechen."

B. purilias stopratus necessit et dissocuit. With reference to one of his victims, at his examination to expressed timeself as follows: "I spend her breast and with a knife cut through the flesby parts of the body. Then I arranged the body as a botcher does a beef, and tracked it with an axe into pieces of a size to fit the hole which I find prepared up in the mountain for burying it. I may say that while opening the body I was so greedy that I trembled, and could have cut out a piece and exten it."

Lombroso, too ("Geschiechtstrieb und Verbrechen in ihren gegesseitigen Beziehungen." Golddammer's Archie, Bd. xxx), mentions cases falling in the same category. A certain Phillips indulged in cloking prostitutes, post-actum, and mid: "I am fond of women, but it is sport for me to choke them after having enjoyed them."

A certain Grassi (Lombroso, op. cit., p. 12) was one night sozial with sexual desire for a relative. Irritated by her remonstrance, by stabbed her several times in the abdomen with a knife, and also stabbed her father and nucle who attempted to hold him back. Immediately thereafter he hastened to visit a prostitute in order to cool his accusing assists in her arms. But this was not sufficient. He then numbered his father and shaughtered several oxen in the stable.

It cannot be doubted, from what has gone before, that a great number of so-called lust-murders depend upon a combination of hypersesthesia and parasthesia sexualis. As a result of this perverse coloring of the feelings, further acts of bestinlity with the body may result,—e.g., cutting it up and wallowing in the intestines. The case of Bichel points to this possibility.

A modern example is that of Meneselou (Annalis a'hygiène publique), who was examined by Lasègne, Brouardel, and Motot, declared to be mentally sound, and executed.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Meinger's gar. Armein., heratagogeten con Semer, p. 520; Eleis's Annalen, x, p. 176, xxid, p. 521; Heinreth, System der pepch. ger. Med., p. 571; News Proceed, 1835, 23, To. (Fall Humn Ferrage).

KADISM. 63

Case 13. A four-year-old girl was missing from her parents' home, April 15, 1880. On April 18th, Menesclou, one of the occupants of the louise, was arrested. The forcarm of the child was found in his pocket, and the head and entrails, in a half-barned condition, were taken from the store. Parts of the body were found in the water-closet. The genitals could not be found. M., when asked their whereabouts, became embarmosed. The coronestances, as well as an obscene poem found on his person, left no doubt that he had violated the child and then nurclered her. M. expressed no remorse, asserting that his deed was an accident. His intelligence is limited. He presents no austomical signs of degeneration; is somewhat deaf, and scrothlous.

M., agod 20; convalsions at the age of sine months. Later, he suffered from poor sleep (uninests noctures); was nervous, and developed tardily and imperfectly. From the time of puberty he was invitable, showed cvil inclinations; was laxy; could not be taught, and in all trades proved to be of no use. He grew no better even in the House of Correction. He was made a marine, but there, too, he proved useless. When he returned home he stole from his parents, and spent his time in had company. He did not run after women, but gave himself up passionately to maximisation, and occasionally indulged in sodomy with bitches. His mother suffered with manis menstroulis periodics. An uncle was insure, sol another an inchriste. The examination of M.'s brain showed morbed changes of the frontal lobes, of the first and second temporal convolutions, and of a part of the occipital convolutions.

Case 18. Alton, a clerk in England, goes out of town for a walk. He large a child into a thicket, and returns after a time to his office, where he makes this entry in his note-book: "Killed to-sky a young girl: it was fine and hot." The child was missed, searched for, and found cut into pieces. Many parts, and among them the genitals, could not be found. A. did not show the slightest trace of emotion, and gave no explanation of the motive or circumstances of his inscrible deed. He was a psychopathic individual, and occasionally subject to states of depression with tectum vite. His father had had one attack of scate manis. A sear relative suffered from manis with bemieldal impulses. A. was executed.

In such cases it may even happen that appetite for the flesh of the murdered victim arises, and, in consequence of this perverse coloring of the idea, parts of the body may be exten.

Case 19. Leger, vine-dresser, aged 24. From youth moody, silent, shy of people. He starts out in search of a situation. He wanders about right days in the forest, there entries a girl twelve years old, violates her, mutilates her genitals, tears out her heart, cuts of it, drinks the blood, and buries the remains. Accessed, at first he lied, but finally confound his crime with cynical cold-bloodedness. He listened to his sentence of death with indifference, and was executed. At the post-morten examination, Esquirel found morbid adhesions between the cereteral members and the brain (Gorget, "Durstelling der Pronesse Leger, Feblimans," etc., Darmstadt, 1827).

Case 10. Tirsch, hospital beneficiary of Prag, aged 55, always silest. peculiar, course, very irritable, grumbling, revengeful, was sentenced in tweaty years' imprisonment, on account of violating a girl ten years old He had attracted attention on account of outbursts of anger from longnificant causes, and also on account of taslium vitie. In 1864, on account of the refusal of an offer of nurriage which he made to a widow, he done. oped a haired toward women, and on July 8th he went about with the intention of killing one of this haird sex. Vetulam occurrentem in elique allexit, coltum poposcit, resitentem prostravit, jugulum femine comprenit "farore captus." Cedarer virga betala desecta verberare velsit seque tames id perfecit, quia conscientia sua luvo fieri vetnit, cultelle massure et genitalia desseta doni corta proximia distera cum globia conedit. (la September 12th, when he was arrested, the remains of this meal were found. He gave as the metice of this net " inner impulse." He himself waded to be executed because he had always been persecuted. In confirment there were great emotional irritability and occusional outlands of fare, perceded by refusal of food, which made isolation, buting several days, necessary. It was authoritatively established that the most of his earlier excesses were coincident with outbreaks of excitement and fury (Maschin, Proger Vierteljohrssohrift, 1866, J. p. 79).

The Whitechapel murderer, who still cludes the vigilance of the police, probably belongs in this category of psycho-sexual mousters.<sup>1</sup> The constant absence of uterus, ovaries, and labin, in the victims (ten) of this modern Bluebeard, allows the posumption that he seeks and finds still further satisfaction in anthropoplusgy.

In other cases of lust-murder, for physical and mental reasons (vide supra), violation is omitted, and the sadistic crine alone becomes the equivalent of coitus. The prototype of such cases is the following one of Verzeni. The life of his victin hung on the rapid or retarded occurrence of ejaculation. Since this remarkable case presents all the peculiarities which modern science knows concerning the relation of last to lust-murder with anthropophagy, and especially since it was carefully studied, it receives detailed description here:—

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Spitzka, The Scarmal of Neurons and Mount Disease, December, 1995, Streems, The Medical Standard, Neuronber, December, 1888.

BADISM. 65

Case 21. Vincenz Verzeni, born in 1869; since January 11, 1812, in prison; is accused (1) of an attempt to strangle his name Marianne, four years ago, while she lay sick in bod; (2) of a similar attempt on a married woman, Arouth, aged 27; (3) of an attempt to strangle a married woman, Gala, by grasping her throat while kneeling on her body; (4) on suspicion of the following marriers —

In December a fourteen-year-old girl, Johanna Motta, set out for a neighboring village between seven and eight o'clock in the morning. Since she did not return, her muster set out to find her, and discovered her body near the village, lying by a path in the fields. The corpse was frightfully motilated with numerous wounds. The intestines and genitals had been form from the opened body, and were found near by. The makedness of the body and erostons on the thighs unsite it seem probable that there had been an attempt at rape; the mouth filled with earth pointed to suffocution. In the neighborhood of the body, under a pile of straw, were found a portion of fieth torm from the right call, and pieces of clothing. The perpetrator of the deed remained undiscovered.

On August 28, 1871, a married woman, Friguni, aged 28, set out in the fields early in the morning. Since she did not return by eight o'clock, her husband started out to fetch her. He found her a corpse, lying maked in the field, with the mark of a thong around her neck, with which she had been strangled, and with numerous wounds. The abdomen had been slit open, and the intestines were hanging out.

On August 29, at noon, as Maria Previtals, aged 19, went through a field she was followed by her cousin, Verzeul. He dragged her into a field of grain, threw her to the ground, and began to cheke her. As he let go of her for a moment to ascertain whether there were any one near, the girl got up and, by her supplicating entrenty, induced Verzeni to let her go, after he had pressed her hands together for some time.

Verzeni was brought before a court. He is twenty-two years old. His eranium is of more than average size, but asymmetrical. The right frontal bone is narrower and lower than the left, the right frontal prominence being less developed, and the right car smaller than the left (by I centimetre in length and 3 centimetres in breadth); both cars are defective to the inferior traif of the helix; the right temporal artery is comrathat atheromatons. Bull-necked; snormous development of the sygness and inferior maxilla; peria greatly developed, framous wanting; slight divergent elternating strabiums (incufficiency of the internal rectus tracts, and myopes). Lembroso concludes, from these signs of degeneration, that there is a congenital arrest of development of the right frontal lobe. As seemed probable, Verzeni has a bud ascentry,—two uncles are cretius; a third, microexplanic, beardless, one testicle wanting, the other atrophic. The father shows traces of pollagrous degeneration, and had an attack of hyperbondria pellagrous. A cousin suffered from territal hypersonia; another is a confirmed third.

Verseni's family is begoted and low-minded. He binnelf has srill, nary intelligence; knows how to defend himself well; seeks to prove an alibi and cast anapirion on others. There is nothing in his past that points to mental discuss, but his character is peculiar. He is silent and inclined to be selitary. In prison he is synical. He masturbates, and makes every effort to gain eight of women.

Verseni finally confessed his deeds and their notice. The conmission of them gave him an indescribably pleasant (Ineffd) feeling. which was accompanied by erection and ejeculation. As soon as he had grasped his victim by the neck, sexual sensations were experienced. It was entirely the same to him, with reference to these semutions, whether the women were old, young, ugly, or beautiful. Usually, simply choking then had satisfied him, and he then had allowed his victims to live; in the two cases mentioned, the sexual satisfaction was delayed, and he had continued to choke them until they died. His satisfaction in this gureting was greater than in masturbation. The abrasions of the skin -Motin's thighs were produced by his teeth, while sucking her blood in most intense institul pleasure. He had formout a piece of flesh from her calf and taken it with him to roast at home; but on the way he bid it under the straw-stack, for fear his mother would suspect him. He also carried pieces of the clothing and intestines some distance, because it gave him great pleasure to smell and touch them. The atrength which he possessed in these moments of intense lustful pleasure, was enormous. He had never been a fool; while committing his deeds he saw nothing around him (apparently as a result of intense sexual excitement annihilation of apperception-instinctive action). After such acts he was always very happy, enjoying a feeling of great satisfaction. He had never had range of conscience. It had never occurred to him to touch the graitsh of the martyred women, or to violate his victims. It had satisfied him to throttle them and suck their blood. These statements of this modern vampire seem to rest on truth. Normal sexual impulses seem to have remained foreign to him. Two sweethearts that he had, he was satisfed to look at; it was very strange to him that he had no inclimations to strangle them or press their hands; but he had not had the same pleasure with them as with his victims. There was no trace of moral sense,remoree and the like.

Verzoni said himself that it would be a good thing if he were to be kept in prison, because with freedom he could not resist his impulses. Verson was sentenced to imprisonment for life (Lombroso, "Versoni # Agnoletti," Rome, 1878). The confessions which Veromi made after his sentence, are interesting :-

"I had an enspeakable delight in strangling women, experiencing during the art erections and real sexual pleasure. It was even a pleasure only to smell female clothing. The feeling of pleasure while strangling them was much greater than that which I experienced while masturlating. I took great delight in drinking Metta's blood. It also gave me the greatest pleasure to pull the hair-pins out of the hair of my victims.

"I look the clothing and intestines, because of the pleasure it gave me to smell and beach them. At last my mother came to suspect me, because she noticed spots of sensen on my shirt after each murder or attempt at one. I am not erany, but in the moment of strangling my victims I saw nothing else. After the commission of the deeds I was satisfed and felt well. It never occurred to me to touch or look at the gmitals or such things. It satisfed me to selec the women by the neck and suck their blood. To this very day I am ignorant of how a woman is formed. During the strangling and after it. I pressed myself on the entire bedy without thinking of one part more than another."

Verseni arrived at his perverse acts entirely independently, after having noticed, when he was tredye years old, that he experienced a peculiar feeling of pleasure while wringing the necks of chickeps. After this he had often killed great numbers of them, and then said that a westel had been in the hen-coop (Lombroso, Golddammer's Archer, Ed.

XXX, p. 13).

Lombroso mentions an analogous case (Goldtdammer's Archie) which occurred in Vittoria (Spain):—

- Case 22. A certain Grayo, aged 41, with a Mameless past life, having been three times impried, strangled six women in the course of ten years. They were almost all public prostitutes and quite old. After the strangling he tore out their intestines and kidneys per vaguam. Some of his victims he violated before killing, others, on account of the accurrence of impotence, he did not. He set about his horrible deeds with such case that he remained undetected for ten years.
- (b) Metilation of Corpose.—Following the preceding horrible group of perversions of the sexual instinct, which arise from hypersesthesia and paraesthesia sexualis with retained virility, come naturally the necrophiles; for in these cases, just as with lustful murderers and analogous cases, an idea which in itself awakens a feeling of horror, and before which a healthy person would shudder, is accompanied by lustful feelings, and thus leads to the impulse to include in acts of necrophilia.

The cases of mutilation of bodies mentioned in literature seem to be pathological; but, with the exception of the relabrated one of Sergeant Bertrand (v. lighton), they come far from being described and observed with exactness. In certain cases there may be nothing more than the possibility that unbridled desire sees in the idea of death no obstacle to its satisfaction. The seventh case mentioned by Morean is perhaps such a one:—

A man, aged 23, attempted to mpe a moman, aged 13. Straggler, he killed her and then violated her, threw her in the water, and fished her out again for renewed violation. The numberer was executed. The meninges of the auterior lobes were thickened and afterent to the cortex.

Preach writers have recorded numerous examples of necession.

Two cases concerned monks, where they were performing the watch for the dead. In a third ruse the subject was an idiot, who also suffered from periodical manis, and after commission of rape was sent to an immuasylum, and there mutilated female bodies in the mortuary.

In other cases, however, there is undoubtedly direct preference of a corpse to the living woman. When no other act of cruelty—cutting into pieces, etc.—is practiced on the cadaver, it is probable that the lifeless condition itself forms the stimulus for the perverse individual. It is possible that the corpse—a human form absolutely without will—satisfies an absormal desire, in that the object of desire is seen to be capable of absolute subjugation, without possibility of resistance.

Brierro do Boismont (Gazette médicale, July 21, 1859) relates the history of a corpse-violator who, after brilling the watchman, and gained entrance to the corpse, of a girl of sixteen, who belonged to a family of high social position. At night a noise was heard in the death-elamber, as if a piece of familiars had failed ever. The mother of the deat girl effected an entrance, and saw a man dressed in his night-shirt springing from the bed where the body lay. It was at first thought that the new was a third, but the real explanation was soon discovered. It was afterward ascertained that the culprit, a man of good family, had often violated the bodies of young women. He was sentenced to impresonment for lifenecrophilia. From time to time he would visit houses of prostitution in Paris and order a prostitute, dressed in white like a corpse, to be laid out on a bed. At the appointed hour he would appear in the room, which, in the meantime, had been elaborately prepared as a room of mourning; then he would act as if reading a mass for the soul, and finally throw himself on the girl, who, during the whole time, was compelled to play the rôle of a corpse.

The story of a prelate, reported by Taxil (" La prostitution contemporaine," p. 171), is of great interest as an example of SADISM. 69

The cases in which the perpetrator injures and cuts up the corpse are clearer. Such cases come next to those of lust-murder, in that, in these individuals, cruelty, or at least an impulse to attack the female body, is connected with lust. It is possible that a remnant of moral sense deters from the cruel act on a living woman, and possibly the fancy passes beyond lust-morder and rests on its result, the corpse. Here, also, it is possible that the idea of defenselessness of the body plays a rôle.

Case 23. Surgeant Bertrand, a man of delicate physical constitution and of peculiar character; from childhood silent and inclined to solitude.

The details of the bealth of his family are not satisfactorily known; but the occurrence of mental diseases in his ancestry is ascertained. It is said that while he was a child he was affected with destructive impoless, which he himself could not explain. He would break whatever was at hand. In early childhood, without tracking, he beared to masturbate. At sine he began to feel inclinations toward persons of the opposite sex. At thirteen the impulse to sexual intercourse became powerfully awakened in him. He now masturbated excessively. When he did this his fancy always created a room filled with women. He would imagine that he carried out the sexual act with them, and then killed them. Immediately thereafter he would think of them as corpses, and of how he defiled them. Demaismally, in such situations, the thought of carrying out a similar net with male corpses would come up, but it was always attended with a feeling of diagnet.

In time he felt the impulse to carry out such acts with actual corposa.

For want of human bodies, he obtained those of animals. He would rut open the abdomen, tear out the entrails, and masturbate during the act.

He declares that in this way he experienced inexpressible pleasure. In

<sup>4</sup> Simon (Crimes et Dilite, p. 100) mentions an experience of Licensegue's, in whose a respectable man said that he was more incensely entitled sexually except when a speciator of a Teneral.

1846 these bodies so longer satisfied him. He now hilled dogs, and proceeded with those as before. You and the end of 1846 be first felt the desire to make see of human bodies. At first he had a borror of it. In 1847, being by accident in a grare-yard, he run across the grare of a newlyburied corpse. Then this impulse, with headache and pulpitation of the heart, became so powerful that, although there were people near by, and he was in danger of detection, he day up the body. In the absence of a convenient instrument for cutting it up, he satisfied himself by backing it with a shovel.

In 1862 and 1868, during two weeks, as reported, the impulse, accompanied by violent headache, to conseit brutalities on corpses, actuated him. Anidst the greatest dangers and difficulties, he satisfied this impulse some fifteen times. He dug up the bodies with his hands, in normal sensible, in his excitement, to the injuries he thus inflicted on himself. When he had obtained the body, he cut it up with a sword or pocket-krift, tore out the entrails, and then masturbated. The sex of the bodies is said to have been a matter of indifference to him, though it was ascertained that this modern vampire had dug up more fearale than male corpses. During these nets he declares himself to have been in an indescribable state of sexual excitement. After having cut them up, he had sometimes reinterred the bodies.

In July, 1848, he nocidentally came across the body of a girl of sixteen. Then, for the first time, he experienced a desire to carry out coitus on a cadaver. "I covered it with kisses and pressed it wildly to my heart. All that one could enjoy with a living woman is nothing in comparison with the pleasure I experienced. After I had enjoyed it for about a quarter of an hour. I cut the body up, as usual, and tors out the entralls. Then I buried the endayer again." Only after this, as R declares, had he felt the Impulse to use the bodies sexually before cutting then up, and thereafter he had done it in three instances. The actual motive of the exhaming of the bodies, however, was then, as hefore, to cut them up; and the enjoyment in so floing was greater than in using the bodies sexually. The latter not had always been nothing more than an episode of the principal one, and had never quieted his desires; therefore, he had always out up the body afterward or mutilated another body. The medico-legal examiners gave an opinion of "monogania." Courtmartial soutence to one year's imprisonment. (Michéa, Union méd., 1842; Linder, Janal. mid.payeksi., 1849, p. 153; Taelien, "Attenuts sax mosure," 1878, p. 114; Legrand, "La folie decant les tribun," p. 521.)

(c) Injury of Women (Stabling, Flagellation, etc.).—Following last-murder and violation of corpses, come cases closely allied to the former, in which injury of the victim of last and sight of the victim's blood are a delight and pleasure for degenerate men. The notorious Marquis de Sade, after whom the comtenation of lust and cruelty has been named, was such a monster. Cottus only excited him when he could prick the object of his desire until the blood came. His greatest pleasure was to injure prostitutes and then hind their wounds.

SADISM, 71

Here also belongs the case of a captain mentioned by Brierre de Boismont, who always compelled the object of his affection to place leeches ad pudenda before coitus, which was very frequent. Finally this woman became very anaemic and, as a result of this, insune.

The following case, borrowed from my own clientele, very clearly shows the connection between lust and cruelty, with desire to shed and see blood:—

Case 24. Mr. X., aged 25; father syphilitie, died of paretic dementin; mother bysterical and neurosthesic. He is a weak individual, constitutionally assreputble, and presents several anatomical signs of degeneration. When a child, hypochandria and imperative conceptions; later, constant alternation of exaltation and depression. While yet a child of ten, the peticut felt a peculiar lustful desire to see blood flow from his lingers. Thereafter he often cut or pricked himself in the flagers, and took great delight in it. Very carry, spections were added to this, and also if he saw the blood of others; for example, when he saw a screamt-girl cut her finger it gave him an intense Institil Seeling. From this time his vita sexually became more and more powerful. Without any teaching he began to masterbate, and always during the art there were memory-pictures of bleesting girls. It now no longer infloed him to see his own blood flow; he longed to see the blood of young females, especially those that were attractive to him. Often he could scarcely overcome the impulse to injure two cousins and a certain servant. But also young women that were in themselves not attractive induced this impulse when they excited him by some psentiarity of dress or odominant, especially coral jewelry. It was necessary for him to overcome these desires; but in his imagination bloody thoughts were constantly present, and induced institul excitement. There was an one relation existing between both thoughts and feelings. Ofter there were other cruel functes. He imagined himself in the rôle of a typical who had the people shot in crowds with grape-shot. He was compelled to funcy a scene as it would be if enemies were to take a city and mutilate, forture, kill, and rape the young women. In times of quiet this patient, who had a mild disposition and was not morally defective, was shamed and horrified by such cruel, institut fancies, and they always became immediately latent as soon as his sexual excitement had been satisfied by mesturbation.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Taxii (ap. cit.) gives more detailed accounts of this sexual prometer, which must have been a case of building antyrisms, accompanied by perverse sexual testinet. Sufe was so equical that he actually sought in idealite, his cruel instrincement, and become the sports of a theory based upon it. He became so bul (among other things he made as instituted company of indice and perfect service by reasons to served in them choosine bondoms which (authorized statistics) that he was committed in the instant styling at Characteria. During the receiption of 1790, he recaped. Then he write absence service filled with last, country, and the most obscene service. When Recapacity bound country, faste made him a present of his service magnificantly bound. The Council had the works destroyed, and the author committed to Characteria again, where he clied, at the age of sixty-line.

After a few years the patient became neurosthesic. Then simple imaginary representation of blood and scenes of blood was sufficient to induce ejeculation. In order to free himself from his vice and his cruel imagination, he began to indulge in sexual intercourse with females. Colons was possible, but only when the patient called up the idea that the girl's fugers were bleeding. Without the assistance of this idea no erection was possible. The cruel thought of cutting was limited to the woman's hand. At times of greatest sexual excitement, simply the sight of the hand of an attractive woman was sufficient to induce rigient error tions. Frightened by the popular stories about the injurious results of onunism, he abstrained and fell into a condition of severe general nounsthenia, with hypochondriscal dyathymia and testium vite. Careld and watchful medical treatment cared the patient after a few months. He has remained mentally well three years; but now, as before, he is very sensual, though it is very seldom that he is troubled by his earlier bloody does. X. has given up masturbation entirely. He finds satisfaction in materal sexual indulgence, is virile, and it is no longer necessary for him to call up ideas of blood.

The following case, reported by Tarnowsky (op. cit., p. 61), shows that such lustful, cruel impulses may be simply episodical, and occur in certain exceptional states of mind in neurotic individuals:—

Case 25. Z., physician; neuropathic constitution, reacting bully to alcohol. Under ordinary circumstances capable of normal coites, at seven as he has indulged in wine be finds that his immused libede is no longer satisfied by simple coitus. In this constition he is compelled to prick the mates puelle or to make stals with the funcet, to see $8000, and feel the extrance of the blade into the living body, in order to have ejaculation and experience complete satisfy of his last.

The majority of those afflicted with this form of the perversion seem insensible to the normal stimulus of woman. In the SADISM. 73 first case (24), the assistance of the idea of blood was necessary in order to obtain erection. The following case is that, of a man who, by masturbation, etc., in early youth, had diminished his power of erection so that the sadistic act took the place of coitus:

Case 26. The girl-stabler of Bases (reported by Dennie, "Buch der Vertrechen," Bd. ii. p. 341). In 1825, H., sged 40, soldier, became the subject of legal investigation. At different times and in different places, he had wounded girls with broad-knives or pocket-knives, by stallhing them in the abdomen, probably in the region of the genitals. He gave, as a motive for these acts, heightened sexual impulse, increasing to the intensity of fury, which found satisfaction only in the thought and act of stabling persons of the female sex. This impulse would pursue him for days at a time. He would then pass into a confused mental state, which would clear away only when the impulse had been satisfied by the deed. In the set of stabbing he had a satisfaction like that of completed roltus, which was increased by the sight of the blood that mafrom the knife. In his tenth year the sexual instinct become powerfully maifest. At first he gave himself up to masturbation, and felt physically and mentally weakened by it. Before he became a girl-stabber he had satisfied his sexual last in violation of immature girls, by causing them to practice masterbation on him, and by sodomy. Gradually the throught came to him of how pleasurable it would be to stab a young and pretty girl in the region of the genitals, and take delight in the right of the blood running from the knife.

Among his effects were found ropies of objects of art and obscore pictures, painted by himself, of Mary's conception, and of the "congested thought of God" in the lap of the Virgin. He was considered a peculiar, very irritable man, shy of people, given to women, moody, sed gion. He was apparently a person's that had become impotent through earlier sexual excesses, and who was thus presdeposed, by the continuance of intense filledo sexualis, and beredity, to perversion of the sexual life.

Case 27. In the "sixtles" the inhabitants of Leipzig were frightened by a man who was necesstomed to attack young girls on the street and sub-them in the upper-arm with a dagger. Pinully arrested, he was recognized as a solist, who, at the instant of stabbing, had an eparahtion, and with whom the wounding of the girls was an equivalent for cottas. (Wincton, "A Trentise on Mental Unseandness," § 623. Philadelphia, 1873.)<sup>3</sup>

Comp. Resides, Psychologie des Victorophens, 1884, p. 188; Dr. Hofer, Annales, Ser Stanbarraufkunde, 6 Juliepang, Hert I.; Schunder, Jahrbucher, Bd. fix, p. 94.

I According to newspaper reports, in December, 2000, several similar attacks were made in Maint. A young fellow between fourteen and sixteen yours slik proced against somen and girls and stabled shem in the legs with a sharp-potential interment. He was severally, and seemed to be bessee. Further details of the case are not known.

Impotence exists, likewise, in the next three cases. It may be psychical, however, in that the principal tone of the virsexualis lies in the sadistic inclination, and the normal elements are distorted:—

Case 18. The girl-cutter of Augustury (reported by Demme, "Burh der Verbrechen," ril, p. 261). Bartle, wine-merchant. He was subject to lively sexual excitement at the age of fourteen, though decidedy supposed to its satisfaction by coitus, his aversion going so far as diagnet for the female sex. At that time he already had the idea to cut with and thus satisfy his sexual desire. He refrained from it, however, on account of lack of opportunity and courage. He practiced manufactors und now and they had pollutious with erotic dreams of girls that had been cut. At the age of sincteen he first out a girl. During the art he had a seminal emission, and experienced intense pleasure. From that time the impulse became constantly more powerful. He close only young and protts girls, and, as a rule, asked them before the deal whether they were still single. The ejaculation or sexual satisfaction occurred only when he was sure that he had netually wounded the girls. After snow un set be always felt tired and bad, and was also troubled with qualues of conscience. Until thirty-two years old he carried on this process of rutting, but always with care not to wound the girls danpercussly. From that time until his thirty-sixth year he was able to control his impulse. Then be sought to entirfy himself by simply presing the girls on the arm or neck; but this gave rise to erections and not to spanishion. Then be sought to attain his object by pricking the girls with a knife in its shouth; but this did not suffice. Pinally, he stabbel. with the open kndfe and had complete success, for he thought that a girl when embled blod more said had more poin than one that was menly cut. In his thirty-seventh year he was detected and arrested. In his dwelling was found a collection of dargers, eword-cases, and kniss. He said that the mere sight of these weapons, and still more the graping of them, gave him an intense feeling of sensual pleasure, with violent excitement. According to his confession he had injured, in all, tity girls. His external appearance was rather pleasing. He lived in very good circumstances, but was peculiar and shy, Case 29. J. H., sped 25, in 1883 came for consultation concerning source normathenic and hypochordrie. Patient confesses that he has practiced onaniem since his fourteenth year, infrequently up to his eighteenth year; but since that time he has been numble to resist the impulse. Up to that time he had no opportunity to approach females, for he had been anxiously cared for and never left alone, on account of his invalidism. He had had no real desire for this unknown pleasure; but he accidentally learned what it was when one of his mother's made cut her hand serverely on a pane of glass she had broken while washing windows. While helping to stop the blood he could not keep from sucking up the blood that flowed from the wound, and in the act he experienced extreme crotic excitement, with occupiete organs and question.

SADISM. 75

From this time, in every possible way, he stught to see, and if possible to taste, the fresh blood of females. That of young girls was preferred by him. He spared no pains or expense to obtain this pleasure. At first be availed himself of a young servant who allowed her finger to be pricked with a needle or lancet at his request. When his mother discovered this, she discharged the girl. Then he was driven to prostitimes as a substitute, with success frequently enough, though with some difficulty. In the intervals he practiced counties and manustrapeation per feminam, which, however, never afforded him complete satisfaction, but, on the contrary, caused listlessness and sulf-represels. On account of his nervous difficulties he visited many sanitariums, and he was twice a voluntary potical in institutions. He used hydrotherapy, electricity. and strengthening cures, without particular success. For a time it was possible, by means of cold sitz-baths, monobromate of camphor, and brenides, to diminish his sexual excitability and quantistic impulse. However, when the patient felt himself free again, he would immediately fall into his old passions and spare no pains or money in order to satisfy. his sexual desire in the abnormal manner described.

Case 89 (communicated by Dr. A. Moll, Berlin). L. T., aged 21; nerehant in a Rhenish city. He belongs to a family in which there are several nervous and psychopathic members. A sister suffers with hysteria and audanobolia.

The patient was always of quiet disposition and timid. At school he frequently kept spart from other pupils, particularly when they talked about gols. In the presence of helies he thought every expression he made was an offense against decency. Thus, for example, he thought it very improper, in the presence of ladies, married or unmartied, to speak of going to bed, rising, etc. In the elementary classes the patient learned well. Later he became more indolent and did not make good progress.

August 17, 1890, the peticut visited Dr. Moll on account of absorand symptoms of a sexual kind. He did this on the advice of a physician, X., a relative, in whom he had previously confided. The petient conveys the impression of being very apprehensive and shy, and in answer to questions says that he is very timerous, and that particularly in the pressure of others all his self-confidence and assurance leave him.

Dv. X. confirmed this statement.

The beginning of his sexual life the patient was able to refer to his seventh year. At that ago he frequently played with his genitals, and was often possished for it. In this emmisso, in which he said he had exection, he constantly thought of whipping a woman on the naked nates with a rod until the skin raised in weak. "It delighted me," said the patient, "when I thought that she was a proof, leantiful hely, and that I performed the act in the presence of others, especially women, particularly with the idea shot she mapsh feel the power I had over him. For this reason I early sought reading about penishment, e.g., about the above of Reman slaves. However, I had spections only when the conveived above consisted of blows delivered on the tack or sates. At first I thought this hind of excitement would disappear in time, and mid-nothing about it to any one."

Musturbation, early included in, the patient continued to practice, and always with the same thought. After his thirteenth or fourteenth year he had ejacolation with the act. Decimin septimum assum agens primain feminam selfit colonid cause neares cottum perfecte potal libiding at erections deficientibus. Mox autem iterum apid alterum continu continue cat millo success. Turn feminam per vim verberavit. Tantopres end excitatos of mulicross dolore clamantem atque lamentantem scriberum non desicrit. He never thought of any legal punishment for his act, and, in fact, escaped it. In this procedure erection, organs, and ejacolation occurred. The patient performed the act in such a way that he took the woman between his knews, with the penis in contact with her body, but without emissio penis in vaginam, which seemed entirely superfluous to him.

But the patient afterward experienced such a Seeling of share about the beating, and was overcome with such great depression, that he about contemplated smidde. In the following three years he still violed women occusionally. But he never again asked one to allow him to beat her. He sought to obtain execution by thinking of the beating; but this was without result, and manusimposition by the woman did not indusception. Finally, after an unsuccessful attempt of this kind, the patient determined to give his comblemes to a physician.

The patient made several other statements concerning his old sexualts. His absormal sexual desire had troubled him by its intensity. He went to along with sexual thoughts; they troubled him through the night and were still with him when he awake. He was never safe for my length of time from the impulsion of the absormal ideas that excited him; to which indeed, he gave himself up willingly, and from which he could free himself for a short time only by ournism.

In response to my question, the patient stated that any other means of panishment of women than beating the back, and miss patitive lady, had no charm for him. Neither binding them, walking on them, are striking them, gives him such pleasure. This is to be emphasized the more, since the whipping given the woman affords him sexual pleasure because its effect on her is "humiliating, mortifying," and because she should "feel that she is completely in his power," Too, it would give the patient no pleasure to beat a woman on any other part of her body than those mentioned, or to cause her pain in any other way than by blows. Multum minorem of affect voluptatem si nates one a muliere verbersatur; tamen on rea suspe sjaculationera seminis effecti, sed face fieri putat exections deficienti. Inter verbers autem perem in vaginam immittendo nellam voluptatem se habere rates qualibet parte corporis femines pene tacts semen operate. Just as in besting the scenar has pleasure lay in humiliating her, so with the relations reversed he was sexually excited by the fact that the besting hamiliated him and he felt himself to be completely as the scenar's power. No other personal humiliation than a besting on his rates could excite him. To allow binself to be bound or walked on by a woman is repreparent to him.

The potent's dreams, as far as they were of an erotic nature, were directed in the same way as his sexual inclinations while awake; actual specialism also often took place in dreams. Whether the perverse sexual thoughts first eccurred in dreams or the waking state, the patient is not able to state, owing to the fact that his memory poes back so far,—to his seventh year. But he thinks that these thoughts first occurred to him while awake. In his dreams it frequently second to him that he was striking a man, which also caused ejaculation. In the waking attate it excited him but very fittle to think of striking a man. The nucle form of a man had so offrection abstract for him, while the sude form of a woman had a decided charm for him, though his libido found its real satisfaction only when the acts previously described took piace; and, as he states, he feels no desire for roitus in vaginum.

The treatment of the patient is directed to the attainment of normal coitus with normal desire, where possible; for it may be assumed that, with success in making his sexual life sormal, the patient's shyness and apprehensiveness, which cause him great annoyance, may be much easier removed. The treatment followed by me (Dr. Moll) during three months and a half was as follows:—

- 1. The patient, who find a great desire to be cured, was most strictly fortidden to give himself up to the perverse thoughts. Of course. I did not give him the foolish advice not to think of blows at all. The patient could not follow such advice, since the thoughts come to him without any act of his own, even when he accidentally reads the weed "blow" (schlagen). I fortisde him only ever to voluntarily give himself to such thoughts. I advised him more particularly to do everything in order to turn his ideas in another direction.
- I sillowed him, commanded him even, to think of nude women, became many nude females interested him, even though, as he thought, they did not excite him sexually.
- 3. I sought, by means of hypnonis—which was hard to inchire—and suggestion, to fortify the patient in this as far as possible. All attempts at collars were fortidden in order to save the patient from a discouraging result.

Within two months and a half this treatment led to the result that, as the patient stated, the perverse ideas occurred much less frequently and were constantly retreating to the background; indeed, according to the patient's statement, erections occurred with the thoughts of statement, became more frequent, and often induced him to musturbate with the thought of coitus without the occurrence of any idea of bless. Erotic dreams occurred but infrequently. These were concerned sometimes with normal coitus, essectimes with blows.

After two months and a half of the treatment I advised the patient to attempt coitus. Since then he has tried four times. I advised him is choose always a woman who pleased him, and sought to increase his sexual excitement before coitus by means of tincture of cuntheriba. The four attempts, the last of which took place on November 29, 1890. resulted as follows: At the first, prolonged manipulation of the peals by the woman was necessary in order to induce erection. Then immisso in raginan and eleculation with organa took place. During the whole act there occurred no thought of beating the woman or being beaten, but the woman in herself excited him sufficiently for the performance of coins. At the second attempt the result was better and more quickly attained; manipulation ad genitalis by the woman was not long required. In the third attempt coits was attained only after the patient had thought of heating for a long time, and had thus induced erection; but beating was not indulged in. At the fourth attempt coitus was attained without any thought of heating and without any manipulation ad genitalia.

Of course, the case described cannot yet be regarded in any way as curved. Though the patient were able to perform coites in a normal or nearly normal way, that does not mean that he will always be able to do it in the future; moreover, the thought of beating still affords him great pleasure, even though it occurs much less frequently than formerly. Yet there is a possibility that the abnormal desire, which has been weakened, will semain weakened in the future, and perhaps disappear.

This carefully observed case is, for several reasons, particularly interesting. It discloses clearly one of the hidden roots of sadism,—the impulse to complete subjugation of the woman, which here became consciously entertained. This is the more remarkable since it occurred in an individual decidedly third, and in other respects modest and even apprehensive. The case also shows clearly that powerful libido, which even impels to individual to overcome all obstacles, may be present, while at the same time coitus is not desired, because the principal interesty of feeling is, ab oxigine, connected with the grad part of the sadistic (lustful and cruel) circle of ideas. This case also contains weak elements of masochism (v. infra).

79

Cases are by no means infrequent in which men with perverse inclinations induce prostitutes, by paying them high prices, to allow themselves to be whipped and even wounded by them. Works on prostitution contain reports of them (vide Coffiguon, "La Corruption à Paris," etc.).

(d) Defilement of Women.—The perverse sadistic impulse, to injure women and put contempt and bumilistion upon them, is also expressed in the desire to defile them with disgusting or, at least, foul things.

The following case, published by Arndt (Vierteljahrsschr.
f. ger. Mediciss, N. F. xvii, H. 1), belongs here:—

Case 31. A., medical student at Greifewald, accusatus quod iterum iterumque puellis honestis parentilus natis in publico genitalia sun e bracis dependentia plane modata que antia summo amienlo (overcost) tecta erant, estenderat. Nonumquam puellas fugientes secutus casque ad se attractes urina oblivit. Hace luce clara facta sunt; numquam aliquid hace faciena locatus est.

A, is twenty-three years old, powerfully built, next in dress, and decent in manners. Indication of cranium programm; chronic parametric of the spex of the right lung; emphysema. Pulse, 66; in excitational, not more than 70 to 80. Genitals normal. Complaints of occasional disturbances of digestion and hardness of the abdomen, vertigo; recessive excitament of the sexual desires, which early led to onanism. The sexual desire has never been directed toward a natural method of minutations. Complaints of occasional attacks of depression, or thoughts of deprecation of self, and of priverse impulses, for which he could find no motive; such as laughing at serious things, throwing his money in the water, and running about in the pouring min. The father of the culprit is of a nervous temperament; his mother is subject to nervous headachs. A brother suffered with epileptic conventions.

From his youth the colprit presented a nervous temperament, we inclined to convulsions and attacks of syncope, and when he was everely scolded would fall into a state of momentary stiffness. In 1869 a studied medicine in Berlin. In 1870 he went to the war as a hospital savatant. His letters at this time betray a peculiar torpidity and weak-On his return house, in 1873, his emotional irritability was noticed

The about him Thereafter from the complaints of hodily ailments; and has resulting from a love affair. In November, 1811, he and has studies diligently in Greifswall. He was considered very gentlemsaly. In confinement he is quiet, culm, and sometimes soft shootbod. His acts he attributes to painful sexual excitement, which of late lead become excessive. He declared that he had been fully constrout of his perverse acts, and had afterward been ashaned of them. He had not experienced actual sexual satisfaction in their commission. He obtained no correct insight into his position. He considered himself a hind of martyr,—fallen a victim to an evil power. Presumption of irresponsibility, as a result of absence of free will.

The impulse to defile occurs also, paradoxically, in the aged, when there is a re-appearance of sexual instinct, which, under such circumstances, is so often expressed in perverse acts. Thus Tarnowsky reports (p. 76) the following case:—

Case 32. I knew such a patient, who had a woman dryssed in a décolleté bull-dress lie down on a low sofa in a brightly lighted room. The apail januam aline cubiculi obscurati constitit adspiciendo aliquantidos Seminam, excitatus in sum insiluit excrementa in sinus ejus deposas. Hue facions speciationem quandom se sentire confessus aut.

An officer of Vienna informs me that men, by means of large sums of money, induce prostitutes to suffer ut illi viri in om carum spacerent et faces et urinas in ora explerent.

The following case by Dr. Pascal ("Igiene dell'amore") seems also to belong here:—

Case 33. A man had an immorata. His relation with her was that he had her allow him to blacken her hands with coal or soot, and then she had to sit before a mirror in such a way that he could see her hands in it. White conversing with her, which was often for a long time, he looked constantly at her mirrored hands, and finally, after a time, he would take his leave, fully satisfied.

The following case, communicated by a physician, may be of interest in relation to this subject:—

An officer was known in a brothel in K, only by the name of "Ol."
"Oil" induced erection and ejaculation only by having peell, publication order into a tab filled with oil, while he rubbed the oil all over her boly.

These acts lead to the presumption that certain cases of injury of females (e.g., sprinkling with sulphuric acid, ink,

A Lee Tout (Le Correption, Parts, Notice, p. 227) makes the same profession.

There are also men into domaind introductio impair membrics in arran-etc.) depend upon a perverse sexual impulse; at least, here it is a kind of injury, and those injured are always temales, and the perpetrators males. At least in the future, in crimes of this kind, pains should be taken to examine the vita sexualis of the culprits.

SADISM.

The case of Bachmann, given below, throws a clear light on the sexual nature of such crimes; for, in this case, the sexual motive in the deed is proven.

(c) Other Attacks on Fewales—Symbolic Sudism.—The foregoing groups do not exhaust the forms in which the sadistic impulse toward women is expressed. If the impulse is not overmastering, or there is yet sufficient moral resistance, it may happen that the perverse inclination is satisfied by an act that is apparently quite senscless and silly, but which has a symbolic meaning for the perpetrator. This seems to be the meaning of the two following cases:—

Case 34. (Dr. Pascal, "Igiene dell'amore.") A man was accustomed to go, on a certain day once a mouth, to an insmonta and cut her "long." This gate him the greatest pleasure. He made no other demands on the girl.

Case 35. A man in Vienna regularly visits several prostitutes only to lather their faces and then to remove the lither with a razor, as if he were shaving them. He never burts the girls, but becomes sexually excited and ejaculates during the procedure.

The significance of the following cases, in which a sadistic tomedy is played, is clearer:—

Case 26. A man always announces to a pitella publica his intended viscs. She must stand at the window, awaiting him, with her face done up, and, on his entrance into the room, complain of severe loothards. He is sorry for her, take particularly about the pain, takes the cloth off and puts it on again; but he never has coitus, and finds his satisfaction simply in this set.<sup>1</sup>

The following case, which, unfortunately, was not carefully examined scientifically, is peculiar to itself:—

*Leo Taril (up. cit., p. 134) relates that in Partitio turbleds instruments are kept ready which home time knowled, but which are movely below filled with air, such as comess me in pircuses. Sufficie mest use them to create for the mestres the distance that they are whipping women.

In an examination before a criminal court in Vienna, the following facts were brought to light: Coura N., accompanied by a young girl, appeared in the public garden of an hotel, and, by his artions there, gave public offense. He demanded of his companion that she kneel down before him and implore him with folded hands. Then she was compelled to lick his boots. Finally, he demanded of her, publicly, "an unboardof thing" (osculum ad nates, or the like), and only desisted after she had sworn to do it at home.

In this case, the most remarkable thing was the desire of the perverse individual to humiliate the woman before witnesses (comp. the fancies of sadists, Case 29); further, that the desire to humiliate the woman came entirely into the foreground, and acts of a purely symbolic nature were undertaken. Of course, with these, in this imperfectly-observed case, acts of cruelty were probable.

(f) Sadism with Other Objects—Whipping of Boya.—
Besides the sadistic acts with females described, others serus with other living, sensitive objects,—children and animals. There may be a full consciousness that the impulse is really directed toward women, and that only faute de saigue the next attainable objects (pupils) are abused. But the condition of the perpetrator may be such that the impulse to cruel acts enters consciousness accompanied only by lustful excitement, while its real object (which alone can explain the Justful coloring of such acts) remains in the dark.

The first alternative suffices as an explanation of the cases which Dr. Albert describes (Friedreich's Blätter f. ger. Med., p. 17, 1859),—cases in which lustful teachers whipped their pupils on the naked nates without cause. We must think of the second alternative, the sadistic impulse with unconsciousness of its object, when boys are immediately excited sexually at the sight of punishment of their companions, and are thus determined in their later vita sexualis, as in the following cases:—

Case 27, K., aged 37, merchant, applied to me in the fall of 1881 for advice concerning an anomaly of his vita sexualis, which make him fear invalidies and impossibility of fature happiness in marriage.

Patient come of a nervous family. As a child he was delirate, week, and nervous. Healthy except for mesales; he later became strong.

SADISM. 83

At the age of right, while at school, he saw how the tearber penished the boys by taking their heads between his thighs and spanking them with a ferale. This right recessed the patient braiful excitament. "Without any idea of the danger and coormity of omniam," he satisfied binnelf with it, and from that time often musturbated, during which he always called up the memory-picture of a boy being punished.

Thus it continued until his twentieth year. There he fearned the agriffennce of organism, was terribly frightened, and tried to overcome his impulse to immunish; but he fell into the practice of psychical counties, which he regarded as innocensus and storally defensible, and for which he made use of the memory-pictures of boys being whipped, previously mentioned.

Patient now became neurosthenic, suffered with pollutions, and tried to cure himself by visiting brothels; but he could not induce exetion. Then he sought to obtain neurosl sexual feelings by means of social intercourse with ladies; but he recognized that he was entirely insensible to the charms of the fair sex.

The patient is an intelligent man, normally developed, and of authetic taste. There is no inclination to persons of his own sex. My advice consisted of means to combat the neumathenia and pollutions; interdiction of psychical and mound outnism; avoidance of all sexual excitants; and, possibly, hypnotic treatment to ultimately induce a return of the vita sexuals to its normal condition.

Case 38. Abortise solism. N., student, came under observation in December, 1890. He had practiced masturbation from early youth. According to his statements, he became sexually excited when he saw his father whip the children, and, later, when he saw the teacher whip his companions. When a spectator of such scenes, he always experienced histiful Scelings. He read not say exactly when this first occurred, but it may have been at about the age of six. He could not tell exactly when he began to masturbate, but he stated with containty that his sexual instinct was first awakened by the punishment of others, and thus he meanisciously came to practice commism. The patient remembered clearly that from the age of four to the age of eight he was frequently spended, and that this caused him pain, never instint pleasure.

Since he did not always have opportunity to see others whipped he began to emagine how others were punished. This excited his last, and he would then musturbate. Whenever be could, be samuged to see others punished at school. New and then be also left desire to whip others. At the age of twelve he induced a comrade to allow him to whip him. He found great sexual physicae in it. When, however, his companion beat him in return, he experienced nothing but pain.

The impulse to best others was never very strong. The petient experienced more satisfaction in filling his imagination with scenes of whopping. He never indulged in any other solistic acts, and never had may desire to see blood, etc. Until his afficenth year his sexual indulgence consisted of onanism, indulged in after such funcies. After that (dateing lessons, association with girls), the early funcies disappeared almost entirely, and were accompanied by but weak lastful feelings; so that the patient gave them up entirely. In their place came thoughts of quites in a matural way, without anything addistic.

The petient indelged is ceites for the first time "on account of his benith." He then tried to obstain from countism, but was not successful, though he often indulged in ceites, and with more pleasure than he had in countism. He wished to be freed from countism as something virious. He had ceites once a mouth, but numberialised ones or twice every night. He was normal sexually, with the exception of the counties. There was no neurosthenia; genitals normal.

Case 39. P., aged 15, of high social position, came of an hysterical mother, whose brother and father died in an asyimu. Two children of the family died, in early childhood, of convulsions. The patient is talented, virtuous, and quiet; but at times he is very disobedient, stubbers, and passionate. He has epilepsy, and practices counter. One day it was learned that P., with money, induced a commile of fourteen, B., to allow himself to be pinched on the arm, back, and thigh. When B. cried P. became excited and struck at B. with his right hand, while with his left he made manipulations in the left pocket of his trousers. P. confessed that to maltrent his friend, of whom he was very fond, gave him peculiar delight; and that ejeculation while hurting his friend gave him much more pleasure than when he manufacted alone. (c. Gyurkovecky, "Pathol and Thempie der männl. Impotenz.," p. 30, 1889.)

That in all these cases of sadistic abuse of boys there can be no thought of a combination of sadism and contrary sexual instinct, as often occurs (v. infra) in individuals of contary sexuality, is shown—aside from the absence of all positive signs of it—by a study of the next group, where, in association with the object of injury,—animals,—the instinct for women is seen to appear repeatedly.

(g) Scalistic Acts with Animals.—In numerous cases, sadistically perverse men that are afraid of criminal acts with human beings, or that care only for the sight of the suffering of a sustive being, make use of the sight of dying animals, or torture unimals, to stimulate or excite their lust.

The case of a man in Vienna, which is reported by Holman in his "Text-Book of Legal Medicine," is noteworthy in relation to this. According to the evidence of several prostitutes, before the sexual set be was accessomed to excite himself by testuring chickens and pigeous and other bards, and, therefore, was called " Hendingam" (chicken).

For the elecidation of such cases the observation of Lombroso is of value, according to whom two men had ejaculation when they killed shirkens or pigeous, or wrung their necks.

The same author, in his "Uomo delimquente," p. 201, speaks of a post of some reputation, who became powerfully excited sexually whenever he saw calves slaughtered, and also at the sight of bloody feels.

According to Mantagazza (op. cst., p. 114), among degenerate Chinataen, a horrible sport consists of committing soliony with gense, and enting their necks off tempore ejacufeticate?

Mantiqueza ("Fisiologia del piacere," 5th ed., pp. 384, 385) mentions the case of a man who once saw chickens killed, and from that time had a desire to wallow in their warm, steaming entrails, because he experienced a feeling of last while doing it.

Thus, in these and similar cases, the vita sexualis is so constituted ob origine that the sight of blood, death, etc., excites bestful feeling. It is so in the following case:—

Case 46. C. L., aged 42, engineer, married, father of two children; from a neuropathic family; father irascible, a drinker; mother hysterical, subject to relamptic attacks. The patient remembers that in childhood he took particular pleasure in witnessing the shaughtering of demostic animals, especially swine. He thus experienced lustful pleasure and speculation. Later he visited slaughter-houses, in order to delight in the sight of flowing blood and the death thross of the snimals. When he result find opportunity, he killed the minuals himself, which always afforded him a rienzious feeling of sexual pleasure.

At the time of full maturity be first attained to a knowledge of his also mality. The patient was not exactly opposed in inclination to women, but close contact with them accound to him repugnant. On the advice of a physician, at twenty-live he married a woman who pleased him, in the hope of freeing himself of his abnormal condition. Although he was very partial to his wife, it was only seldom, and after great trouble and exertion of his imagination, that he could perform coitus with her; nevertheless, he begat two children. In 1866 he was in the war in Bohema. His letters written at that time to his wife, were composed in an excited, enthusiastic tone. He was killed in the buttle of Königgratz.

If, in this case, the capability of normal coitus was much impaired by the predominance of perverse ideas, in the next it seems to have been entirely repressed:— Case 41. (Dr. Pascal, "Igiene dell' smore.") A gentlema viscol prostitutes, and them purchase a living fewl or rabbit, and required them to terture the animal. He had in mind the head and tenting on the eyes and entrails. If he found a girl who would conseat, and go about it right cruelly, he was delighted, and paid her and went his way without asking anything more or touching her.

The last two sections show that the suffering of any living heing may become a source of perverse sexual enjoyment is sadistically constituted persons, and that there may be sadism with almost any [living] object. However, it would be cromeous and an exaggeration to try to explain by sadistic perverson all the remarkable and surprising acts of cruelty that occur; and, in the innumerable cruelties, as they here and there occur in history or in certain psychological manifestations among the people at the present time, it would be erroneous to assume sadism as a motive.

Cruelty arises from various sources, and is natural to primitive man. Compassion, in contrast with it, is a secondary manifestation, and acquired late. The instinct to fight and destroy, so important an endowment in prehistoric conditions, is long afterward operative; and, in the ideas engendered by civilization, like that of "the criminal," it finds new objects, even though its original object—"the enemy"—still exists. That not simply the death, but also testure, of the conquered is demanded, is in part explained by the sense of power, which satisfies itself in this way; and in part by the insatiableness of the impulse of vengennee. Thus all cruelty and all historial enormities may be explained without recourse to sadism (which may often have been in operation, but which cannot be assumed, since it is relatively an infrequent perversion).

At the same time, there is still another powerful psychical element to take into consideration, which explains the attraction that is still exerted by executions, etc.; and that is, the pleasure there is in intense and unusual impressions and rare sights, in contrast with which, in coarse and blunted beings, pity is allert nected with death and suffering has a mysterious attraction; who, with inward opposition, and yet following a dark impulse, occupy themselves with such things, or at least with pictures and notices of them. Still, this is not sadism, as long as no sexual element enters into consciousness; and yet it is possible that, in unconscious life, slender threads connect such manifestations with the hidden depths of sadism.

But undoubtedly there are individuals for whom, in spile of, or even by reason of, their lively compassion, all that is one SADISM. 87

(h) Sudism in Woman.—That sadism—a perversion, as we have seen, frequent in men—is much less frequent in women, is easily explained. In the first place, sadism, in which the need of subjugation of the opposite sex forms a constituent element, in accordance with its nature, represents a pathological intensification of the masculine sexual character; in the second place, the obstacles which oppose the expression of this monstrous impulse are, of course, much greater for a woman than for a man. Yet sadism occurs in women; and it can only be explained by the primary constituent element,—the general hyper-excitation of the motor sphere. Only two cases have thus far been scientifically studied.

Case 42. A married man presented himself with numerous scars of cuts an his arms. He told their origin as follows: When he wished to approach his wife, who was young and somewhat "nervous," he first had to make a cut in his arm. Then she would suck the wound, and during the art become violently excited sexually.

This case recalls the wide-spread legend of the vampires, the origin of which may perhaps be referred to such sadistic facts.<sup>1</sup>

In a second case of feminine sadism, for which I am indebted to Dr. Moll, of Berlin, by the sale of the perverse impulse, as so frequently occurs, there is aniesthesia for the normal activities of the sexual life; and here there are also traces of masochism (v. infra).

t The legand is especially spread throughout the Balkan pushwala. Among the Greeks in has its origin in the outth of the Soule and normolybe, - blood-sucking momon. Goothe made use of this in his "Buile of Counth." The prime referring to rampirms, "suck thy heavy's blood," sto., can be thoroughly indentical only when simpared with their adulant sources.

Case 43, Mrs. H., of H., aged 26, comes of a nervous family, is which nervous or mostal diseases are said not to have occurred; but the patient herself presents signs of hysteris and neurasthenia. Although eight years married, and the mother of a child, Mrs. II. never had doors to perform celtus. Very strictly educated as a young girl, until her meriage she remained almost immeent of any knowledge of sexual matters. She has menuteunted regularly since her fifteenth year. There does not scon to be my essential abnormality of the genitals. To the patient coltus is not only not a pleasure, but even an aupleasent act; and repagamace to it has constantly increased. The patient enanct understant how any one can call such an act the greatest delight of love, which, to her, is something for higher and anconnected with such a sensual imprise. At the same time, it should be mentioned that the patient really loves her husband. In kissing him, too, she experiences a decided pleasure, which she cannot exactly describe. But she cannot conceive how the genitals can have anything to do with love. In other respects Mrs. H. is a decidedly intelligent woman, of feminine character.

Si escula dat conjugi, magnum voluptatem percipit in mordendo suin. Gratisolmum ei esset conjugem mordere eo modo ut sangule fant. Contenta esset, si loco coltus morderetur a conjugu iposeque sum mordere liceret. Tamen eam permiteret, si morsu magnum dolorem faceret. (Dr. Moli.)

In other cases of sadism which history and literature afford, we are compelled to think of a reversal of the feminine sexual character,—a partial viraginity,—in order to explain the sadistic acts.

In history there are examples of famous women who, to some extent, had sadistic instincts. These Messalinas are particularly characterized by their thirst for power, lust, and cruelty. Among them are Valeria Messalina herself, and Catherine de Medici, the instigator of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, whose greatest pleasure was found in having the ladies of her court whipped before her eyes, etc.

The gifted Henry von Kleist, who was undoubtedly mentally abnormal, gives a masterly portrayal of complete feminine sudism in his "Penthesilen." In scene xxii, Kleist describes his heroine with Achilles, whom she had been pursuing in the fire of love, betrayed into her hands, as, overcome with lustful, murderous fury, she tears him in pieces and sets her dogs on him: "She strikes, tearing the armor from his body; they set their teeth in his white breast,—she and her dogs, the rivals, Oxus and Sphynx,—they on the right side, she on the left; and as I approached blood dripped from her bands and mouth." And later, when Penthesiles becomes satisfied: "Did I kiss him to death? No. Did I not kiss him I Torn in pieces? Then it was a mistake; kissing rhymes with biting, and one who loves with the whole heart might easily mistake the one for the other.":

 The Association of Passively Endured Cruelty and Violence, with Last—Masochism. —Masochism is the opposite of sudsm. While the latter is the desire to cause pain and use force, the former is the wish to suffer pain and be subjected to force.

By masochism I understand a peculiar perversion of the psychical vita sexualis, in which the individual affected, in sexual feeling and thought, is controlled by the idea of being completely and unconditionally subject to the will of a person of the opposite sex; of being treated by this person as by a master,—humiliated and abused. This idea is colored by lustful feeling; the individual affected lives in fancies, in which he creates situations of this kind, and often attempts to realize them. By this perversion his sexual instinct is not infrequently made more or less insensible to the normal stimulus of the opposite sex,—incapable of a normal vita sexualis,—psychically impotent. But this psychical impotence does not in any way depend upon a horvor sexua alterias, but upon the fact that this perverse instinct finds an adequate satisfaction differing from the normal,—in woman, to be sure, but not in coitus.

But enses also occur, in which, with the perverse impulse, there is also sensibility, in a measure, to normal stimuli, and intercourse under normal conditions takes place. In other cases the impotence is not purely psychical, but physical, i.e., spinal; for this perversion, like almost all other perversions of the sexual instinct, is developed only on the basis of a psychopathic and, for the most part, hereditarily predisposed individuality; and, as a rule, such individuals give themselves up to excesses, particularly masturbation, to which the difficulty of attaining what their fancy creates, drives them again and again.

&lt;sup>3</sup> In the inner attenuous on find the matter formed, but particularly in Santer. However, which are hereafter to be alleded to, and in Eraset von Whitenbruch's * Franklide !* Rachtide's "Le Murquier de Sade." etc.

* So manuel from the writer, factor-Manuels, whose variances and access have as said particular object the description of this pervention.

The number of cases of undoubted massehism thus far observed is very large. Whether massehism occurs associated with normal sexual instincts, or exclusively controls the individual; whether, and to what extent, the individual subject to this perversion strives to realize his peculiar fancies or not; whether he has thus more or less diminished his virility or not, depends upon the degree of intensity of the perversion in the single case, and upon the strength of the opposing ethical and aesthetic motives, as well as the relative power of the physical and mental organization, of the affected individual. The essential thing, from the psychopathic point of view, and the common element in all those cases, is the fact that the sexual instinct is directed to ideas of subjugation and abuse by the opposite sex.

What has been said with reference to the impulsive character (indistinctness of motive) of the resulting acts, and with reference to the original (congenital) nature of the perversion in sadism, is also true in masochism.

In masochism there is also a gradation of the acts from the most repulsive and monstrous to the silliest, in accordance with the degree of intensity of the perverse instinct, and the power of the remnants of moral and aesthetic motives that oppose it. The altimate consequences of masochism, however, are opposed by the instinct of self-preservation, and, therefore, murder and serious injury, which may be committed in sadistic excitement, have here, as far as known, no passive equivalent in reality; but the perverse desires of masochistic individuals may, in imagination, attain these extreme consequences (v. infra, Case 54).

Moreover, the acts to which masochists give themselves up, are performed in some cases in connection with coitus, i.e., as preparatory measures; in others, as substitutes for coitus when that is impossible. Here, too, this depends only upon the condition of sexual power, which has been diminished for the most part physically and mentally by the activity of the sexual ideas in the perverse direction, and not upon the nature of the act itself.

(a) The Desire for Above and Hamiliation as a Means of Sexual Satisfaction.—The following detailed autobiography of a masorhist, gives an exhaustive description of a typical case of this remarkable perversion:—

Case 44. I come of a nearopathic family, in which, with all kinds of pernincities of character and manner of life, there are several almormalities of a sexual nature. My imagination has always been very lively, and was very early directed to sexual matters. As far as I can remember, I was much given to manism long before puberty. Even at that time my thoughts were, for hours at a time, directed to intercourse with females. But the relations in which I placed myself with the opposite sex were entirely peculiar. I functed that I was a prisoner and absolutely in a woman's power, and that this woman used her power to hurt and abuse me in every way possible. In this, whipping and blows played an important part in my fancy, and there were many other acts and situations which all expressed the condition of vassalage and subjection. I saw myself-constantly kneeling before my ideal, trod upon, loaded with chains, and imprisoned. Severe punishments of all kinds were inflicted on me, to test my obedience and please my mistress. The more severely I was humiliated and abused, the more I indulged in these thoughts. (At the some time I developed a great preference for volvet and fur, which I liked to touch and smooth, and which likewise excited me sexually.)

I remember well that when a chibi I received many notical whippinrs at the hands of females. They never caused me any other feeling than pain and shame; never have I thought to connect such reslities with my fincies. A threat to punish me severely and correct me agitated us painfully; but in my fancy I assumed a desire on the part of my "mistress" to enjoy my suffering and humiliation, which entranced me. Too, I have never brought into relation with my fancies the acts and colors of the females that have taken care of mc. I was early also to discover the truth about the relation of the sexes; but this knowledge made no impression on sec. The idea of sensual pleasure remained contected with the fincies with which it was originally associated. I also had the desire to touch females, to embrace and kiss them, but I looked for the greatest delight only in their maltreatment, and in situations in which they would cause me to feel their power. I soon came to realize that I differed from other men, and preferred to be alone and absorbed in my dreams. In my boyhood, real girls and women had but little interest for me; for I saw no possibility of laving them act in the way I desired. On lonely paths in the forest I whipped myself with branches that had fallen from the trees, and allowed my imagination to play in the limbitual way. I reveied in the sight of pictures of commanding women, particularly if, like queens, they were furs. I rend storything related to my cherished ideas. "Roussean's Conficcious," which then full into my hands, was a great discovery. I found a condition described that resembled mine in essentials. I was still more astonished at the similarity of my ideas to those I rend of in the writings of Sanker-Manock. I devoured them all with avidity, though the blood-curdling scenes often far outdid my imagination, and then excited my aversion. Later, in order to supply new foul for my fancy. I began to write descriptions of crotic scenes to my taste, and to make drawings of situations which, up to this time, I had painted only in imagination. In this, reality was entirely as indifferent matter to me. In the presence of a woman I was devoid of every sensual feeling; at most, at the sight of a feminine fout, there would come a fleeting wish to be treed upon by it.

This indifference, however, was only in relation to pure sensuality, In late boybood and early youth I was subject to an enthusiastic partiality for young girls of my acquaintance, with all the extravaguaces common to this youthful enthusiasm. But it never occurred to me to connect the world of my sensual thoughts with these pure Meals, I never had to overcome such a thought; one never came to me. This is the more remarkable, since to me my lastful funcies seemed very strange and mattainable in reality, but in no wise vile or obnexious. This, too, was a kind of poetry with me; but it was divided into two worlds,--the one hand was my heart, or, rather, my authetically excited fancy; on the other, my sensually infomed imagination. While my "elevated" feeling always had a certain young girl for its object, at other times I saw myself at the feet of a mature woman, who treated me as previously described. I never piaced any hely of my acquaintance in this risk. In dreams the two soberes of my crotic ideas occurred alternately, but never combined. Only the impres of the sensual sphere induced pollutions.

In my nineteenth year I allowed myself, with outward reinclears, but with inward desire, to be taken by friends to visit prostitutes. But there I experienced nothing but repugnance and aversion, and left as soon as possible, without leaving felt the faintest trace of semand excitament. Later, on my own initiative, I repeated the attempt, in order to convince myself as to whether I was impotent or not; for I was much irrelied by my unexpected failure in the first instance. The result was always the same,—I felt no excitament at all, and had not the slightest erection. In the first place, it was not possible for me to regard a real warman as an object of sensual gratification; and, furthermore, I could not renounce the conditions and situations which were the principal things in according for me, and about which nothing could induce me to spok a word. Imissio penis—the set to be undertaken by me—seemed to me absolutely senseless and unclean. Again, in the second place, there was also my repugnance for common women, and fear of infection.

In the occurring, in secret, my sexual life went on in the old fashion. Whenever my old fancies came to mind, violent erection occurred, and I provided ejeculations almost duily. I began to suffer with all kinds of nervous troubles, and now regarded myself as impotent, in spite of powerful erections and intense desire when I was alone. Nevertheless, from time to time I continued my experiments with prestitutes. In time I overcome my timidity, and in part my aversion to contact with common women; but I remained absolutely cold.

After I find, with advancing years, overcome to some extent my shyness and my inclination to indulge in dreams, in my sexual thought there was an approach to the normal, as I began to direct my interest to real persons. I was even successful in directing seneral thoughts to women of my acquaintance, without carrying ever any of my peculiar ideas from the other sphere. Thus I had some affairs with respectable girls. Embracing and kinning occurred; desire was excited, but not the power,—at least, it was too weak to allow me to think that under normal circumstances I should be virile. Of course, the attention I gave to the excitation of my sexual power was not calculated to favor this. Thus, always greatly askeded, I broke off the relations.

With this, my old habit continued. I was still a great quanist, even though with Issumed power. But my fancy no longer satisfied me entirely. I now began to follow both respectable women and others on the street; in winter, particularly those wearing velvet and fore. I often followed prostitutes to their homes, and had them perform manustrapration. I always thought I should find more real pleasure in that than in my fancies; but it was always less. When the woman took off her parments, my interest followed them. The empty clothing has never attracted me very strongly, but more than the nule female. The real object of my interest was the attired women. In this, velvet and fors play the most important part; but also all other articles of attire attracted me, and particularly the form as brought out by being and pudding. I had searcely may other interest in the unde female form than an asthetic one. I have always had a very great interest in the shoes of women, particularly in slippers with high books, which is always connected with the thought of being trod upon, or of submissively kissing the foot.

At last I overcame the last vestige of my shyness, and one day, to realize my dreams, had myself whipped, trod mean, etc., by a prostitute. The result was a great disappointment. What was done to me I felt to be rough, repagnant, and silly. The blows caused me nothing but pain; the situation, repagnance and shame. Nevertheless, I induced an ejeculation mechanically, with which, with the help of my ineignation, I transformed the real situation into that for which I longed. This—the really desired situation—differed from the actual essentially in that I conteit in imagination a woman who abused use with the same pleasure that I experienced in her maltrealment of me.

All my sexual fascies were creeked on the assumption in the woman of a tyrumical, cruel disposition, to which I wished to be subject. You are expressing the relation was a secondary matter to me. After the first altempt at an impossible realization, it was perfectly clear to se toward what my longing was directed. To be sure, in my institut drame, I had often passed beyond all ideas of abuse, and conceived a commanding woman, with an imperious mica, a word of command, a kine on the foot, etc.; but now I fully realized what it was that attracted me, so that fagellation was only the strongest means of expressing the principle, and in itself secondary.

In spite of this disappointment, after the first step, I did not shandon my efforts to realize my crotic ideas. I was confirm that, when once accustomed to the new reality, my fancy would find food in a for more intense activity. For my purpose I sought the most scitable women, and instructed them carefully in a complicated comely. In the I occasionally found that the way had been prepared for me by protecessors of like disposition. The value of these comedies, for the affect of my fancy on my sensuality, remained problematical. What these are seal scenes did for me, in the way of intensifying the subsidiary chromstances of the desired situation, caused a diminution of the intensity of the principal element, which my unaided fancy, without the consciousness of planned, course deception, could more easily bring up before me. My physical sensations, under the various punishments, were chargeable. The more perfect the self-deception, the more perfectly the pair was felt as pleasure.

Or, more correctly, the punishment was then conceived as a symbolic set. From this arose the illusion of the desired situation, which was then necompanied by an intense psychical feeling of pleasure. The lastful feeling then spread out over the whole body in lastful physical sensations, and thus the perception of the painful quality of the possibment was overcome. The process in the moral punishments—the busilestions to which I subjected myself—was similar, but simpler; because it was confined to the mental sphere. These were also attended with pleasurable feeling when the self-deception succeeded. It was selien, however, that it succeeded well, and never perfectly; there always remained a disturbing element in consciousness. Therefore, in the intervals, I returned to solitary consists. Moreover, in the other case, the conclusion of the act was usually an ejeculation provoked by commism; often an ejeculation without the sid of mechanical means.

Thus I went on for many years, with diminishing power, but with slightly diminished desire, and with the power of my peculiar sexual idea over me unchanged. And at present the condition of my vita sexualls is the same. Coitus, which I have never performed, still seems to me a strange and unclean set. I learned about it from descriptions of sexual dissipations. My own sexual ideas seem natural, and do not in the least offend my sensitive taste. Their realization, as previously mentioned, for various reasons, leaves me unsatisfied. I am pleased with pretty girls and women of respectability, but for a long time I have cessed to approach them. I have never attained, not sven partially, a direct, actual realization of my sexual fancy. As often as I have come into close relation with females, I have felt the woman's will to be be beneath mise, never vice versi. I have never met a woman manifesting a desire of mastery in sexual things. Women who wish to rais in the bousehold and exercise petticost sovereignty are entirely different from my crotic ideals.

My whole personality presents many shoremalities besides the perversion of my vita sexualis; my neuropathic condition is expressed in many mental and physical symptoms. Besides, I think I recognize in myself an original abnormality of cimreter in the nature of a resemblance to the feminine type; at least, I regard as of this unture my great weakness of will, and my great hold of courage in the presence of men and animals, which is in contrast with my coolness in the face of peril. My external appearance is entirely musculine.

The nuther of this autobiography also made me the following communication:—

"I always sought to find out whether the perular ideas that ruled me sexually were substrained by other men. Since the first stories about it socidentally came to my cars, I have sought everywhere to learn of it. Since it is really a process of inner consciousness, it is, of course, not easy to identify it, and it cannot always be done with certainty; but I assume the existence of mesoschism where I find perverse sexual acts that cannot be explained except by this dominating idea. I look upon this anomaly as wide-aprend.

"I have heard numerous stories about it from prostitutes here in Berlin, and in Vienna; and I thus learned how numerous my follow-refferens are. I am always careful not to describe my own experiences, or ask whether they know of such; but I allow these persons to relate their experiences just as they will.

"Simple fageliation is so common that almost every prostitute is familiar with it; but cases of real masochism are very frequent. The men subject to this perversion submit themselves to the most reduced cruckies. In this they always not the same farce with the instructed prostitutes,—humiliating subjection of the man, treading upon him, community, threats, and accidings that have been committed to memory; then fagellation, blows on various portions of the body, and all kinds of punishment, pricking with needles, etc. The scenes often and with setting but more frequently with spirulation without it. Twice prostitutes have shown me breavy iron chains with issudents, which their putrons had unde for them to put on them; and the dried peak, on which they kneeled; the seat set with needles, on which they sat at command; and many other similar things. Often the perverted man wishes the women to tic his penis so tightly as to come pain; to prick it with needles, make cuts in it with a knife, or beat it with a stick. Even the set of hanging is indulged in, it being cut short at just the right moment. Others have themselves scratched with a knife or dagger, but in the set the woman must threaten them with death. In all these things the symbolism of subjection is the most important factor. The woman is usually called 'mistrose'; the man, 'slave.'

"A man of high social standing, dressed as a servant, sat on the box of a corrisge and drove his mistress about. Here there may have been a conscious imitation of the 'Venus in Furs.' It seems to us that the writings of Sacker-Musech have done much to develop this perversion in those predisposed. It is peculiar that the inexplicable enthusians for furs is so frequently combined with this perversion. It, as well as that for velvet, has been peculiar to me from my earliest youth.

"All these comedies with prestitutes are for massochists only trouble some substitutes. Whether there is such a thing as a realization of massochistic dreams in love relations or not, I do not know. If it coun, it is certainly very infrequent; for this teste in women (asdism in women, as described by Sucher-Massoch) is very slifficult to find; and, too, the expression of sexual abnormalities finds greater obstacles in the modesty of women, etc., then in men. I myself have never noticed the slightest indications of anything of this kind, and have never been able to attempt an actual realization of my fancies. Once a non-confidingly talk me of his massochistic perversion, and said he had found his ideal."

The two following cases are similar to the foregoing:-

Case 4b. Mr. Z., sged 19, technicist, came for consultation became of a four of tabes. Father was nervous and died tabetic. Father's sister was insent. Several relatives are very nervous and peculiar. On closer examination the patient is found to have accust, spinal, and cereiral asthenix. He presents no symptoms of tabes dorsalis, nor does in give a history of them. Questions concerning abuse of the sexual organs bring out a confession of maximization practiced since youth. In the course of the examination the following interesting psycho-sexual assumlies come cent: At the age of five the vita sexualis began with the tropulse to whip blueself, as well as with the desire to see others whipped.
In this he sever thought of individuals as of one sex or the other. Finite do micros be practiced fingulation on himself and, in time, this indiced ejaculation. Long before this he had begun to antisty himself with masturbition, and always during the set reveled in imaginary scenes of whipping. After growing up he twice visited brothels to have houself logged by prostitutes. For this purpose he chose the prettiest girl by could find; but he was disappointed, and did not even have an erection, to my nothing of ejaculation. He recognized that the fagellation was subsidiary, and that the idea of subjection to the woman's will was the important thing. He realized this on the second treal. When he had the "thought of subjection," he was perfectly successful. In time, by straining his imagination with masochistic ideas, he performed coitus without flagellation ; but he found little satisfaction in it; so that he performed sexual intercourse in a masochistic way. He found pleasure in masochistic scenes, in the sense of his original desire for dagellation, only when he was flagellated of podicess, or, at least, only when he called up such a situation in imagination. At times of great excitability it was even aufficient if a pretty girl told stories of such scenes. He would thus have an organi, and usually ejaculation.

A very effectual fetichistic idea was early associated with this. He naticed that he was attracted and satisfied only by women wearing high heals and short jackets ("Humgarian fashion"). He does not know how he arrived at this fatichistic idea. Boys' legs with high heels also pleased him, but this charm was purely asthetic, without any senseral coloring; and he saot he had never noticed anything homosexual in himself. The patient referred his fetichism to his partiality for colves (legs). He is charmed by ladies' colves only when elegant shoes are on the feet. Nucle legs—feminine modity in general—do not in the least affect him sexually. A subordinate fetichistic idea for the patient is the masculine car. It is a leastful pleasure for him to put the sure of handsome men, i.e., men having beautiful ears. With men this pleasure is alight, but with momen it gives him great enjoyment.

He also has a weakness for cats. He thinks them simply beautiful; and their movements are very attractive to him. The sight of a cat can raise him from a holing of the deepest depression. Cats seem to him sured; he sees something divine in them? He does not know the tenson for this idioaynersity.

Of late he has also frequently had sodistic ideas about punishing boys. In these imaginary flagelistions both men and women play a part, but particularly the latter; and then his enjoyment is much more interes.

The patient finds that, with that which he recognizes and feels as masochism, there is something else which he profers to designate "papelien."

While his masochistic funcies and acts are entirely of a course, sensual mature, his "pagetam" consists of the idea of being a page to a beautiful girl. He conceives her as perfectly classe, but paquant; his relation to her, that of a slave, but perfectly shaste,—a purely platents solumission. This reveiling in the blea of serving such a "beautiful conture" as a page, is colored by a pleasurable feeling; but this is in as way sexual. He experienced in it an exquisite feeling of moral astisfaction, in contrast with the sensually-colored masochism; and, therefore, in could but regard it as secondly-rolored masochism;

At first sight there was nothing remarkable in the patient's appearance; but his polyis is almormally broad, the like are flat, and the price, as a whole, tilted and decidedly feminine. Eyes, neuropathic. He also mentions that he often has its hing and instful irritation at the name, and that there ("erogenous" area), oper ships, he can satisfy blusself.

The patient is troubled about his future. Help would be possible for him if he could but excite in himself an interest is women, but he will and imagination were too weak for that.

What the patient designates as "pageism" does not differ in any way from masschism, as may be seen when it is compared with the following cases of symbolic masschism, and others; and, further, upon the consideration that in this perversion coitus is avoided as an inadequate act; and from the fact that in such cases there is often a fantastic exaltation of the perverse ideal:—

Case 46. X, writer, aged 48, predisposed. Sexually hypermulatic from childhood. At the age of six he had dressus of being whipped ad nates by a woman. After them he would awake in intense butful excitoment; and thus he came to practice onanism. When eight your old he once saked the cook to whip him. From his teath year, arerastlispia. Until his twenty-fifth year he had dreams of fageliation or similar waking funcies, and included in openism. Three years ago be last an impulse to have himself whipped by a puells. The patient was undeceived, for neither erection nor ejaculation occurred. At twentyseven, another effort, with the thought to enforce erection and ejectiotion. This was finally made possible by the following artifice: While coltra was attempted, the puella had to tell him how she had mercilesily florged other impotent men, and threaten him with the same. Besides this, it was necessary for him to fancy that he was bound, enturing in the woman's power, helpless, and most painfully beaten by her. Upensionally, in order to become potent, it was necessary to have kimself actually bound. Thus coltus was possible. Pollutions were accompazied by instful feeling only when he (infrequently) dreamed that he was abused, or that he looked on while a puells whipped others. He arret had an intense, lastful pleasure in coltus. The only things in women that interest him are the hands. Powerful women with big fists are bi preference. At the same time, his desire for dagaintion is only ideal; fi with his great cuismenus sensitivement, at the most, a few strokes are sufficient. Howe from men were repugnant to him. He wishes to marry. From the impossibility of asking a decent woman to perform fagellation, and the doubt about being potent with such a warran, spring his amburrasoment and desire to recover.

In the foregoing three cases, for the most part, passive fiagellation serves the individual subject to this perversion of masochism as an expression of the desired situation of subjection to the woman. The same means is needed by a large number of masochists. But passive flagellation is a process which, as is known, has a tendency to induce erection reflexly by irritation of the nerves of the nates. This effect of flagellation is used by weakened debauchces to help their diminished power; and this perversity—not perversion—is very common. It is, therefore, necessary to ascertain in what relation the passive flagellation of the masochists stands to these dissipated individuals who are not psychically perverse, but playsically weakened.

It is not difficult to show that masochism is something essentially different from flagellation, and more comprehensive; that flagellation is rather a by-play,-one of the many means used for the purpose of masochistic gratification in the sense of subjection to the woman. For the masochist the principal thing is subjection to the woman; the ponishment is only the expression of this relation,-the most intense effect of it he can bring upon himself. For him the act has only a symbolic value, and is a means to the end of mental satisfaction of his peculiar desires. The essential thing is the desire for ill-treatment, as a sign of this subjection. Besides flagellation, and often without it, there are many other things which serve to express this subjection; as is shown by the following series of cases. This fact establishes a presumption of the existence of an original anomaly of sexual feeling,-a panesthesia sexualis. On the other hand, the individual that is weakened and not a subject of masochism, and who has himself fingellated, desires only a mechanical irritation of his spinal centre.

Whether, in a given case, it is simple (reflex) flagellation

Comp., rapez, Introduction, p. 28.

or masochism, is made clear by the individual's statements, and often by the secondary circumstances. The determination depends upon the following facts:—

In the first place, the impulse to passive flagellation exists ab origine in the masochist. The desire is felt before there has been any experience of the reflex effect, often first in dreams; as, for example, in Case 48. Secondly, with the masschist, as a rule, the flagellation is only one of many and various punishments which come into his mind as fancies and are often realized. In these other punishments, and the frequent acts expressing purely symbolic humiliations, which occur by the side of flagellation, there can, of course, be no thought of a reflex physical irritative effect. Thirdly, it is significant that, in the masochist, when the desired flagellation is carried out, it need have no aphrodisiac effect at all. Very often, indeed, there is a more or less perfect disappointment; in fact, always, if the masochist is not successful in his desire to create, by means of the pre-arranged programme, the illusion of the desired situation (to be in the woman's power), so that the woman ordered to carry out the act seems to be nothing more than the executive agent of his own will. If one cannot tickle one's self, no more can one feel one's self subject to a woman directed by one's own will. In reference to this important point, compare the three foregoing cases and Case 50.

Between masochism and simple (reflex) flagellation, there is a relation somewhat analogous to that existing between contrary sexual instinct and acquired pederasty. It does not lessen the value of this opinion that, in the masochist, the flagellation may also have the known reflex effect; or that a whipping received in childhood may have aroused lust for the first time, and thus simultaneously excited the latent masochistically-constituted vita sexualis. In this event, the case must be characterized by the conditions mentioned above, under the heads of "secondly" and "thirdly," in order to be masochistic. If the details of the origin of the case are not known, other circumstances, such as those mentioned above under "secondly," would make it clearly masochistic. This is illustrated in the two following cases:—

Case 47. A patient of Tarnovaky's had a person in his confidence rent a house during his attacks, and instruct its personnel (three prostitudes) in what was to be done with him. He would come there, and was there indiressed, manustoprated, and flaggillated, as ordered. He pretended to offer resistance, and lagged for mercy; then, as ordered, be was allowed to cat and sleep. But in spite of protest he was kept there, and beaten if he did not submit. Thus the affair would go on for some days. When the attack was over, he was dismissed; and he returned to his wife and children, who had no suspicion of his disease. The attacks occurred once or twice a year. (Tarnovaky, op. cit.)

Case 48, X., aged 34, greatly predisposed, suffers with contrary sexual instinct. For various reasons be last no opportunity to satisfy himself with most, in spite of great sexual desire. Occasionally he dreamed that a woman whipped him, and then had a pollution.

Through this dream he came to have prostitutes beat him as a substitute for love with men. Occasionally he would obtain a prostitute, undress himself completely (while she was not to take off a thing), and have her trend apon him, whip, and beat him. Que re summa libitine affectus perlem femines lambit quod solum sum libidinosum facere potent; tim ejaculationers assequitur. Then diagnot at the morally-debasing struction occurred, and he retired as quickly as possible.

Cases occur, however, in which passive flagellation alone constitutes the entire content of the masochistic fancies, without other ideas of humiliation, etc., and without any clear consciousness of the real nature of this expression of submission. Such cases are difficult to differentiate from those of simple reflex flagellation. A knowledge of the primary origin of the desire, before any experience of reflex stimuli (v. supra, under "first"), is the only thing that makes the differential diagnosis certain; taken with the circumstance that genuine masochists are perverse in their youth, and that the realization of their desires usually comes late, or undecrives them (v. supra, under "thirdly"); for the whole thing, for the most part, belongs to the sphere of the imagination.

The following case is of this nature:-

Case 49. Authorography.—In January, 1891, I received the following letter from a gentleman in Hungary: "In depression and despair of a life that shuts me out from all that makes burnen happiness, I come to you with the last gleam of hope of rescue from a condition which, if it costinue, can end only tragically.

"I am thirty years old, and come of a mother who suffered win periodical insunity. As early as my fourtoenth year absocutal seams tendencies were noticeable in me. It always gave me a certain limital pleasure to be whipped by boys of my own age, particularly when I was taken over the knee and spanked. It particularly delighted me when this was done by handsome young persons or boys having well formed legs and closely-fitting trousers. By means of such ideas I also eaus to masturbate; and I prarticed ournism quite frequently,—almost daily, and, in fact, in absolute ignorance of the terrible results of the vice. Thus it continued until my eighteenth year, when, thus far absolutely masuspecting, I was made aware of the vicious results of the practice.

"From this time began the terrible struggle with the desire to give it up, which I only too often abundanced. The farcies mentioned did not leave me; I longed to be whoped by landsome young persons aged from twenty to twenty-two years, wearing tight tronsers. My fancy was filled especially with young soldiers and housers. At times I was able to repress my imagination and avoid organism; but I then had pollutions with dreams of the same nature.

"After my twentieth year, to my autonishment, the sexual inclimation toward women, which I had noticed in commutes of my own age, and the occurrence of which I expected in myself, did not appear I was cold toward women, and subarrassed in their presence. At the same time, feminine multip was not unpleasant; on the contrary, there was something attractive about it, but my sensuality was not excited

"I twice attempted coites; I was not troubled about being in belwith the girl, but rather kissed and embraced her with pleasure, and even laid traces of crection, but that was all. Since then I have had no keps, and occasionally returned to quantum, which I had avoided for some months previously. Nevertheless, I cultivated social intercourse with ladies, and particularly young girls; and I was esteemed in society, and liked for my graceful sharing. I was always hoping that in this way my unhappy tendency would be overcome successfully, but in tain; it grew constantly stronger. Thus I have lived hours of wrechedness; and the ghost of satisfie has passed before we. I once coulded in a physician in Peath, but he had only the unital remedies for persons suffering with sexual weakness,—cold baths, quieting medicines, intercourse with women, etc.

"I tried everything in vain, until by accident a book on contrapsexual instinct fell into my hands, and gave me the last ray of hope. I have a respected position as a merchant, and appreciate theroughly the joys of family life; and I have an opportunity to marry, under the most favorable circumstances, a young girl whom I have, and who laves no But I feel the cruel impossibility of this step. I ander terribly in thinking about these repulsive abnormalities. My only hope lies in a cure by means of hypnosis. May it not be in vain!" Pity and a scientific interest induced me to invite the writer of the preceding lines to come to see me. Early in Peternry Mr. D. came. He was distinguished, pleasing, and muscaline in appearance. Examination of the case showed at to be one of mosochists. He distinctly remembered that, when he once saw follow-pupils whipped by the teacher, it gave him a Seeling of Instful pleasure. He cannot remember that he was ever whipped by a teacher. His musochism had been an obsclutely pressary manufestation, and incomprehensible to him. Only gradually and feate de miesz had be come to practice onanism, during which ideas of flagellation, in which he played the passive rôle, filled his mind. He had never had desire to be whipped by the teacher; he always wished to be flogged by fellow-pupils and well-grown young persons. Since maturity he had never been able to induce himself to satisfy his masochistic inclinations.

In intercourse with puellis he had repeatedly incl the thought to have himself whipped by them; but since this was not accompanied by sensual feeling, it was not carried out. The putient declares that his inclinations toward persons of his own sex are purely misochistic. In other respects he finds nothing interesting in men. Until his eighteenth year the patient had also sadistic tendencies. He was entireslastic about the position of the pedagogue and wanted to be a teacher in order to be able to flog boys. This ideal sadies later disappeared entirely. The patient complains that he feels alone in the world, like a parish, and that he is different from other men. But his libido toward women had much diminished, possibly as a result of his masturbation. He laid no srection at the sight of feminine charms, but the sight of a riding-whip or a come excited him powerfully sexually. When he attempted coitus, no masorblatic ideas occurred. Such ideas arose, however, whenever he saw attractive young men. He believed that if he were freed from his ideas of flagellation, he would be helped; for his sensuality would then direct itself in a normal path.

The patient has neuropathic eyes, but is free from all degenerative signs. In the direction of hereditary taint, it is noteworthy that his maternal grandfather was peculiar, and shot himself while in a psychopathic condition. The potient feels well, save for slight neurosthenic troubles. Patellar reflex increased. The genitals are perfectly normal. His dreams with pollutions are exclusively about fingulation by young persons, particularly soldiers with tight trousers.

The principles of treatment haid down were: I. Removal of the symptoms of neuraethenia. 2. Suggestive treatment looking to (a) aexidance of onanism; (b) indifference toward his own acx and the disappearance of thoughts of flagellation, both while awake and asleep; (r) libido exclusively toward persons of the opposite acx, the occurrence of erections at sight of beautiful women, complete power with women, and dreams of women exclusively. At the first sitting, by means of Bernheim's method, the patient passed quickly into a state of desp lethergy. At the second sitting (February 5) a cataleptic condition of the muscles was induced. Sittings almost daily. It was seen that stroking the brow induced deeper hypnosis with catalepsy, which, henever, did not go beyond deep lethergy. Suggestion was begun in the third sitting.

February 10. The patient mys that he has no longer any interest in men, but a growing interest in women. He begins to dream of women.

February 13. He feels himself free from mascohism during the day, and cames and whipping do not interest him any more. At night is still has "weak" dreams of flagellation concerning men, but without lustful feeling or pollution. A short time ago is had had a dress that was entirely strange, and without crotic coloring, to the effect that he whipped himself.

February 19. The patient attempted coitus with a purila planing to him. Erection was incomplete, and ejeculation did not occur; so be gave up the attempt. The patient finds that his libide toward women is still very slight. He was not discouraged by his failure, and expected ultimate success; for he felt free from his abnormal tendencies, and like another man. On February 29, unfortunately, the patient had to discontinue treatment, being called home by duties there.

The fact that traces of sadism (e. infra) were simultaneously present, lends certainty to the diagnosis of this radimentary case as one of masochism. The purely psychical character of this latter perversion is unquestionable. At the same time, the case is combined with incompletely developed contrary sexual instinct, an association not infrequent in masochists and sadists.

In contrast with this case of radimentary masochism, in which there is some difficulty of diagnosis, follows a typical case of masochism, in which the whole circle of ideas peculiar to this perversion appears completely developed. This case, in which there is a detailed personal description of the whole psychical state, is different from Case 44 only in that here there is no thought of a realization of the perverse fancies; and that, not withstanding the perversion of the vita sexualis, normal stimuli are so far effectual that sexual intercourse is possible under normal conditions.

Case 50. I am thirty-live years old, mentally and physically normal. Among all my relatives, in the direct as well as in the lateral line, I know of no case of mental disease. My father, who, at my ligth, was thirty years old, as far as I know, had a preference for voluntuous, large women.

Even in my early clobihood I loved to revel in bless about the absolute maxtery of one man over others. The thought of slavery had something exciting in it for me, and alike whether from the stand-point of master or servant. That one man could possess, sell, or whip another, caused me intense excitement; and in reading "Uncle Tem's Cabla" (which I read at about the beginning of puberty), I had erections. Particularly exciting for me was the thought of a man's being hitched up before a wagon in which another man sat with a whip, driving and whipping him. Butil my twentieth year these bless were purely objective and series, i.e., the one in subjugation in my fancy was another (not myself), and the master was not necessarily a woman. These ideas were, therefore, without effect on my sexual instinct, -6.c., on the way in which it was expressed. Though these ideas caused erections, yet I have never menturbased in my life; and from my nineteenth year I had coltan without the belo of these ideas and without any relation to them. I always had a great preference for siderly, voluntuous, large women, though I flid not secon younger ones.

After my twenty-first year my ideas became objective, and it became an essential thing that the "mistress" should be a woman over forty years old, tall, and powerful. From this time I was always, in my fascies, the subject; the "mistress" was a rough woman, who made use of me in every way, also sexually; who harnessed me before a carriage, and made me take her for a drive; whom I must follow like a dog; at whose fest I must lie naked, and he punished. i.e., whipped-by her. This was the constant element in my ideas, around which all others were grouped. In these fancies I always found endless pleasure, which caused erection, but never ejeculation. As a result of the induced sexual exritement, I would immediately seek a woman, preferably one corresponding exteriorly with my ideal, and have coitins with her without any actual imitation of my funcies, and asmetimes also without any thought of them during the set. At the same time, I also had inclination toward women of a different kind, and had coltas with them without being impelled to it by my fancy.

Notwithstanding all this, my life was not exceedingly abnormal sexually; yet these ideas were certain to occur periodically, and they have remained assentially muchanged. With growing sexual desire, the intervals constantly grew shorter. At the present time the ideas come every two or three weeks. If I have had cottue, the occurrence of the fancies is perhaps postponed. I have never attempted to realize my very definite and characteristic ideas,—a.e., to connect them with the objective world,—but I have contented myself with reveling in the thoughts; because I was convinced that my ideal would not allow even an approach to realize tion. The thought of a comedy with paid prostitutes always seemed to me silly and purposeless; for a person bleed by me could never take the place in my imagination of a "cruel mistress." I doubt whether there are sudistically constituted wearon like Sactor-Masock's heroines. But, if there were such women, and I had the fortune (!) to find one, still, in a wealst of reality, intercourse with her would always seem only like a farce to use. Indeed, I can say that, were I to become the slaws of a Messalina, I believe that, owing to the other necessary renunciation, my desired masure of life would soon pull on me, and in my land intervals I should try to obtain my freedom at all hazards.

Yet I have found a way in which to induce, in a certain sense a realization. After my sexual desire has been internely excited by remiing in my fancy, I go to a prostitute and there call up before my mind's eye, with great intensity, some seems of the kind mentioned, in which I play the principal rôle. After thinking of such a situation for about half an hour, with a constantly resulting erection, I perform ceitus with increased lustful pleasure and strong ejurulation. After the latter, the vision fades away. Aslamed, I depart as quickly as possible, and try not to think of the affair. Then, for about two weeks, I have no more such ideas; indeed, after a particularly satisfactory coitus, it may happen that, until the next attack, I have no sympathy whatever with masschidie ideas. But the next attack is sure to cope somer or later. I must, however, state that I also have coitus without being prepared by such ideas, especially, too, with women that are acquainted with me and my position, and in whose presence I ablier such fancies. Under the latter circumstances, however, I am not always potent, while, with muschistic ideas, my virility is perfect. It does not seem superfluous to add that otherwise, in my thought and feeling, I am very seathetic, and despise anything like maltreatment of a human being. Finally, I will not leave compositioned the fact that the form of address is of importance. In my fancies it is essential that the "mistress" address me in the second person (Du), while I must address her in the third (Sie). This circum stance of being thus familiarly addressed (Da) by a person so inclind, as the expression of absolute mastery, has, from my youth, given us lastful pleasure, and does to-day.

I had the fortune to find a wife who is in everything, but especially sexually, attractive to me; though, as I scarcely need any, she is so way resembles my masochistic ideal. She is gentle, but proud; for without the latter characteristic I cannot conceive such a thing as sexual characteristic Structure of the wave normal sexually; the masochistic attacks did not occur, and I had almost lost all thought of masochistic attacks did not occur, and I had almost lost all thought of masochistic attacks, which with the occurrence of libbilo, came the masochistic function again, which, in spite of my great love for my wife, accessibile occurs with another, with the accompaniment of masochistic ideas. It is here worthy of note that cosine survitalia, which was later resemed.

fiel not prove sufficient to banish the muscchistic ideas, as matochistic colous always does. As for the essential element in masochism, I am of the opinion that the ideas,—i.e., the mental element,—are the end and aim.

If the realization of the muscehistic ideas (i.e., passive fagellation, etc.) he the desired end, then it is in opposition with the fact that the mujority of muscehists never attempt realization; or, when this is attempted, great disappointment occurs, or at least the desired satisfaction is not obtained.

Thus the reveling in imagination is the principal thing; and, in fact, this gives an unspeakable delight that takes its subject beyond external things, beyond all troubles and cares.

It is an astonishing fact that there is an author, who, instend of keeping them to himself, as others do, discloses his imaginary ideals to the world in novels and romances. In "Venns in Fars," we find those that are like us in feeling,—word for word, line for line, are expressed the ideas so familiar to us, which we believe to be our own exclusive discovery.

Until then I did not think it possible that there could be, in any other beain than mine, the leatful thought of being harnessed to a plow and made to work like a draught-horse.

And the ill-temper of the mistress to be served at the toilet and hath; the imprisonment,—ah, how familiar such ideas are to us from childhood!

Therefore, perhaps by reason of this open disclosure of things that should be secret, the reading of this book shocks masochists, undeceives them, and exerts a curative influence.

Finally, I should mention that, according to my experience, the number of muscchists, especially in large cities, seems to be quite large. The only sources of such information are—since men do not reveal these things—words of prostitutes; and, since they agree on the essential points, it may be concluded that certain facts are proved.

Thus there is the fact that every experienced prestitute is accustomed to keep some suitable instrument (usually a whip) for flagellation; but it must be remembered that there are men who have themselves whipped simply to increase their sexual pleasure; who, in contrast with masschists, regard flagellation as a means to an end.

On the other hand, almost all prostitutes agree that there are many men who like to play "slave,"—i.e., like to be so called, and have themselves ecolded and trod upon and beaten. As has been said, the number of musechists is larger than has yet been dreamed.

As you can imagine, reading the "New Investigations" made a great impression on me. I should like to have faith in a cure, is a legical cure, so to speak, in amordance with the motio: "Tout correpressive clear tout guérir." (To understand all is to cure all.)

A The author's "New Foundampen and 6. Gebiet d. Psychopathia Sexualis," Systems, 1991, which is, for the most part, incorporated in this edition of "Psychopathia Sexualis."

Of course the word cure is to be taken with some limitation, and there must be a distinction made between general feelings and coursele taken. The former can never be overcome; they come like a stroke of lightning, are there, and one does not know whence or how.

But this practice of mesoculum in imagination, by means of concrete, associated ideas, can be avoided, or at least restricted.

Now the thing is changed. I say to myself: Wint! you busy your mind with things which not only the esthetic sense of others, but also your own, disapproves? You regard that as beautiful and describe which, in your own judgment, is at once ugly, coarse, silly, and impossible? You long for a situation which in reality you can never obtain? This opposing idea has an immediate inhibitory and undescring effect, and takes the edge off the facey. Too, since reading the "New Investigations" (early this year), I have actually not revoled is my facey once, though the masochistic tendency has occurred with regularity.

I must also confess that, in spite of its marked pathological character, massochism is not only incapable of destroying my pleasure is life, but it does not in the lenst affect my outward life. When not in a masschistic state, as far as feeling and action are concerned, I am a perfectly normal man. During the activity of the massochistic tendencies there is, of course, a great revolution in my besing, but my outward manner of life auffers no change; I have a calling that makes it necessary for me to move much in public, and I pursue it in the massochistic condition as well to over.

The author of the foregoing lines also sends me the following notes:—

i. Masochism, necording to my experience, is, under all circumstances, congenital, and never nequired by the individual. I know positively that I was never spanked; that my masochistic ideas were manifested from my earliest youth; and that, as long as I have been capable of thinking. I have had such thoughts. If the origin of them had been the result of a particular event, especially of a bestug, I should certainly not have forgotten it. It is characteristic that the ideas were present before there was any libids. At that time the ideas were absolutely sexions. I remember that, while a boy, it affected (not to say excited) me intensely when an older boy addressed me in the accord person (Du), while I spoke to him in the third (Sic). I would keep up a conversation with him, and have the exclusing of address take pince as often as possible. Later, when I had become more mature examily, such things affected me only whom they occurred with a married woman, and one relatively old.

2. Physically and mentally I am in all respects nuscelline. I have a superabundant growth of board, and my whole body is vary hirry. In my relations to the female sex that are not masochistic, the dominating position of the man is an antispensible condition, and any attempt to change is would meet with my energetic opposition. I am energetic, if not ever-courageous; but the want of courage is not manifest when my pride is squired. I am not sensitive to events in nature (thunder-storms, storms at sen, etc.).

Too, my unsochistic tendencies have nothing feminine or effeminate about them (f). To be sure, in these the inclination to be sought and desired by the woman is dominant; but the general relation desired with her is not that in which a woman stands to a man, but that of the slave to the master, the domestic animal to its owner. If one regards the sitimate aim of masochism without projudice, it must be acknowledged that its ideal is the position of a dog or horse. Both are award by masters, and punished by them; and the masters are responsible to no one. Just this milimited power of life and death, as exercised over slaves and domestic salimits, is the end and aim of all masochistic ideas.

3. The foundation of all masochistic ideas is littldo; and as this chies and flows, so do the masochistic funcies. On the other hand, as soon as the ideas are present, they greatly intensify the likido. I am by no means excessively sensual naturally. However, when the masochistic ideas occur, I am impelled to contus at any cost (for the most part I am driven to the towest womess); and if these impulses are not soon obeyed, libido soon becomes almost satyrinais. One is almost justified in looking upon this as a circulus vitioses.

Libido occurs either in the course of time, or as the result of especial excitement (also of a kind that is not masochistic,—e.g., kissing). In spite of its manner of origin, this libido, by virtue of the masochistic ideas it engenders, is soon transformed into a masochistic and impure libido.

Moreover, there is no doubt that external, accidental impressions, particularly loitering in the streets of a large city, greatly intensity the desire. The sight of beautiful and imposing female forms, is nature as well as in art, is exciting. For those antiject to associates,—at least during the attacks,—the whole external world becomes associatic. The box on the ear administered by the teacher to the pupil and the crack of the driver's whip make deep impressions on the massociate, while they know him indifferent or annoy him when he is not in the massochistic state.

I This difference of courage is the face of events in enture, on the care hand, and in the face of personal conflict, on the other, is certainly councidable (comp. Care 61), even though it is the only indication of effections or excessed in this case.

4. An example of masochistic ideas follows: "She" is a peasant woman,-a rough, tall, large-board woman of forty or fifty years. She as the possessor of a small, remote farm, which she works with the help of her slave alone. The work begins before sunrise. At four o'clock is the morning she opens the shot where she has kept me shin up one night, and wakens me, as I lie on the ground, with a kick; then she leads me out and harnesses me to a milk-eart bound for town. She leads me by a halter, and urges use along. On the road she gets on the hearthyloaded wagon, and sleeps until the destination is reached. There, in the open market-place of the town, still harmested to the wagon, I lie flows on the lare ground to rest. Those passing knock against me or step or me, without giving me any attention. After the stock is sold, we must homeward. After a short rest the work bugins again, always under the direction of the mistress, who holds me by the halter and urges as on. At seven or eight o'clock at night I am put up to rest, and sizes until the next morning, when the same thing begins again. Work and blows, blows and work | no pleasure, no recreation, day in and day out

Another time I fancy myself in the rôle of a paid lover of an elderly female road, who makes use of me, sexually, in the most reckless manner; and in this direction makes the most shameful demands on me. If I do not submit to these writingly, I am bester and punished; and at the same time, she despises me unspeakably; gives me the lowest homework to do; and on every occasion shows me how low an opinion she has of my meshood.

I cannot clothe the character of masochism in any better formula than the following: A real masochist, without reflection, prefers the kick of a low woman to the embrace of a Venus.

5. In rending Sacher-Masoch, it struck me that in masochists, now and then, there was also an undercurrent of sadistic feeling. Too, I have now and then discovered in myself spondic feelings of sadism. I must remark, however, that the sadistic feelings are not so marked as the masochistic; and that, aside from the fact that they are infrequently accessory, the sadistic fancies never leave the sphere of abstract feeling, and, above all, never take the form of concrete, connected ideas (like those above mentioned). The effect on libido, however, is the same with both.

If this case is remarkable on account of the complete development of the psychical state that constitutes masochism, the following one is noteworthy because of the great extravagance of the acts resulting from the perversion. The case is also purticularly suited to make clear the reason for the subjection and humiliation at the hands of the woman, and the peculiar sexual coloring of the resulting situations:— Case $1. Masschism.—Mr. Z., official, aged 59; tall, muscular, healthy. He is said to come of healthy parentage, but his father was thirty years older than his mother. A sister, two years older than Z., suffers with definitions of persecution. There is nothing remarkable in Z.'s external appearance. Skeleton entirely massuline; abundant beard, but so hair on trunk. He characterizes himself as a man of sanguine temperament, whom no one can depress; though inscrible and quick-tempered, in is quick to regret outbursts.

Z, says he has never masterbated. From his youth there have been nightly pollutions, in which girls play a part; but the sexual act, never. For example, he dreams that a pleasing woman lies heavily on him, or that, as he lies sleeping on the grass, she playfully walks up his back. Z. had always been everse to coltus with a woman. This act seemed animal to him. Nevertheless, he was drawn to women. It was only in the society of beautiful woman and girls that he felt well and in his place.

He was very gallant without being forward.

A voluptious women of beautiful form, and particularly with a pretty foot, when sented, had the power to throw him into intense excitement. He was impelled to offer himself as a chair, in order "to offer so much devotion." A kick, a box on the ear from her, would be heaven to him. He had a horror at the thought of coitus with her. He felt the need to serve the woman. He thought how ladies liked to ride. He reveled in the thought of how fine it would be to be wearied by the burden of a beautiful woman, in order to give her pleasure. He pointed the situation in all colors; thought of the beautiful foot armed with spars, the beautiful lags, and the soft, full thighs. Every beautiful majors, the beautiful lags, and the soft, full thighs. Every beautiful majors, the beautiful lags, and the soft, full thighs. Every beautiful majors woman, every pretty female foot, slways excited his imagination; but he never betrayed the peculiar feelings that seemed to him almormal, and was able to control himself. But he felt no need to fight squinst them; on the contrast, it would have burt him had he been compelled to give up the feelings that had become so dear to him.

At the age of thirty-two Z, happened to make the nequalitance of an attractive woman, aged twenty-seven, who had been separated from her husband, and whom he found in need. He took her, and worked for her, without any selfah motive, for mouths. One evening she impatiently demanded sexual satisfaction from him, and almost used violence. Coltus was successful. Z, took the woman, fixed with her, and indulged in coits moderately; but coltus was more a burden than a pleasure; erections became weak, and he could no longer satisfy the woman. She funly declared that she would not have intercourse with him, became he only excited without satisfying her. Though he loved the woman very wach, he could not give up his pseuliar fancies. After this he lived with her only in friendly relations, and deeply regretted that he could not serve her in the way she desired.

Fear of how she would receive his propositions, and a feeling of shame, kept him from confessing. He found a substitute in his dream. Thus, for example, he dreamed that he was a proud, dery steed, ridden by a besimiful lady. He feit her weight, the bit he had to obey, the pressare of the thighs on his fishks; he heard her beautiful, lovous raise The exertion threw him into a perspiration; the touch of the spandid the rest, and always induced pollution with great histful pleasure. At other times be dreamed that he was a small, weak horse. Then a here, heavy woman came and mounted the horse, said set off on a loss journey in the mountains. Becklessly, and without mercy, she allowed the poor animal to feet her weight; she made herself confectable on his took; while he threatened to give out under her, she had the greatest enjoyment, and with calm mind enjoyed the leantiful sceners. Under the infloruce of such dreams, seven years ago Z overcame his relationce, in order to experience such things in reality. He was such conful in creating suitable opportunity. He speaks of it as follows: "I knew how to arrange it so that on an occasion she would, of her own will, sent herself on my tack. Then I endervoyed to make this situation as pleasant as possible, and easily mode it so that on the next reasion side said, spontarcomby: 'Come, give me a little ride!' Swelling with pride, and with both hands lexced on a chair, I made my back horizontal, and she mounted astride, after the manner of a man. I then did the best I could be imitate the movements of a horse, and loved to have her trest me his a horse, without any thought of me. She could best, peck, scold, or caress me, just us she felt inclined. I could carry to my lack persons weighing from sixty to eighty kilos, for half or three-quarters of an hour, without interruption. At the end of this time I usually asked for a rest. During this the intercourse between the mistress and me was perfectly harmless and without any relation to what had preceded. After about a quarter of an hour I was always rooted, and placed myself at the disposal of the mistress again. When time and circumstances allowed it, I did this three or four times in succession. It sometimes imported that I practiced it both in the morning and afternoon. After it I never felt weary or had any uncomfortable feeling; but on such days I had very little appetite. When possible, I liked best to have my trunk, that I might fed the rider more perfectly. The mistress had to be decent. I liked bet best in pretty shoes and stockings, with short, closed drawers, reaching to the knee; with the upper portion of her person completely drawni, and with list and gloves."

Mr. Z. further says that he has not performed coitus in seven years) but he thinks he is potent. The riding was a perfect substitute for that " animal net," even when ejaculation was not induced.

For eight months Z. had determined to give up his masschistic play, and had kept his determination. But he thought that if a womin only inif-way pretty were to address him directly, and may, "Come. I want to ride you," he would not be strong enough to withstand the temptation. Z. wishes to know whether his abnormality is carable; whether he is unworthy as a victors man, or an invalid deserving pity.

The following case seems very similar:-

Case 52. A man finds entisfaction in the following manner: Occasionally he goes to a pucific publics. Here he has a pocusian ring, like those used in hanging curtains, put on his years. Two cords are attached to the ring and drawn backward between his legs and attached to the ring and drawn backward between his legs and attached to the bedstend. Then he tells the women to beat him merculessly with a whip and cry "whox" to him constantly, and treat and abuse him as if he were an unruly horse. The more the woman spars him on to pull, with shouts and blows, the greater his sexual excitement becomes. Erection occurs (probably mechanically favored by compression of the dorsal vein of the pents, which, when the cords are strained, must be closed by the pressure of the hard ring). With increasing erection, the whole number is compressed by the ring, and finally speculation occurs, with butful feeling.

Even in the foregoing series of eases, with other things, the act of being walked upon has played a rôle as a means of expressing the unasochistic situations of humiliation and pans. The exclusive and most extensive use of this means for perverse excitation and satisfaction is shown in the following classical case of masochism, which Hammond reports (op. cit., p. 28) from an observation by Dr. Cox., of Colorado:—

Case 50. X., a model inshand, very moral, the father of several children, has times—i.e., attacks—in which he visits brothels, closures two or three of the largest girls, and shuts himself up with them. He haves the upper portion of his body, lies down on the floor, crosses his hands on his abdoman, closes his eyes, and then has the girls walk over his naked breast, neck, and face, arging them at every step to press hand on his flash with the heels of their shoes. Sometimes he wants a heavier girl, or some other act still more cross than this procedure. After two or three hours he has enough. He pays the girls with wise and money, raths his blue braises, dresses himself, pays his bill, and goes back to his business, only to give himself the same strange pleasure again after a few weeks.

Gensionally it happens that he has one of the girls stand on his breast; and the others then turn her around until his skin is torn and bleeding from the turning of the beels of her shoes. Frequently one of the girls has to stand on him in such a way that one shorts over the eyes, with its beel pressing on one eye, while the other rests arrow his mark. In this position he endures the pressure of a person morging about one hundred and lifty pounds for four or five minutes. The number speaks of durins of similar cases that are known to him. Resmood presumes, with reason, that this man had become impotent for intercourse with women; that, in this strange procedure, he found as equinalent for rollins; and that, when the heels draw blood, he had pleasant sexual feelings, accompanied by spaniation.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Transactions of the Colorado State Modical Society, quoted in the Allendet and Neurologist, 1883, p. 345.

The ten cases of masochism thus far described, and the numerous analogous cases mentioned by those who report them, form a counterpart to the previously described group "c" of sadism. Just as in sadism men excite and satisfy themselves by maltreating women, so in masochism the same effect is sought in the passive reception of similar abuse. But group "a" of the sadists,-that of lust-murder,-strange as it may seem, is not without its counterpart in masochism. In its extreme consquences, masochism must lead to the desire to be killed by a person of the opposite sex, in the same way that sadism has its acme in active lust-murder. But the instinct of self-preservation opposes such a result; so that the extreme is not actually carried out. When, however, the whole structure of masschistic ideas is purely psychical, in the imagination of such individuals, even the extreme may be reached; as the following case shows:-

Case 54. A middle-aged man, married and the father of a family, who has always led a normal vita sexualis, but who says he comes of a very narrous family, unless the following communication: In his early youth he was powerfully excited sexually at the sight of a women alsoghtering an animal with a knife. From that time, for many years, he had reveiled in the Instfully-colored tiles of being stabled and out and even killed by women with knives. Later, after the beginning of normal sexual intercourse, these ideas lost completely their percent stimulus for him.

This case should be compared with the statements under under Case 44, according to which men find sexual pleasure in being lightly pricked with knives in the hands of women, who, at the same time, threaten them with death.

Such fineies, perhaps, give the key to an understanding of the following strange case, for which I am indebted to a communication from Dr. Körber, of Rankan:-

Case 50. A lady makes me the following communication: While still a young and insocent girl, she was married to a men of about thirty years. On their worlding night he forced a towel and acap into her hands, and, without any other expression of love, wanted her to lather his clein and neck (as if for shaving). The inexperienced young wife did it, and was not a little autonished, during the first weeks of married life, to learn its secrets in absolutely no other form. Her histand always told her that it gave him the greatest delight to have his face lathered by her. Later, after she had sought the advice of friends, she induced her husband to perform coltus, and had three children in the course of time (by him, she states with every assurance). The lastened is industrious and reliable, but a moody man, with little perseverance; by occupation a merchant.

It may be inferred that this man conceived the act of being shaved (i.e., the lathering as a preparatory measure) as a rudimentary, symbolic realization of ideas of injury or death, or of funcies about knives; like those the man previously mentioned had had in his youth, and by means of which he had been sexually excited and satisfied. The perfect sudistic counterpart to this case, looked upon in this light, is offered by Case 35, which is a case of symbolic sadism.

At any rate, there is a whole group of masochists who satisfy themselves with the symbolic representations of situations corresponding with their perversion; a group that corresponds with group "e" of "symbolic" sadists, just as the previously mentioned cases of masochism correspond with the groups "e" and "a" of sadism. Thus, just as the perverse longings of the masochist may, on the one hand, advance to "passive lust-murder" (to be sure, only in imagination); so, on the other land, they may be satisfied with simple symbolic representations of the desired situations, which otherwise are expressed in acts of cruelty (this, of course, taken objectively, goes much further than the idea of being murdered, but in fact not so far, owing to the determining subjective conditions).

With Case 55, other similar cases should be here described, in which the acts desired and planned by the masochist have a purely symbolic character, and, to a certain extent, serve to indicate the desired situation.

Case 56. (Pascal, "Igiene dell' amore.") Every three mouths a man of about forty-five years would visit a certain prestitute, and pay her ben frances for the following art. The puells had to undreas him, the his hands and feet, handage his eyes, and draw the curtains of the who dows. Then she would have her guest sit down an a sofa, and had to leave him there alone. After half an hour she had to come lack and satisfied him. Then the man would pay her and leave perfectly satisfied, to repeat his visit in about three mouths.

In the dark this man seems to have extended this situation, of being helpless in the hands of a woman, further in imagination. The following case, in which again a complicated county, in the sense of masochistic desires, is played, is still more peruliar:—

Case 57. (Dr. Pascal, 1861.) A gentleman in Paris was accustomed to call an certain evenings at a bouse where a woman, the awner, acceded to his peculiar desire. He entered the sales in full-dress, and the likewise in evening toilette, and to receive him with a very haughly manner. He addressed her as "Marquise," and she had to call ten "dear Count." Then he spoke of his good fortune in finding her alone, of his lare for her, and of a lover's rendervous. At this the lady had to feel insoled. The pseudo-count grew bolder and bolder, and asked the pseudo-motoquise for a kins on her shoulder. There is an angry scene; the tell is rung; a servant, prepared for the occasion, appears, and throws the count out of the house. He departs well satisfied, and pays the address to the farce handsomety.

In connection with this case of symbolic masochism, two more are here given, in which the psychical perversion was artirely confined to the sphere of thought and imagination, and no realization was attempted. The first is that of an individual, mentally and physically predisposed, bearing degenerative signs, in whom mental and physical impotence occurred early:—

Case 58. Mr. Z., aged 22, single, was torought to me by his father for medical advice, became he was very nervous and apparently absornce sexually. Mother and maternal grandmother were issues. He father legal him at a time when he was suffering severely acressly.

Patient is said to have been a very lively and talented child. At the age of seven he was noticed to practice musturbation. After his risk year he became institutive, forgetful, and did not progress in his studies, constantly requiring help and protection. With difficulty he got through the Gymnasium, and during his time of freedom had attracted attention by his indalence, absent-mandedness, and various feeling acts.

Consultation was occasioned by an occurrence on the street, in which Z, had forced himself on a young girl in a very impetuous memor, and in great excitement had tried to have a conversation with her.

The potient gave as a reason, that, by conversing with a respectable girl, he wished to excite himself so that he could be potent in coltus with a prostitute!

His father characterizes him as a man of perfectly good disposition, moral, but lazy, and disastisfied with himself; as one often in despair about his want of success in life; as indolent, and interested in nothing but music, for which he possesses great talent.

The patient's exterior—his plugice-phalic head; his large, prominent ears; the dedicient innervation of the right facialis about the mouth; the neuropathic expression of the eyes—indicates a degenerate, neuropathic individual.

Z. is tall, of powerful frame, and, in all respects, of musculine appearance. Pelvis masonline; testicles well developed; penis remarkably large; mons veneris with shoudant hair. The right testicle hange much lower than the left; the cremasteric reflex is weak on both sides. The nationt is below the average intellectually. He feels his deficiency, complains of his indulence, and sake to have his will strongthened. His awkward, embarrassed mamor, timid glances, and relaxed attende, point to masturbation. The patient confesses that from his sevents. year, until a year and a half ago, he practiced it, years at a time, from eight to ten times daily. Until a few years ago, when he became neurasthenic (reptalic pressure, loss of mental power, spiral irritation, etc.), he says he niways found great sensual pleasure in it. Since then this had been lost, and the desire to measurable had disappeared. He had consimily grown more bashful and indolest, less excreptic, and more cowardly and apprecionsive. He had lost interest in everything, and did his business only from a sense of duty, feeling very low-spirited. He had sever thought of coites, and, from his stand-point as an onanist, he could not understand how others could find pleasure in it.

Investigations in the direction of contrary sexual instinct gave a negative result. He says he never was drawn toward persons of his own sex; he rather thinks that he has now and then had a weak inclination for females. He asserts that he came to maxturbate independently. In his thirteenth year he first noticed ejaculations as a result of masturbate manipulations.

It was only after long persuasion that Z. consented to entirely unwell his situ sexualis. As his statements, which follow, show, he may be obscilled as a case of ideal massichism, with rudimentary sadism. The patient distinctly remembers that, at the age of six, without any cause, he had "ideas of violence." He was compelled to imagine that a servant-girl spread his legs apart and showed his genitals to mother; that she tried to throw him into cold or list water, in order to cause him pain. These "ideas of violence" were attended with lustful feeling, and became the cause of musturbatic manipulations. Later the patient called them up voluntarily, in order to invite himself to musturbation. They also played a part in his dreams; but they never induced polintar, apparently because the patient maximizated excessively during the day.

In time, to these mascalistic "ideas of violence," others of a satisfic violence were added. At first they were scenes in which boys family practiced consists on one another, or cut off the genitals. He offer integrined himself such a boy, now in an active, now in a passine, risk. Later he basical himself with mental portures of girls and vacuum that exhibited themselves to one another. He receiled in the thought, for example, of a servant-girl operating another girls legs apart and pulling the general hist; or in the thought of boys treating girls creelly, and pricking and pinching their generals.

Such ideas also always induced sexual excitement, but he never experienced any impulse to carry them out actively or to have them performed on himself positively. It satisfied him to use them for maximization. Since a year and a half ago, with diminishing sexual imagination and little), these ideas and impulses had become infrequent, but their content remained mechanged. The masoriastic "ideas of violents" pre-dominated over the suffictic. Now, when he sees a indy, he has the thought that she has sexual ideas like his own. In this way, in part, he explains his embarrosament in social intercourse. Owing to the fact that he had beand that he would get rid of his burdensome sexual idea, if he were to accustom himself to natural sexual indulgence, during the last year and a half he has twice attempted coston though he only experienced repugnance, and was not confident of success. On both occasions the attempt was a finese. The second time he made to attempt, he felt such a version that he pushed the girl away and find.

The second case is the following one, placed at my disposal by a colleague. Even though it be aphoristic, it seems particularly suited to throw a clear light on the distinctive element of masochism,—the consciousness of subjection, in its perular psycho-sexual effect:—

Case 59. Moscohism.—Z., aged 21, artist. He is powerfully infit, of plensing appearance, and is said to be free from hereditary taint. Healthy in youth, since his twenty-third year he has been nervous and inclined to be hypochondriscal. Though inclined to includence assually.

he is not very virile. In spite of associations with females, his relations with them are limited to innocent attentions. At the same time, his desire to devote himself to women that are cold toward him is remarkable. Since his twenty-lifth year he has noticed that females, so matter how agily, always excite him sexually, whenever he discovers anything demineering in their character. An augry word from the lips of such a woman is sufficient to give him the most violent erections. Time, one day, he sat in a café and heard the (agily) female cashier social the waiters in a load voice. This threw him into the most interse sexual exciteneent, which soon induced ejaculation. Z. requires the women, with stom he is to large sexual intercourse, to repulse and among him in surious ways. Be thinks that only a woman like the heroines of Sacher-Muscele's romances could charm him.

Cases like this, in which the whole perversion of the vita sexualis is contined to the sphere of imagination,—to the inner world of thought and instinct,—and only accidentally comes to the knowledge of others, do not seem to be infrequent. Their practical significance, like that of masochism in general (which has not the great forensic importance of sadism), is confined to the psychical impotence to which such individuals, as a rule, become subject; and to the intense impulse to solitary indulgence, with adequate imaginary ideas, and its results.

That masochism is a perversion of uncommonly frequent occurrence is sufficiently shown by the relatively large number of cases that have thus far been studied scientifically, as well as by the agreement of the various statements reported.

The works concerning prostitution in large cities also contain numerous statements concerning this matter.

Léo Taxil (op. cit., p. 228) describes masochistic scenes in Parisian brothels. The man affected with this perversion is there also called "slave."

Coffiguon ("Le corruption à Paris") has a chapter in his book entitled "Les Passionels," which contains contributions to this subject.

It is interesting and worthy of mention, that one of the most eslebrated of men was subject to this perversion, and describes it in his autobiography (though somewhat erroneously). From "Jean Jacques Rousseau's Confessions" it is evident that he was affected with masochism.

Rousseau, with reference to whose life and unlady Möbbus (* 2. J. Roussean's Krankengeschichte," Leipzig, 1889) and Chatelain (1 La fale de J. J. Roussessu," Neuclatel, 1850) may be consulted, tells, in his "Confessions" (part i, book i), how Miss Lumberrier, aged thirty, grantly inpressed him when he was eight years old and lived with her brother as his supil. Her solicitude, when he could not immediately somer a question, and her threats to punish him if he did not learn well, make the despest impression on him. When, one day, he had blows at hir hands, with the feeling of pain and shame, he also experienced sensual pleasure that incited a great desire to be whipped by her again. It was only for fear of disturbing the indy, that Rousseau falled to make relatopportunities to experience this lastful, sensual feeling. One day, however, he unintentionally gave cause for a whipping at Miss Lamberele's This was the last; for Miss Lumbercier must have noticed something of the peculiar effect of the punishment; and from this time on she did not allow the night-year-old boy to sleep in her room. From this time Rousseau felt a desire to have himself punished by lades pleasing to him, a fo Lumbergier; but he asserts that until his youth he knew nothing of the relation of the sexes to each other. As is known. Bousseau was first introduced to the real mysteries of love in his thirtioth year, and lost his innocence through Madame de Warrers. Until that time he had bed only feelings and impulses attracting him to woman, in the nature of passive disgellation and other maschittle idea.

Rousseau describes, in extenso, how he suffered, with his great sexual desires, by reason of his peculiar sensuality, which had undoubtedly been awakened by his whippings; for he reveled in desire, and could not disclose his longings. It would be erroneous, however, to suppose that Rousseau was convened merely with flagellation. Flagellation only awakened ideas of a masochistic nature. At least, in these ideas lies the psychological nucleus of his interesting study of self. The essential element with Rousseau was the feeling of subjection to the woman. This is clearly shown by the "Confessions," in which he expressly emphasizes that "Eire our genous d'one maîtress impérieus, obéir à sea ardres, avoir des pardons à lui demander,—etuiest pour ousi de très donces jonissances."

This passage proves that the consciousness of subjection and humiliation before the woman was the most important element.

<sup>1 &</sup>quot; To be at the bet of an imperious miscouse, to obey for orders; to be competed to see her for puriou,—these chings are my most intense delight."

To be sure, Ronsseau was himself in error in supposing that this impulse to be humilisted before a woman had arisen by association of ideas from the idea of flagellation:—

"N'esant jamais déclarer mon goût, je l'amusais du moins par des rapports qui m'en conservaient l'idée."1

It is only in connection with the numerous cases of masochism, the existence of which has now been established, and among which there are so many that are in nowise connected with flagellation, showing the primary and pure psychical character of this instinct of subjection,—it is only in connection with these cases that a complete insight into Rousseau's case is obtained, and the error detected into which he necessarily fell in the analysis of his own condition.

Binet (Reese Authropologique, xxiv, p. 256), who analyzes Rousseau's case in detail, also justly calls attention to its masochistic significance, when he says: "Ce qu'aime Rousseau dans les femmes, ce n'est pas seulement le soureil froncé, la main levée, le regard sévère, l'attitude impérieuse, c'est aussi l'état émotionnel, dont ces faits sont la traduction extérieure; il aime la femme fière, dédaigneuse, l'écrasant à ses pieds du poids de sa royale colère."

The solution of this enigmatical psychological fact Binet finds in his assumption that it is an instance of fetichism, only with the difference that the object of the fetichism—i.e., the object of individual attraction (fetich)—is not a portion of the body, like a hand or foot, but a mental peculiarity. This enthusiasm he calls "omour spiritualists," in contrast with "smoor physique," as manifested in ordinary fetichism.

This deduction is acute, but it gives only a word with which to designate a fact, not a solution of it. Whether an explanation is possible will later occupy our attention.

There were also elements of masochism (and sadism) in the

<sup>1.</sup> Sever during to express my desire, I at least gave it only under circumstances that seved to preserve in our the idea of 20."

I've What Rossman loves to women is not only the frowning form, the threatening band, the angry glainer, the importons attitude, but W is also the secutional state of which there are the objective translation: he loves the force, disdataful woman who crushes him at her fest with the weight of her reyal displeasure."

celebrated, or notorious. French writer, C. P. Baudelaire, who died in some.

Basiclaire came of an insane and eccentric family. From his young be was mentally abnormal. His with sexualis was decidedly abnormal. He had love-offsire with ugly, repulsive women,—negresses, dwarfs, giuntesses. About a very beautiful woman, he expressed the wish to see her hong up by her hands, and to kiss her feet. This enthusiasm for the maked foot also appears in one of his glowing posms as the equivalent of sexual indulgence. He said women were animals who had to be shut up, heaten, and fed well. The man displaying these masschistic and sadistic inclinations died of paretic dementia. (Lombroso, "The Man of Gesius.")

In scientific literature, the conditions that constitute masochism have not received attention until recently. All there is to mention is that Tarnowsky ("die Krunkhaften Erscheinungen des Geschlechtssmus," Berlin, 1886) relates that he has known happily married, intellectual men, who from time to time felt an irresistible impulse to subject themselves to the coarsest, synical treatment,-to scoldings or blows from passive or active pederasts, or prostitutes. It is worthy of remark that, in Tamowsky's observation, in certain cases blows, even when they draw blood, do not bring the result desired (virility, or at least ejaculation during flagellation) by those given to passive flagel-"The individual must then be undressed by force, his hands tied, fastened to a bench, etc., during which he funcies that he makes opposition, scolds, and pretends to resist. Only under such circumstances do the blows induce excitement that leads to execulation."

O. Zimmermann's work, "Die Wonne des Leids," Leipzig. 1885, also contributes much to this subject, taken from the history and literature.

Of late the subject has been given much attention.

I However, the domain of masseshies must be sharply differentiated from the principal subject of that work, which is, that here contains an element of suffering. Correspond fore the always been described as "secret, but secretail;" and posts have spains of "bitseful pain" or "publish bitse," This must not, so it is by Z., he confirmed with the interferentiation of masseshies, any mass than the characterization of me unyielding loose as "crust" characterization of me unyielding loose as "crust" characterization and he where, that Research ("Amer and Provide," iv, General) was perfect masseshiete pictures, flagellation, etc., is expects this feeling.

A. Moll, in his work, "Die Contrare Sexualempfindung," pp. 133 and 141 et seq., Berlin, 1891, gives a number of cases of complete masochism in individuals of contrary sexuality, and among them the case of a man suffering with contrary sexual instinct, who sent written instructions, containing twenty paragraphs, to a man engaged for his purpose, who was to treat and abuse him like a slave.

In June, 1891, Mr. Dimitri von Stefanowsky, Deputy Government Attorney in Jaroslaw, Russia, informed me that, about three years before, he had given his attention to the perversion of the vita sexualis, designated "masochism" by me, and called "passivism" by him; that a year and a half previously he had prepared a paper on the subject for Professor von Kowalewsky for the Russian Archives of Psychiatry; and that in November, 1888, he had read a paper on this subject, considered in its legal and psychological aspects, before the Legal Society of Moscow (printed in the Jaridischen Boten, the organ of the society, in numbers 6 to 8).

In later fiction the psycho-sexual perversion which forms the subject of this study has been treated by Sacher-Masoch, whose writings, already frequently alluded to, afford typical pictures of the perverse mental life of men of this kind. Many affected with this perversion refer directly to the writings of Sacher-Masoch, as is seen from the foregoing cases, as typical descriptions of their own psychical condition.

In "Nana," Zola has a masochistic seene, and likewise in "Engène Rougon." The latest "decadent" literature of France and Germany is also largely concerned with the themes of sadism and masochism. According to von Stefanowsky's statement, the modern Russian novel frequently treats the subject; but the statements of the writer of travels, Johann Georg Forster (1754–1794), show that this subject also played a rôle in Russian folk-songs.

(b) Foot- and Shor-Fetichists—Larrated Masschisss.—Following the above-mentioned group of "symbolic" masschists, who do not exactly desire abuse by women as the means of expression of subjection, but all kinds of silly acts that can be understood only through an acquaintance with the masochistic circle of ideas, comes the very numerous class of foot- and shoefetichists.

By fetichists (v. Infine, 3) I understand individuals whose sexual interest is confined exclusively to parts of the female body, or to certain portions of female attire. One of the most frequent forms of this fetichism is that in which the female foot or shoe is the fetich, and becomes the exclusive object of sexual feeling and desire. It is highly probable, and shown by a correct classification of the observed cases, that the majority—and perhaps all—of the cases of shoe-fetichism rest upon a basis of more or less conscious massechistic desire for self-humiliation.

In Hammond's case (Case 53) the satisfaction of a masochist was found in being trod upon. In Cases 44 and 48, they also had themselves trod upon; in Case 51, equas croticus, the person loved a woman's foot, etc. In the majority of cases of masochism, the act of being trod upon with feet plays a part' as an easily accessible means of expressing the relation of subjection.

Of the numerous established cases of shoe-fetichism, the following one, reported by Dr. A. Moll, of Berlin, which corresponds in many respects with Hammond's case, but which is described in more detail and more carefully observed, seems especially suited to show the connection between masochism and shoe-fetichism:—

Case 60. O. L., aged 31, book-keeper in a city of Wortenburg; comes of a tainted family.

The potient is a large, powerful man, of raddy appearance. Is general by is of a quiet temperament, but may become very visited as excussion; he says himself that he is quarreleone and inclined to assert himself. In is of a kindly disposition and generous; easily made to weep. At school he passed for a talented pupil, with good powers of comprehension. The patient at times has congression of the head, but is atterwise healthy, except that he is much depressed and melanchalic as a could of his sexual pervention, here to be described.

But little can be learned of any hereditary taint,

&lt;sup>3</sup> The desire to be tred upon also occurs to religious entimainets (comp. Tergretow. ** Spinleybare Grackithina.**).

The following facts concerning the development of his sexual life are gathered from the patient's own statements:-

In very early youth—in fact, when he was cight or nine years old— L. had the descre to lick his teacher's boots like a dog. L. thinks it possible that this thought was excited in him by his once seeing a dog artually do this, but he cannot state this with certainty; and it seems much more certain to the patient that the first ideas of this kind came in a waking state, not in dreams.

From his teach to his fourteenth year be constantly sneight to touch the above of his fellow-pupils, and also those of little girls; but for this purpose he always chose boys who had wealthy and prominent purents. One of these, the son of a rich landed proprietor, had ridinghoots; in the boy's absence L took these in his hands, struck himself with them, and pressed them against his face. L did the same thing with the elegant boots of an officer of dragoous.

After the beginning of puberty the desire was transferred exclusively. to the boots of females. Thus, while skating, the patient's attention was entirely occupied with putting on and taking off skates for ladies; but he always chose only such women as were rish and prominent socially, wearing elegant boots. In the street and everywhere L, constantly looked for elegant boots. His love for them went so far that he often put in his purse, and even in his mouth, the sand and mod that bore their impeints. As a boy of fourteen L. risited brothels; and he often visited a cofe chantant solely to excite himself with the sight of elegant boots (low shoes were loss attinetive). In his school-books and on the walls of closets, L. drew boots. In the theatre he saw nothing but the above of the indies. For hours at a time, in the street and on board steam-boats, L. would run after lailies wearing elegant hoots; and he thought with delight of how he might get a cleance to tunch the houts. This peculiar love for boots remains inchanged. The thought to have himself tred upon by ladies in their boots, or to kies the boots, gives L. the most satense sensual delight, Before shoe-stores he will stand and stand, merely to look at the boots. He is portionlarly excited by their elegence.

The patient prefers high buttoned or laced bosts with high heels; but less elegant boots, even with low beels, also excite him, if their wester is a wealthy, distinguished, and proud buly.

At the age of twenty L attempted coltus; hat, "in spite of the greatest efforts," as he believes, he was not accressful. During the attempt the patient had no thought of shoes; on the contrary, he had first sought to excite himself sexually with shoes, and he asserts that too great excitement was to blame for his want of accress in coltus. Up to this time, being thirty-one years old, he has attempted coltus only four or fire times, and always in take.

On one occasion the patient, already such to be pitied on account of his disease, had the misfortune to contract syphilis. In ruply to the question as to what he regarded as the most lustful set, the patient said: " It is my greatest delight to lie naked on the floor and have myself trad upon by girls mearing elegant bosts; but, of course, this is possible only in brothels." Moreover, according to the patient's statements, these sexual perversions of men are well known in many houses of prostitution,-a proof that these are not so very infrequent. The prostitutes call these men "boot-lovers." But the patient has only very infraquently had the justful act actually performed, notwithsteading the fact that it is most becatiful and pleasant to him. The patient has no thoughts that imped to intercourse; at least, not in the sense of inmissio penis in vagina, an act tint affords him no pleasure whatever. Indeed, he has gradually developed a fear of coltus, which may be sufficiently explained by his numerous unsuccessful attempts; for the patient says bimself that his inability to complete colous embarraned him exceedingly. The patient has never practiced real onsulum. With the exception of a few occasions on which the nations satisfied his sexual desire by onsulate with boots or in a similar way, he is imseend of such satisfaction; for, in the excitement with boots, there is searedy ever snything more than erection; at most, only a slight discharge of fluid takes place slowly, which the patient takes to be semen.

Simply a shoe, worn by no one, excites him when he sees it, leat not nearly as intensely as when it is worn by a woman. New shoes that have not been wern excite him much less than those that have been used; but they must be free from wear and look as new as possible. Shoes of this kind excite him the most. As has been said, bulies' beets excite him when they are not on the feet. Under such eleminations, in fancy. L. creates a lady for them; he presses them to his lips and on his penis. He would "die with delight" if a proud, respectable lady were to tread upon him with her shoes.

Aside from the previously mentioned characteristics of the women (profe, wealth, social prominence), which, in connection with the elegance of the boots, constitute an especial stimulus, the patient is by no means indifferent to the physical charms of the female sex. He is enthreinstic about beautiful women without thinking of boots, but this love is not directed to sexual satisfaction. The bodily charms play a part even in connection with the boots; a bornely old women, even wearing the most elegant boots, manot affect the patient. The rest of the attire and other circumstances also play an essential rife, as is shown by the fact that elegant boots were by proof, distinguished women especially excite the patient. A common servent-girl, in her working-dress, even in the most elegant shows, would not excite him. Men's shows and boots no longer affect the patient; and he never in the slightest degree feels himself attracted to men sexually.

Yet the patient has erections very easily. When he takes a child in his lap, when he puts a dog or horse for some time, when he travels on the cars, or when he rides,—exections occur. In the latter case he thinks it is due to the shaking. He has erections every morning; and to can induce erection in a very short time by thinking of the net with boots that is so pleasing to him. Pollutions formerly occurred frequently at night—about every three or four weeks; now they are more infrequent, occurring once about every three months.

In his erotic dreams the patient is slimest always sexually excited by the same thoughts that excite him in the waking state. For some time he thinks he has felt ejaculation during erection; but he draws this conclusion only from feeling a little moisture at the end of the penis. Books touching the sphere of the patient's sexual ideas especially excite him. Thus, in reading "Venus in Furs," by Sacher-Masoch, he is so excited "that the semen just runs away from him." Moreover, with L., this kind of ejaculation, whole reading, is a decided satisfaction of his sexual desire. My question, whether blows received from a woman's hand would also excite him, the patient thinks he would have to answer in the affirmative. The patient has never mode my such trial, but playful taps had, at any rate, always been very pleasing to him.

It would afford the potient a particularly intense pleasure if he were to be kicked by a woman, even without shoes, and with hare feet. He does not think that the blows, as such, would cause the excitement, but rather the thought of being maltreated by a woman; and this might follow scolding as well as actual blows. Beatles, blows and cross words had an exciting effect only when they came from a proof and distinguished lady. In general it is the feeling of homelication and almost subjection that gives the patient instful pleasure. "Were a lady," the patient tells me, "to command me to wait on her, even with distant coldness, I should, nevertheless, feel sensual pleasure."

To the question, whether with boots the feeling of hundibition came over him, the patient answers: "I think that this general passion for selfhundilation has been concentrated especially on ladies' boots; for it is symbolic of one's being unworthy to lossen the latchet of another's shoe'; and, besides, a subject kneels."

Women's stockings also have an exciting effect on the patient, but only to a slight extent, and perhaps only through awakening an idea of boots. The patient's passion for belies' boots had constantly increased, but of late years he thought he had noticed a diminution of it. He seldem visits public women, and is also more capable of self-restraint. Yet this passion still rules him absolutely, and every other pleasure is spelled by it. A pretty female boot could attract his glance from the most beautiful landscape. At the present time be often goes about at night in the corridors of hotels,' seeking elegant ladies' aboes, which he kiness and presses against his floor and neck, but principally against his penia.

* In this story the writer describes a man whose greatest pleasure lies in being irrated like a slave by a bountiful women, whose he loves. Besides commerces occurs in which the man is whipped by the woman, there are others in which he is tend upon by her. It is this act that forms the principal resum of excellented in the case show described.

The patient, who is very well-to-do, a short time ago went roles tarily to Italy, only with the thought of becoming the servant of a nich and distinguished hely unacquainted with him; but the plan failed. The patient, who came only for consultation, has not yet been treated medically.

The foregoing history reaches almost to the present time, and in the interval he has made me communications by letter concerning his constition. It does not require an extensive commentary. It seems to me to be one of the best cases to illustrate the relationship between above trichism and massechism, as set forth by son Krafft-Ehing.<sup>3</sup> The principal charm for the patient, as he, without leading questions, always emphasizes, is his subjection to a woman, who, in pride and position, must be as far above him as possible.

Such cases, in which, within a fully-developed circle of masochistic ideas, the foot and the shoe or boot of a woman, conceived as a means of humiliation, have become the objects of especial sexual interest, are numerous. Through numerous degrees that are easily discriminated, they form the demonstrable transition to other cases in which the masochistic inclinations retreat more and more to the background, and little by little pass beyond the threshold of consciousness; while the interest in women's shoes, apparently absolutely inexplicable, alone remains in consciousness. The latter are the numerous cases of shoe-fetichism. These very frequent cases of shoe-lovers, which, like all cases of fetichism, possess forensic interest (theft of shoes), occupy a position midway between masochism and fetichism. The majority or all may be looked upon as instances of larvated masochism (the motive remaining unconscious) in which the female foot or shoe, as the masochist's fetich, has acquired an independent significance.

<sup>4</sup> In Continental indete the guests are accustomed to put their slope in the continuation; to be cleaned.

I However, against the theory that from and show. Attheben he a minifestrum of (laired) researchies, Dr. Moll (up. of , p. 106) raises the objection that it is still mark plained why the fetralicit or often prefere broth with high lasts, then books and show of a particular kind-abstract or laced. To this objection it may be connected that, is the first place, the high hole characteries the show as fermione; and, in the second place, that is spite of the second character of his inclination, the fellights demands at kinds of mathele qualities in his initial (comp. Case 100).

Next come two cases in which the female shoe possesses a subordinate interest, but in which unmistakable masochistic desires play an important part (comp. Case 44):—

Case 61. Mr. X. aged 25, parents healthy, never sick before, places the following autobiography at my disposal: "I began to practice oranism at the age of ten, without over having any Institut thoughts during the art. Yet at that time—I am sure of this—the sight and touch of girls' elegant boots had a peculiar charm for me; my greatest desire was also to wear such shoes,—a wish that was occasionally fulfilled at manquerodes. But I was also toubled by a very different thought: My of calma to see susself in a position of humiliation; I would gladly have been a slees, and whipped; in short, I wished to receive the treatment that one finds described in many stories of slavery. I do not know whether the reading of such stories gave rise to my wish, or whether it arose spontaneously.

"Puberty began at the age of thirteen; with the occurrence of spanishion fuefful pleasure increased, and I masturbated more frequently, often two or three times a day. From my twelfth to my sixteenth year, feeling the set of cosmism, I always had the idea that I was forced to wear girls' boots. The sight of an elegant boot, on the foot of a girl at all pretty, intoxicated me; I inhaled the odor of the leather with axidity. In order to smell leather during the set of cosmism, I bought a pair of leathern cuffs, which I smelled while I musturbated. My enthraisem for indies' leathern shows remains the same to-day; only, since my seventeenth year, it has been coupled with the scial to become a sevenue, to blocken shows for distinguished ladies, to just on and toke off their shors for them, etc.

"My dreams at night are made up of shoe-scenes; either I stand before the show-window of a bico-store regarding the elegant ladies' shoes,—particularly buttomed shoes,—or I heat a lady's fest and small and lick her shoes. For about a year I have given up oranism and go not pucliss; costs takes piace through intense thought of ladies' buttomed shoes; or, if necessary, I take the shoe of the puclis to bed with me. I have never suffered from my former oranism. I learn easily, have a good memory, and have never had headache in my life. This much concerning myself.

If A few words about my brother: I am theroughly convinced that he is also a shoe-fetichist. Of the many facts that demonstrate this to me, it is only necessary to mention that it is a great pleasure for him to have a certain cousin (a very beautiful girl) tread upon him. As for the rest, I might undertake to tell whether a man who stands before a shoestore, and regards the shoes on exhibition, is a "foot-lover" or not. This anomaly is uncommonly frequent. When in the circle of my sequent, once I turn the conversation to the question of what woman's charm in I very frequently hear it said that it is much more in attire than in mulity; but every one is careful not to reveal his especial felich. I think an uncle of mine is also a slove-fetichist."

Case, 62. Reported by Mantegraza in his "Anthropological Stat. ies," 1886, p 110. X., American, of good family, mentally and morally will constituted; from the beginning of puberty capable of being excited sexunlly only by a woman's shoe. Her body and maked or stockinged fact made no impression on him; but the foot, when covered with the shor, or a shor alone, induced creetion and even ejeculation. Sight alone was sefficient for him in the case of elegant shoes, -i.e., shoes of black lanther, buttoning up the side, and having very high heels. His sexual descewas powerfully excited by touching, kissing, or drawing on such shoes. His enjoyment was increased by driving anils through the sales so that their points would penetrate his feet while walking. This caused him terrible pain, but be had real fastful feeling at the same time. His greatest enjoyment was to kneel down before the elegantly-chal feet of latins and have them step on him. If the wearer were an ugly woman, the shoes would not affect him, and his fancy would cool. If the patient had shoes alone at his disposal, his fancy would create a beautiful woman wearing them, and ejaculation would result. His nightly dreams were of the shoes of beautiful women. He considered the exposure of helics' shoes in show. windows immeral; while talk about the nature of woman seemed to him harmless, but in bud taste. X. attempted coltus several times without success; elaculation never occurred.

In the following case the masschistic element is also plain enough, as is also the sadistic (comp. "Torture of Animals," under "Sadism"):—

Case 68. A young, powerful man, aged 26. Nothing in the apposite sen excites his sensual fibring except elegant shoes on the feet of a handsome woman, especially when they are made of black leather and have high bods. The shoes without the wearer are sufficient. It gives him the greatest pleasure to see, touch, and kiss them. The feeding foot, when here or covered with a stocking, has no effect on him. Sum childhood be has had a weakness for latter' fire shoes.

X, is potent; during the sexual act the female must be elegatify diseased and, above all, have on pretty shoes. At the beight of several excitement cruci thoughts about the shoes arise. He is forced to think with delight of the death-agonies of the animal from which the leather was taken. Sometimes he is impelled to take chickens and other animals with him to Phryne, in order to have her tread on them with her pretty shoes for his pleasure. He calls this "ascriffeing to the feet of Venus." At other times he has the woman walk on him with her shoes on, the harder the better.

Until the last year it was sufficient—since he did not take the slightest sensual pleasure in women—to caress Indica' show that pleased himthus attaining ejaculation and complete satisfaction. (Lombroso, Archiv di Patchisteria, ix, fincie, iii.)

The following case reminds one of the third of this series, on account of the interest in the nails of the shoes (as capable of inflicting pain); and of the fourth, on account of the slight accompanying sadistic element:—

Case 64. X., aged 34, married; of neuropathic parentage; suffered severely from convalsions as a child; remarkably precedous, but one-sided in development (could read at age of three); nervous from shildhood. At the age of seven be manifested an inclination to handle shoes, especially the mile of women's shoes. The mero sight, but still more the touching, of the shoe-nails and counting them, gave him indescribable pleasure.

At night be gave himself up to imagining how his consins had their measures taken for shoes; how he miled horse-shoes on to one of them or cut her feet off. In time the shoe-scenes came upon him during the day, and involuntarily induced erection and ejaculation. Frequently he took the shoes of female occupants of the house; and if he touched them with his penis he had an ejaculation. For a long time, when a student, it was possible for him to control his ideas and inclinations; but there came a time when he was compelled to listen to female footsteps on the payments, which, like the sight of the mil-marks in helics' shoes, or the night of shoes in the windows of the shoe-shops, always gave him a feeling of listful pleasure. He married, and during the first months of his married life was free from these desires.

Gradually he became hysteropathic and nonresthenic. At this stage he began to have hysterical attacks when the shoomaker spoke to him of nails in fadies' shoes or of driving nails in the same. The reaction was still greater if he chanced to see a pretty lady with above well beset with nails. In order to induce ejaculation it was only necessary for him to out soke out of pasteboard and beset them with nails; or he would buy ladies' shoes, have them beset with nails in the store, and at home scrape them on the ground, and finally beach the end of his penis with them. Moreseer, factful shoesylsions occurred spontaneously, in which he satisfied kinnelf by masturbation.

X. is otherwise intelligent, skillful in his calling, but powerless in combating his perverse inclinations. He presents phimosis; penis short, expanded at the root, and incapable of complete erection. One day the patient allowed himself to masturbate when excited by the sight of ladar' show heart with nails in the window of a show-shop, and thus became a criminal. (Blanche, Archiv. de Neurologie, 1882, Nr. 22.)

Reference may be made here to a case of contrary sexuality, to be described later, in which the principal sexual intenst was in the boots of male servants. The desire was to be trud upon by them.

Case 65. (Dr. Pascal, "Igiene dell' mnore.") X., merchant, from time to time (but particularly in bad weather) had the following desire. He would accost some prostitute and ask her to go to a shoeshop was bim, where he would buy her the handsomest pair of shoes of patent leather, under the condition that she would put them on immediately. After this took place, she had to go about in the street, miking in minute and wad as much as possible, in order to soil the shoes. After this, X. would lead the person to an hotel, and, almost before they had reached a room, he would cost himself on her feet, feeling an extraodinary pleasure in applying his lips to them. When he had cleaned the shoes in this manner, he paid her and went his way.

From these cases it may be plainly seen that the shoe is the fetich of the masochist, and apparently because of the relation of the dressed female foot to the idea of being tred upon and other acts of humiliation. When, therefore, in other cases of shoe-fetichism, the female shoe appears alone as the excitant of sexual desire, one is justified in presuming that masochistic motives have remained latent. The idea of being tred upon, etc., remains in the depths of unconscious life, and the idea of the shoe alone, the means for such acts, rises into consciousness. Cases that are otherwise wholly inexplicable are thus sufficiently explained. Here one has to do with larvated masochism; and this may always be assumed as the unconscious motive, when, as occurs not exceptionally, the origin of the fetichism, from an association of ideas on the occasion of some particular event, can be proved, as in Cases 87 and 88.

Such cases of desire for ladies' shoes, without conscious motive and without demonstrable origin, are really innumerable.' Three cases are here given as examples:—

&lt;sup>1</sup> There is apparently a connection futuress fact beta-bens and the fact that could person of this kind, whom coins does not satisfy, or who are qualife to perform it, fad a substitute for it is mixed meanled inter-podes maximize.

Case 66. Minister, aged 50. From time to time he goes to houses of prostitution and asks to rent a room. He enters it with a girl. Then he listfully regards her shoes, takes one off and kisses and bites it. Finally, he puts it ad genitalis and ejaculat somen semineque ejaculato axidas pectuaque terit; then he comes out of his sensual cestusy. He begs the woman to allow him to keep the abor for a few days, and always, at the appointed time, returns it with thanks (Cantarano, La Psechistria, v. p. 205).

Case 57. Student, Z., aged 23; comes of a minted family. Sister was insure; brother suffered with hysteric sirilis. The patient, peculiar from childhood, has frequent attacks of hypochondriscal depression, tardium vitae, and feels that he is persecuted. In a consultation on account of mental trouble, I find him a very perverse, herediturily perdisposed man, with neurosthenic and hypochendriacal symptoms. A suspicion of masturbation is confirmed. Patient makes interesting disclosures concerning his vita exmals. At the age of ten he was powerfully attracted by the foot of one of his comrades. At twelve he became an enthusiast for ladies' feet. It gave him a delightful sensation to revel in the sight of them. At fourteen he began to maxturbate, thinking, at the same time, of the beautiful foot of a lady. From this time on he was taken with the feet of his three-rear-old sister. The feet of other females that attracted him induced sexual excitement. Only women's feet-no other part of them-interested him. The thought of sexual intercourse with women excited his disgnot. He had never attempted roitus. After his twelfth year he had no interest in the fort of male individuals. The style of covering of the female foot is indifferent to him; it is only necessary that the person seem to be sympathetic. The thought of enjoying the feet of prostitutes was disgusting to him. For years he had been in love with his sister's feet. If he could but obtain her shoes, the sight of them powerfully excited his sensuality. Kissing or embracing his sister did not have this effect. His greatest deligin was to embrace and kiss the foot of a sympathetic woman, when ejaculation would result with a lively pleasurable sensation. Often he was impelled to touch his genitals with one of his sister's shoos; but he had been able, thus far, to master this impulse, especially for the reason that for two years (owing to progressive irritable weakness of the genitals) the simple sight of the foot had induced ejaculation. From his relatives it is ascertained that the patient has a silly admiration for the feet of his sister; so that she avoids him and seeks to hide her feet from him. The patient looks upon his perverse sexual impulse as pathological, and is painfully affected by the fact that his vile fancy has for its object his water's Soot. He avoided opportunity as much as he could, and sought to belp the matter by masterbation when, as in dreams accompanied by pollution, ladies' feet filled his imagination. However, when the impulse because too powerful be could not avoid gaining a partial sight of his sister's foot. Immediately after ejeculation he would become argry with himself at inving been weak again. His partiality for his nister's foot had cost him many a sleepless night. He often wondered that he could still love his sister. Although it seemed right to him that the should conveal her feet from him, yet he was often irritated became the convealment caused him to have pollutions. The patient gives assurances of being moral in other respects, which are confirmed by his relatives.

Case 48. S., New York, is accused of being a street-third. Numerous cases of inscriby in his ancestry; father, brother, and sister any tally abnormal. At seven years, violent cerebral concussion twice. At thirteen, struck with a bram. At fourteen 8 had violent attacks of headache. Accompanying these allacks, or immediately after their necesflar impulse to take the shoes of female members of the familtance a rule, those belonging to one member-and hide them in some out-of the way corner. Taken to task, he would lie, or declare that he had no memory of the affair. The passion for shoes was meconquerable, and made its appearance every three or four months. On one occasion be attempted to take the shoe from the feet of one of the servants, and or another he stole his sister's shoe from her sleeping-spartment. In the spring two lades had their shoes form from their feet in the open street. In August S. left his home early in the morning to go to his work as a printer. A moment afterward he tore the shoe from a girl's foot in the open street, fied to his place of work, and there was arrested as a streetthief. He declared that he did not know much of his act; that it had come upon him like a stroke of lightning, at the eight of a shoe, that he must possess himself of it, but for what purpose he did not knew. He had noted while in a state of unconsciousness. The shoe, as is cornerly indicated, was found in his coat. In confinement he was so much excited mentally that an outbreak of insurity was feared. Discharged, he stole his wife's shoes while she slept. His moral character and inhits of life were blameless. He was an intelligent workman; but irregularity of employment, that soon followed made him confused and incapable of work. Parloned. (Nichols, Am. Journal of January, 1859; Berk. " Med. Jurisprodence," vol. i, p. 732, 1860 ).

Dr. Pascal (op. cir.) has some similar cases, and many others have been mentioned to me by colleagues and patients.

(c) Disgusting Acts for the Purpose of Self-Hamiliation and Sexual Gratification — Larrented Musochism.—There are numerous established cases in which perverted men are thrown into sexual excitement by the secretions, or even the exerctions, of women, and try to see and touch them. Probably in these cases there is almost always an unconscious musochistic impulse. -pleasure in the most extreme humiliation of self, and desire to experience it.

This connection is made perfectly clear by the confessions of those affected with this repugnant perversion. Case 88 of the sixth edition—that of an individual affected with contrary accumity, which is later described—is here instructive. The subject of this case not only revels in the thought of being the slave of the beloved man, and refers on this point to Sacher-Masoch's "Venus in Furs," sed cham sibi fingit amatum poscere ut crepidas sudore diffluences offaciat ejusque stercore vescutur. Deinde narrat, quia non habeat, quie confingut et exoptet, corum loco suas crepidas sudore infectas offacere sucque stercore vesci, inter quie facta pene errecto se voluptate perturbari semenque ejuculari.

The masochistic significance of a disgusting act in the following case, communicated by a professional friend, is clear:—

Case 69. H. v. G., landed proprietor; nujor; died in his sixtieth year; came of a family in which irresponsibility, tendency to run in debt, and defect of morals are hereditary. In his youth he was given to most. reckless dissipation (he was known as the leader of "naked balls"). He was always of a cymical and brutal nature, though punctilious and exact in his military service, which, on account of a disreputable affair that was not made known, he had to leave, and he lived in private life seventeen years. Untrammeled by the necessity to earn his living, he led everywhere the life of a man-of the town, and was everywhere avoided on account of his inscirious enture. His ostoseism by the bost society, which, in spite of his independence, he noticed, esused him to prefer the ordinary society of fakirs, artisans, and lonfers. It cannot be accertained that he had sexual intercourse with men, but it is certain that in his later years to arranged symposiums with mixed company and was known as a roos. In the last few years of his life he was accustomed to hang afort new buildings in the evening and of the women working there be would ask the dirtiest to accompany him. It is certain that he had the woman undress, and then he would suck her toes, his hibido being exgited and satisfied by the act.

Cantamaso also reports a case in La Psichiatria, v year, p. 207, in which, preceding the act, apparently from a similar cause, there was biting and sucking of a woman's toes in as filthy a state as possible.

Several cases have come to my knowledge in which, with other masochistic acts (maltreatment, humiliation), such disgnaing desires were entertained; and the confessions of the infaviduals left no doubt of their significance.

Such cases prepare the way to an understanding of others which are absolutely incomprehensible without the connection with the masochistic desire for humiliation. It is probable, however, that this impulse, in its actual significance, remains unknown to the perverted individual, and only the desire for disgusting things rises into consciousness,—again larvated masochism.

Other cases of Cantarano's (for. cit.) belong here: mictoreven defecatio puells ad languam viri ante actum; consumption of confects smelling like fixees, in order to become potent; and also the following case, likewise communicated to me by a physician;—

Case 10. A Bussian prince, who was very decrepit, was accustomed to have his mistress turn her back to him and defecate on his breast; the being the only way in which he could excite the remnant of little.

Another supported a mistrose in unusually brilliant style, with the condition that she can murchpane exclusively. It libidinosus flat et sponiare possit excrements femine one excipit. A Brazilian physician tells use of several cases of defecatio femine in or viri that have come to his knowledge. Such cases occur everywhere, and are not at all infrequent. All kinds of secretions—saliva, masal murns, and even annal communare used in this way and availowed with pleasure; and comin at more used in this way and availowed with pleasure; and comin an enter and even ad anum are indulged in. Dr. Moli (op. cat., p. 185) reports the same thing of a man affected with contrary sexuality. The perverse desire to practice countilingue, which is very wide-spread, probably frequently has its root in masochistic impulses.

Palanda (Archivio di Psichiatria, x, fascicolo 3, 4) relates the following case:—

Case 71. W., aged 45, predisposed, was given to masturbation at the age of eight. A decime sexte anno litidines sums bibundo recenter ferminarum urinum sattavit. Tanta erat voluptas urinum bibentis et ner alliquet offerevet nec supervt, here faciens. After drinking he always experienced diagnot and ill-feeling, and made firm resolutions to do it no more in the future. Once he had the same pleasure in drinking the arine of a mine-year-old boy, with whom he care practiced feliatio. The patient suffers with epileptic insanity.

I knotogy with the excessor of religious enthusiases is found over few. The migness enthusiast, Automotic Burrigums do he Porte, mixed her fined with faces to people bit soif (Encourance, op. ed., p. 134). The beatified Mario Abscopse, to I martily " breath licked up with her burges the dejections of patients, and sucked their toos owners with some.

The cases described in this group form the complete counterpart to group " d" of the sadists.

Still other older cases belong here, which Tardicu ("Étude médicolégale sur les attentats aux memors," p. 208) observoir in senile individuals. He describes as "Benificurs" persons "qui in secretos locos nimirum theatrorum pasticos convenientes quo complures feminer ad micturirudum festimant, per narcs urinali odore excitati, illico se invicem pollumi." The "Sterroraires" that Taxil ("La prostitution contemperaires") mentions are, in relation to this subject, unique.

 Finally, space is here given to the following case, reported to me by a physician:—

Case 72. A natary, known from his youth to those about him as peculiar and missisthropic. During his school-days he was given to maximilation. According to his own story, he excited his sexual desire by specifing out on the cover of his bed pieces of toilet-paper that he had used, induced erection by regarding and smelling them, and then practiced maximilation. After his death, by the side of his bed, there was found a large backet of such papers, with the dates marked on them. Here there were probably funcies of the nature of the above-mentioned acts.

(d) Musockism is Women.—In woman voluntary subjection to the opposite sex is a physiological phenomenon. Owing to her passive rôle in procreation and long-existent social conditions, ideas of subjection are, in woman, normally connected with the idea of sexual relations. So to speak, they form the harmonies which determine the tone-quality of feminine feeling.

Any one conversant with the history of civilization knows in what a state of absolute subjection woman was always kept until a relatively high degree of civilization was reached, and an attentive observer of life may still easily recognize how the custom of unnumbered generations, in connection with the passive rôle with which woman has been endowed by Nature, has given her an instinctive inclination to voluntary subsedimtion to man; he will notice that exaggeration of customary gallantry is very distasteful to women, and that a deviation from it in the direction of masterful behavior, though loadly reprehended, is often accepted with secret satisfaction.\(^1\) Under the veneer of polite society the instinct of feminine servitude is everywhere discernible.

• The laws of the early Malife Ages gave the bashed the right to kell the wide; these of the later Middle Ages, the right to heat her. The latter right was used freely, true by those of tigh streetling (comp. Scholler, Das bidleshe Leben for sell des Minneage, Sci. 1, p. 101 at mp.). Tel, by the side of thus, the paradoxical chiralry of the Middle Ages stands unersplained.

Thus it is easy to regard masochism in general as a pathological growth of specific feminine mental elements,—as an abnormal intensification of certain features of the psycho-sexual character of woman,—and to seek its primary origin in that sex (v. infro, p. 145). It may, however, be held to be established that, in woman, an inclination to subordination to from (which may be regarded as an acquired, purposeful arrangement, a phenomenon of adaptation to social requirements) is to a certain extent a normal manifestation.

The reason that, under such circumstances, the "poetry" of the symbolic act of subjection is not reached, lies partly in the fact that man has not the vanity of that weakling who would use blows to display his power (as the love-serving knights did with the ladies of the Middle Ages), but prefers to demonstrate his real advantages. The barbarian has his wife plow for him, and the civilized lover speculates about her dowry; she willingly endures both.

Cases of pathological increase of this instinct of subjection, in the sense of feminine musochism, are probably frequent enoughbut custom represses their manifestation. Many young women like nothing better than to kneel before their lumbands or lovers. Among all Slavs of the lower classes it is said that the wires feel hart if they are not beaten by their husbands. A Hungarian officer informs me that peasant women of the Somogy'er Comitates do not think they are loved by their husbands until they have received the first box on the ear as a sign of love.

<sup>1</sup> Comp. Lady Mither's words to Schiller's "Estate and Lists": "We word run only choose between ruling and strying; but the highest pleasure power allock is had a number of exactly the greater by of being the states of a man we love is feated as."

It would probably be difficult for the physician to find cases of feminine masochism. Subjective and objective restraints—modesty and custom—naturally constitute, in women, insurmountable obstacles to the expression of perverse sexual instinct. Thus it happens that, up to the present time, but one case of masochism in a woman has been scientifically established; and this is accompanied by circumstances that obscure it.

Case 13. Miss v. X., Russian, aged 35; of greatly predisposed family. For some years she has been in the initial stage of paranels persecutoris. This sprang from cerebro-spinal neurasthenia, the origin of which is found to be sexual byper-excitation. Since her twenty-fourth year she has been given to musturbation. As a result of disappointment in an engagement and intense sexual excitement, she began to practice masterbation and psyshical emanism. Inclination toward persons of her own sex sever occurred. The patient says: "At the age of six or eight I concrived a desire to be whipped. Since I had never been whipped, and had never been present when others were thus punished, I cannot understand how I came to have this strange desire. I can only think that it is congenital. With these ideas of being whipped I had a feeling of actual delight, and pictured in my fancy how fine it would be to be whipped by one of my female friends. I never had any thought of being whipped by a man. I revoled in the idea, and never attempted any actual realization of my fancies. These disappeared after my teath year. Only when I read "Ronosean's Confessions," at the age of thirty-four, did I understand what my longing for whippings meant, and that my abnormal bless were like those of Rousseau. Since my tenth year I have never had any more such fancies."

On account of its original character and the reference to Rousseau, this case may with certainty be called a case of masochism. The fact that it is a female friend that is conceived in imagination as whipping her, is explained by the circumstance that the masochistic desire was here present in the mind of a child before the psychical vita sexualis had developed and the instinct for the male had been awakened. Contrary sexual instinct is here expressly excluded.

AS ATTEMPT TO EXPLAIS MASOCHROL.

The facts of masochism are certainly among the most interesting in the domain of psychopathology. An attempt to explain them must first seek to distinguish in them the essential from the unessential. The distinguishing characteristic in masschism is certainly the unlimited subjection to the will of a person of the opposite sex (in sadism, on the contrary, the unlimited mastery of this person), with the awakening and accompanment of lustful sexual feelings to the degree of orgasm. From all that has preceded it is clear that the particular manner in which this relation of subjection or domination is expressed (e. espre), whether in simply symbolic acts, or whether there is also a desire to suffer pain at the hands of a person of the opposite sex, is a subordinate matter.

While sadism may be looked upon as a pathological intensification of the masculine sexual character in its psychical peculiarities, masochism rather represents a pathological degeneration of the distinctive psychical peculiarities of woman. But masculine masochism is undoubtedly frequent; and it is this that most frequently comes under observation and almost exclusively makes up the series of observed cases. The reason for this has been previously stated (p. 139).

Two sources of masochism can be distinguished in the sphere of normal phenomena. The first is, that in the state of lastful excitement every impression made by the person giving rise to the sexual stimulus, independently of the nature of its action, is pleasing to the individual excited.

It is entirely physiological that playful taps and light blows should be taken for enresses,

"Like the lover's pinch which facts and is desired "!

From here the step is not long to a state where the wish to experience a very intense impression at the hands of the consort leads to a desire for blows, etc., in cases of pathological intensification of lust; for pain is always a ready means for producing an intense bodily impression. Just as in sadism the sexual emotion leads to a state of exaltation in which the excessive motor excitement implicates neighboring nervous tracts; so in masochism an erstatic state arises, in which the rising flood of a single emotion invenously devours and covers with lust every impression coming from the beloved person.

The second and, indeed, the most important source of masochism is to be sought in a wide-spread phenomenon, which, though it is extraordinary and abnormal, by no means lies within the domain of sexual perversion.

I here refer to the very prevalent fact that in innumerable instances, which occur in all varieties, one individual becomes dependent on another of the opposite sex, in a very extraordinary and remarkable manner,—even to the loss of all independent will; a dependence which forces the party in subjection to acts and suffering which greatly prejudice personal interest, and often enough to offense against both morality and law.

This dependence, however, differs from the manifestations of normal life only in the intensity of the sexual feeling that here comes in play, and in the slight degree of will-power necessary for the maintenance of its equilibrium. The difference is one of intensity, not of quality, as in masochistic manifestations.

This dependence of one person upon another of the opposite sex, that is abnormal but not perverse,—a phenomena possessing great interest when regarded from a forensic stand-point, —I designate "sexual bondage," for the relations and circumstances attending it have in all respects the character of bondage. The will of the ruling individual dominates that of the person in subjection, just as a master's does his bondsman's.

This "sexual bondage," as has been said, is certainly an abnormal phenomenon. It begins with the first deviation from the normal. The degree of dependence of one person upon another, or of two upon each other, resulting from individual peculiarity in the intensity of motives that in themselves are chies, from which this "hindays" must be itricity differentiated.

<sup>3</sup> The expressions "stare" and "slavery," though often used metapherically under such riversestances, are avoided here because they are the farceite expressions of mose-

* Comp. the author's arcade, "their greether-thirde Hengken and Massedimme," in the Psychiatrischen Jahrhücker, B4. x, p. 160 of arg, where this impact is troubed in detail, and particularly from the formula should point.

The expression "homisge" is not to be construed to mran J. S. Mill's "Bondage of Woman." That Mill designates with this expression are laws and customs noticl and blatched facts. How, however, we always speak of facts burding possible tellipidizal molives that even conflict with prevalent customs and laws.

normal, constitutes the normal standard established by law and custom. Sexual bondage is not a perverse manifestation, however; the instinctive activities at work here are the same as those that set in motion—even though it be with less violence—the psychical vita sexualis which moves entirely within normal limits.

Fear of losing the companion and the desire to keep him always satisfied, amiable, and inclined to sexual intercourse, are here the motives of the individual in subjection. An extraordinary degree of love—which, particularly in woman, does not always indicate an unavail degree of sensuality—and a weak character are the simple elements of this extraordinary process.

The motive of the dominant individual is egoism, which finds unlimited room for action,

The manifestations of sexual bendage are various in form, and the cases are very numerous. At every step in life we find men that have fallen into sexual bendage. Among married men, ben-pecked husbands belong to this category, particularly olderly men who marry young vives and try to overcome the disparity of years and physical defects by unconditional submission to the wife's every whim; and unmarried men of tipe maturity, who seek to better their last chance of love by unlimited sacrifice, are also to be enumerated here. Here belong, also, men of any age, who, seized by hot passion for a woman, meet coldness and calculation, and have to capitulate on hard conditions; men of loving natures who allow themselves to be persuaded to marriage by notorious prostitutes; men who, to run after adventuresses, leave everything and

I Perhaps the most important element in that by the babit of autominion a kind of goedamical electrons, which consequences of its motives, which operates with actionally certainty, may be established, having no opposing motives to contend with, immune it lies beyond the firmshold of consciousness; and it may be used by the dominant individual like an invariant increases.

&quot;Second borology, of course, plays a offer in all bitraduces. Indiced, for the post, the extraordicary manifestations of the second life that are not persons from a rich and open field. The most reconstructed description of standards "humdages" is that by Abbi Primet.

"Mano Lescond." An excellent description of feminise "bendages" is that of "Lowe Local," by George Sunt. But test of all comes Kielet's "Kignature on Hallwess," who kieself called it the counterpart of (authors) "Prethreless." Halle's "Getablis" and many other similar poems also belong here.

jeopardise their future; husbands and fathers who leave wife and child, to lay the income of a family at the feet of a harlot.

But, numerous as the examples of masculine "bondage" are, every observer of life, who is at all unprejudiced, must allow that they are far from equalling, in number and importance, the cases of feminine "bondage." This is easily explained. For a man, love is almost always only an episode, and he has many other and important interests; for a woman, on the other hand, love is the principal thing in life, and, until the birth of children, always her first interest. After this it is still often her first thought, but always, at least, takes the second place. But, what is still more important, the man ruled by this impulse easily satisfies it in embraces for which he finds unlimited opportunities. A woman in the upper classes of society, if she have a husband, is bound to him alone; and even in the lower classes there are still great obstacles to polyandry. Therefore, a somen's hasband means for her the whole sex, and his importance to her becomes very great. It must also be considered that the normal relation established by law and enstom between husband and wife is far from being one of equality. In itself it expresses a sufficient predominance of woman's dependence. The concessions she makes to ber lover, to retain the love which it would be almost impossible for her to replace, only plunge her deeper in bondage; and this increases the insatiable demands of husbands resolved to use their advantage and traffic in woman's readiness to sacrifice berself.

Here may be placed the fortune-hunter, who for money allows himself to be enveloped in the easily created illusions of a maiden; the seducer, and the man who compromises wives, calculating on blackmail; the gilded army officer and the musician with the lion's mane, who know so well how to stammer "Thee or death!" as a means to pay debts and provide a life of case. Here, too, belong the kitchen-soldier, whose love the cook returns with love plus means to satisfy a different appetite; the drinker, who consumes the savings of the mistress he marries; and the man who with blows compels the prostitute on whom he lives to carn a certain sum for him daily. These are only a few of the innumerable forms of headage into which woman is forced by her greater need of love and the difficulties of her position.

The subject of "sexual bondage" must here receive brief consideration; for in it may be clearly seen the soil from which the main root of masochism springs. The relationship of these two phenomena of psychical sexual life is immediately apparent. Bondage and masochism both consist of the unconditional subjection of the individual affected with the abnormality to a person of the opposite sex, and of domination of the former by the latter. The two phenomena, however, must be strictly differentiated; they are not different in degree, but in quality.

Sexual bondage is not a perversion and not pathological; the elements from which it arises—love and weakness of will—are not perverse; it is only their simultaneous activity that produces the abnormal result which is so opposed to self-intenst, and often to custom and law. The motive, in obedience to which the subordinated individual acts and endures tyranny, is the normal instinct toward woman (or man); the satisfaction of which is the price of bondage. The acts of the person in subjection, by means of which the bondage is expressed, are performed at the command of the ruling individual, to satisfy self-ishness, etc. For the subordinated individual they have no independent purpose; they are only the means to an end,—to obtain or retain possession of the ruling individual. Finally, bondage is a result of love for a particular person; it first appears when this love is awakened.

In masschism, which is decidedly abnormal and a perversion, this is all very different. The motive of the acts and suffering of the person in subjection is here the charm afforded by the tyranny in itself. There may, at the same time, be a desire for coitus with the dominant person; but the impulse is directed to the acts which serve to express the tyranny, as the immediate objects of gratification. These acts in which mass-

A Cases may cover in which the sexual bundage is expressed in the same sets that are common interesections. When rough mon wintp that when, and the latter suffer for tare, without, however, having a desire for blows, we have a pseudo form of busings that may simulate retain blow.

chism is expressed are, for the individual in subjection, not means to an end, as in bondage, but the end in themselves. Finally, in masochism the longing for subjection occurs a priori, before the occurrence of an inclination to any particular object of love.

The connection between bondage and masochism may be assumed by reason of the correspondence of the two phenomena in the objective condition of dependence, notwithstanding the difference in their motives; and the transformation of the abnormality into the perversion probably takes place in the following manner: Any one living for a long time in sexual bondage becomes disposed to acquire a slight degree of masochism. Love that willingly bears the tyranny of the loved one then becomes an immediate love of tyranny. When the idea of being tyrannized over is long closely associated with the Instful thought of the beloved person, the lustful emotion is finally connected with the tyranny itself, and the transformation to perversion is completed. This is the manner in which masochism may be acquired by cultivation.

<sup>1</sup> It is very interesting, and dependent upon the enters of boodings and masseltism. which rescribilly correspond in external effects, that to Dimemnte the former certain play hat, netaphorical expressions are to general use; such as "slavery," "to bear chains," "tound," "to hold the whip over," "to harpens to the tribuphid car," "to its at the Bet," "ben-perked," sie ...... Shings which, liberally carried out, form the objects of the masochist's desire. Such similes are frequently used in duly life and have become trite. They are dictived from the language of pockey. Firstly has always recognized, within the general idea of the passion of livre, the element of dependence in the lover, who practices self-sucrifice appalaneously or of necessity. The facts of "bundage," have also always presented themselves to the poetical imagination. When the post chooses such expressions as Bloss meetimed, to picture the dependence of the lower in striking similar, in present enough as also the manufact, when, to intensity the idea of his dependence (his saltitude aim). creates each simultions in reality. In ancient poetry, the expression "domina" is used to signify the level one, with a preference for the simile of "costing in chairs" (e.g., Horses, 64 (s, tr). From satisally through all the omburies to our own fines (comp. Grillianner, "Citalian," Act : " Dorale in sweet, almost as west as tooley"), the postry of love is filled with minitial parameters and similars. The latting of the word "minition" in also byteresting. But postry reacts on life. It is probable that the country chiralty of the Middle Ages arous in this way. In its revenues for women se " inistreme" is postery and in individual lowrelations; (to transference of the relations of Scubilism and resemble to the relation between the knight and his lady; its interpolan to all feminine whire; its love-tests and your; its duty of abelience to every command of the lady, win all this, chiralry appears as a synbenative, poetical development of the "total age" of love. Greate extreme manticatations. like the deeds and suffering of Ulrich von Lickbrackein or Pierre Vidit in the service of their ladies; or the practice of the Saturalty of the "Gabits" in France, whose members senght energycloss in low and entirested the motives to all kinds of suffering,—those clearly here a manufactor character, and demonstrate the natural transformation of one phenommake take the sense.

Thus a mild degree of masachism may arise from "bundage," —become acquired; but genuine, complete, deep-rooted maschism, with its feverish longing for subjection from the time of earliest youth, is congenital.

The explanation of the origin of the infrequent pervension of fully developed masochism is most probably to be found in the assumption that it arises from the very frequent abnormality of "sexual bondage"; in that now and then this abnormality is hereditarily transferred to a psychopathic individual in such a way that it becomes transformed into a perversion. It has been previously shown how a slight displacement of the psychical element under consideration may effect this transition.

This transformation of the abnormality into the perversion, through hereditary transference, would take place very easily where the psychopathic constitution of the descendant presented the other factor of masochism,—i.e., what has been previously called its main root,—the tendency of sexually hyperesthetic natures to assimilate all impressions coming from the beloved person with the sexual impression.

From these two elements,—from "sexual bendage" on the one hand, and from the above-mentioned disposition to sexual ecstasy, which apperceives even maltreatment with lustful emtion, on the other,—the roots of which may be traced back to the field of physiological facts, masochism arises on the basis of psychopathic predisposition; in that its sexual hypersesthesia intensifies first all the physiological accessories of the vita sexualis and, finally, only its abnormal accompaniments, to the pathological degree of perversion.<sup>3</sup>

It must, however, he amplicated that "bountage "later plays no obtoportant effects

* If it be considered that, as shown above, "sexual bundage" is a phenomenobserved peach more frequently and in a more presonanced degree in the female sex than is the code, the thought artises that massociates (if not always, at least as a rule) is as intertrance of the "bondage" of freezing experience. Thus it comes into a relation—despidiseast—with readrary sexual institut, as a transference to the mule of a personan rule belonging to the french. This remorphism of massociates as a rudinostary contrary separal institut, as a partial effortination, here affecting only the accordary sexual character of the with according to theory will more associationally supersent in the with common of the work) finds in support in the sintenessis of the subjects of Case 44 and Case 54, who pesent other formers of effectivities, and give as their that a relatively old seams who socks and wine three; such fastice, in the fact that the (potent) massociate potter the of encounters of encounters, as shown by statements referring to this.

At any rate, masochism, as a congenital sexual perversion, constitutes a functional sign of degeneration in (almost exclusively) hereditary taint; and this clinical deduction is confirmed in my cases of masochism and sadism. It is easy to demonstrate that the peculiar, psychically-anomalous direction of the vita sexualls which masochism represents, is an original abnormality, and not, so to speak, cultivated in a predisposed individual by passive flagellation, through association of ideas, as Rousseau and Binet suppose. This is shown by the numerous cases of masochism—in fact, the majority—in which flagellation never appears; in which the perverse impulse is directed exclusively to purely symbolic acts expressing subjection without any actual infliction of pain. This is demonstrated by the whole series of cases, from Case 53, given here.

The same result—namely, that passive flagellation is not the nucleus around which all the rest is gathered—is reached when closer study is given to the cases in which passive flagellation plays a rôle, as in Case 44 and Case 50. Case 51 is particularly instructive in relation to this; for in this instance there can be no thought of a sexually-stimulating effect of punishment received in youth. Moreover, in this case, connection with an early experience is not possible; for the situation constituting the object of principal sexual interest is absolutely incapable of being carried out by a child.

Finally, the origin of musochism in purely psychical elements, on confronting it with sadism (s. infra), is convincingly demonstrated. That passive flagellation occurs so frequently in masochism is explained simply by the fact that it is the most extreme means of expressing the relation of subjection.

I repent that the decisive points, in the differentiation of simple passive fingellation from flagellation dependent upon massochistic desire, are that, in the former, the act is a means to make coits, or at least operalation, possible; and that, in the latter, it is a means of gratification of massochistic desires.

the magnitus with segmals, and that muschism in main may also be explained with at any such transference of freezests elements. It must also be resembered here that muschism, as well as its grunderpart, and on, occurs to inequiar combination with contrast sexual matinet.

As we have already seen, masorhists subject themselves to all other kinds of maltreatment and suffering in which there can be no question of reflex excitation of lust. Since such cases are numerous, in such acts (and in flagellation in masochists, having like significance) we must seek to ascertain in what relation pain and lust stand to each other. From the statement of a masochist it is as follows:—

The relation is not of such a nature that that which causes physical pain is here simply perceived as physical pleasure; but the person in a state of masochistic erstasy fiels no pain; either because, by reason of his emotional state (like that of the soldier in battle), the physical effect on his entaneous nerves is not appercrived; or because (as with religious martyrs and enthusiasts), with the preoccupation of consciousness with lustful emotion, the idea of maltreatment remains merely a symbol, without its quality of pain.

To a certain extent there is over-compensation of physical pain in psychical pleasure; and only the excess remains in consciousness as psychical lust. This also undergoes an increase; since, either through reflex spinal influence or through a peculiar coloring in the sensorium of sensory impressions, a kind of hallucination of bodily pleasure takes place, with a vague localization of the objectively projected sensation.

In the self-torture of religious enthusiasts (fakirs, howling dervishes, religious flagellants) there is an analogous state, only with a difference in the quality of pleasurable feeling. Here the conception of martyrdom is also apperceived without its pain; for consciousness is filled with the pleasurably colored idea of serving God, atoning for sins, deserving heaven, etc., through martyrdom.

MASOCHISM AND SADISSE.

The perfect counterpart of masschism is sadism. While in the former there is a desire to suffer and be subjected to vislence, in the latter the wish is to inflict pain and use violence.

The parallelism is perfect. All the acts and situations used by the sadist in the active vôle become the object of the desire of the mosochist in the passive vôle. In both perversions these acts advance from purely symbolic acts to severe maltreatment. Even murder, in which sadism reaches its acme, finds, as is shown by Case 54,—of course, only in fancy,—its passive counterpart. Under favoring conditions, both perversions may occur with a normal vita sexualis; in both, the acts in which they express themselves are preparatory for coitus or substitutes for it.

But the analogy does not exist simply in external manifestation; it also extends to the subjective character of both perversions. Both are to be regarded as original psychopathies in mentally abnormal individuals, who, in particular, are affected with psychical hyperasthesia sexualis, and, as a rule, also with other abnormalities; and for each of these perversions two comstituent elements may be demonstrated, which have their roots in psychical facts lying within physiological limits. For masochism, as shown above, these elements lie in the fact (1) that in the state of sexual emotion every impression produced by the consort, independently of the manner of its production, is, per se, attended with Justful pleasure, which, where there is hypernesthesia sexualis, may go so far as to over-compensate all painful sensation; and in the fact (2) that "sexual bondage," dependent on mental factors that are in themselves not perverse, may, under pathological conditions, become a perverse, pleasurable desire for subjection to the opposite sex, which-even if it be quite unnecessary to assume its inheritance from the female side-represents a pathological degeneration of the character belonging to woman,-of the instinct of subordination, physiclogical in woman.

In harmony with this, there are, likewise, two constituent elements explanatory of sadism, the origin of which may also be traced back within physiological limits. These are: the fact (1) that in sexual emotion, to a certain extent, as an accompanying psychical excitation, an impulse may arise to influence the object of desire in every possible way and with the greatest possible intensity, which, in individuals sexually hyperasthetic, may become an impulse to inflict pain; and the fact (2) that, under pathological conditions, the man's active râle of winning woman may become an unlimited desire for subjugation.

<sup>3</sup> Of course, both have to contend with opposing chical and setletic natives in furn interes. After these have been overcome and hading appears, it immediately comes in results with the law. This is not the case with maschiem; which accounts he the greater frequency of enunchiatio acts. But the instant of self-preservation and her of pain oppose the realization of the latter. The practical significance of maschiem has only in its relations to payching imposmes; while that of anilses his beyond that, and is principally formate.

Thus masochism and sadism represent perfect counterparts, It is also in harmony with this that the individuals affected with these perversions regard the opposite perversion in the other sex as their ideal, as shown by Case 44 and Case 50, and also by "Rousseau's Confessions."

But the contrast of masochism and sadism may also be used to invalidate the assumption that the former has its origin in the reflex effect of passive flagellation; and that all the rest is the product of associations of related ideas, as Binet, in explanation of Rousseau's case, thinks, and as Rousseau himself believed.

In the active maltreatment forming the object of the sadist's sexual desire there is, in fact, no irritation of his own sensory nerves by the act of maltreatment; so that there can be no doubt of the purely psychical character of the origin of this perversion. Sadism and masochism, however, are so related to each other, and so correspond in all points with each other, that the one allows, by analogy, a conclusion for the other; and this is alone sufficient to establish the purely psychical character of masochism.

According to the above-detailed contrast of all the elements and phenomena of masochism and sadism, and as a réssué of all observed cases, lust in the infliction of pain and lust in inflicted pain appear but as two different sides of the same psychical process, of which the primary and essential thing is the consciousness of active or passive subjection, in which the combination of cruelty and lustful pleasure has only a secondary psychological significance. Acts of cruelty serve to express this subjection; first, because they are the most extreme means for the expression of this relation; and, again, because they represent the most intense effect that one person, either with or without coitus, can exert on another.

The cases in which sadism and masochism occur simultaneously in one individual are interesting, but they present some difficulties of explanation. Cases 49, 50, 58, etc., are of this kind, and also particularly Case 30. From the latter it is evident that it is especially the idea of subjection that, both actively and passively, forms the nucleus of the persense desires. Traces of the same thing are also to be observed, with more or less clearness, in many other cases. At any rate, one of the two perversions is always markedly predominant.

Owing to this marked predominance of one perversion, and the later appearance of the other, in such cases it may well be assumed that the predominating perversion is exiginal, and that the other has been exquired in the course of time. The ideas of subjection and maltreatment, colored with last-ful pleasure, either in an active or passive sense, have become deeply impressed in such an individual.

Occasionally the imagination is tempted to try the same ideas in an inverted rôle. There may even be realization of this inversion. Such attempts in imagination and in acts, however, are usually soon abundaned as inadequate for the original inclination.

Masochism and sadism also occur in combination with contrary sexual instinct, and, too, in association with all forms and degrees of this perversion. The individual of contrary sexuality may be a sadist as well as masochist (comp. Cases 48 and 49 and numerous cases in the following series of cases of contrary sexual instinct).

Wherever a sexual perversion has developed on the basis of a neuropathic individuality, sexual hypernesthesia, which may always be assumed to be present, may induce the phenomena of masochism and sadism—now of the one, now of both combined, one arising from the other. Thus masochism and sadism appear as the fundamental forms of psycho-sexual perversion. which may make their appearance at any point in the domain of sexual aberration.

3. The Association of Last with the Idea of Certain Portions of the Female Person, or with Certain Articles of Female Attire—Fetichism.—In the considerations concerning the psychology of the normal sexual life in the introduction to this work (eide p. 17), it was shown that, within physological limits, the pronounced preference for a certain portion of the body of persons of the opposite sex, particularly for a certain form of this part, may attain great psycho-sexual importance. Indeed, the especial power of attraction possessed by certain forms and peculiarities for many men—in fact, the majority—may be regarded as the real principle of individualization in love.

This preference for certain particular physical characteristics in persons of the opposite sex,—by the side of which, likewise, a marked preference for certain psychical characteristics may be demonstrated,—following Binet ("du Fetischisme dans l'amour," Revus philosophique, 1887) and Lombroso (Introduction to the Italian edition of the second edition of this work), I have called "fetichism"; because this enthusiasm for certain portions

This efigination of notion would, of course, also explain parachlem; for if the origin of sexual intervaries is to be rought in remainshible processes, then toth the envised of one sex and the destruction of the other would fulfill the purpose of nature, and thus the institutive desire to be the victim would be explained. But it must be stated in objection that the battle of this reasoning is insufficient. The extremely complicated process of conjugation in lower organizatio, just which assesses has really prestructed devices the half low years, is by so means to be regarded as shappy a decouring of the last low years, it by so means to be regarded as shappy a decouring of the last low years, it by so means to be regarded as shappy a decouring of the last low years, it by so means to be regarded as shappy a decouring of the last low years, it by so that the state of the last low years, it by so means to be regarded as shappy a decouring of the Schrittianshappin, p. 51, long, 1800).

I Every altempt to explain the facts of rither sidies or reasochism, owing it the close connection of the two phenomena demonstrated here, must also be suited to explain the other prevention. An attempt to offer an explanation of union, by J. G. Rieman (Thitago) (wide " Psychological Aspects of the Stand Appellin," Attents and Sciencipia, 3t. Lean. April, 1991) much this requirement, and for this system may be briefly members here. Stermin, who has several authorities in Angio-Aderytein Elevatine for his theory, starts from the assumption of several materials of (Dallinger, Depolate, Soly), Contourly) which consolves the so-called conjugation, a sexual art in certain low forms of minus 10s, to be beneathed as, a deventing of the partner in the art. He brings into immediate on neutron with this the well-known facts that at the time of sexual union crabs tear limits from their rection and spoters the off the heads of the males, and other suitate arts performed by ruiting unionia with their connects. From this be posses to insteam are, in the orbits, alternial, that the sexual examination of lower from all animal life has an influence in higher forms only in man, and assumes that learner from a sexual appetra are, in their orbits, alternial, that the sexual examination of lower from all animal life has an influence in higher forms only in man, and the pathon is an example of starrier.

of the body (or even articles of attire) and the worship of them, in obedience to sexual impulses, frequently call to mind the reverence for relics, holy objects, etc., in religious cults. This physiological fetichism has already been described in detail on page 17 et seq.

By the side of this physiological fetichism, however, there is, in the psycho-sexual sphere, an undoubted pathological, crotic fetichism, of which there is already a numerous series of cases presenting phenomena having great clinical and psychiatric interest, and, under certain circumstances, forensic importance. This pathological fetichism does not confine itself to certain parts of the body alone, but it is even extended to inanimate objects, which, however, are almost always articles of female wearing-apparel, and thus stand in close relation with the female person.

This pathological fetichism is connected, through gradual transitions, with physiological fetichism; so that (at least in body-fetichism) it is almost impossible to sharply define the beginning of the perversion. Moreover, the whole field of body-setichism does not really extend beyond the limits of things which normally stimulate the sexual instinct. Here the abnormality consists only in the fact that the whole sexual interest is concentrated on the impression made by a part of the person of the opposite sex, so that all other impressions fade and become more or less indifferent. Therefore, the bodyferichist is not to be regarded as a monstrum per excession, like the sadist or masochist, but rather as a monstrum per defection. What stimulates him is not abnormal, but rather what does not affect him,-the limitation of sexual interest that has taken place in him. Of course, this limited sexual interest, within its narrower limits, is usually expressed with a correspondingly greater and abnormal intensity.

It would seem reasonable to assume, as the distinguishing mark of pathological fetichism, the necessity for the presence of the fetich as a conditio sine qua non for the possibility of performance of coitus. But when the facts are more carefully studied, it is seen that this limitation is really only indefinite. There are numerous cases in which, even in the absence of the fetich, coitus is possible, but it is incomplete and forced (often with the help of funcies relating to the fetich), and particularly unsatisfying and exhausting; and, too, closer study of the distinctive subjective psychical conditions in these cases shows that there are transitional states, passing, on the one hand, to mere physiological preferences, and, on the other, to psychical impotence in the absence of the fetich. It is therefore better, perhaps, to seek the pathological criterion of body-fetichism in purely subjective psychical states. The concentration of the sexual interest on a certain portion of the body that has no direct relation to sex (as have the mammae and external genitals)-a peculiarity to be emphasized-often leads bodyfetichists to such a condition that they do not regard coits as the real means of sexual gratification, but rather some form of manipulation of that portion of the body that is effectual as a feticli. This perverse instinct of body-fetichists may be taken as the pathological criterion, no matter whether actual coitus is also possible or not.

Fetichism of inanimate objects or articles of dress, however, in all cases, may well be regarded as a pathological phenomenon; since its objects fall without the circle of normal sexual stimuli. But even here, in the phenomena, there is a certain outward correspondence with processes of the normal psychical vita sexualis; the inner connection and meaning of pathological fetichism, however, are entirely different. In the extatic love of a man mentally normal, a handkerchief or shoe, a glove or letter, the flower "she gave," or a lock of hair, etc., may become the object of worship, but only because they represent a mnemonic symbol of the beloved person—absent or deal —whose whole personality is reproduced by them. The pathological fetichist has no such relations. The fetich constitutes the entire content of his idea. When he is possessed by it, sexual excitement occurs, and the fetich makes itself felt."

According to all observations thus far made, pathological

*To Zota's "Thereoe Require," where the lower repeatedly kines his miscous's tool, the case is quite different from that of above and book-firthers, who, at the sight of every took worn by a lady, or even above, are thrown into several excitoment, even to the estant of circulation.

fetichism seems to arise only on the basis of a psychopathic constitution that is for the most part hereditary, or on the basis of existent mental disease.

Thus it happens that it not infrequently appears combined with the other (original) sexual perversions that arise on the same basis. Not infrequently feticlaism occurs in the most various forms in combination with contrary sexuality, sadism, and masorhism. Indeed, certain forms of body-fetichism (hand- and foot- fetichism) probably have a more or less distinct connection with the latter two perversions (v. infra).

But if fetichism also rests upon a congenital general psychopathic disposition, yet this perversion is not, like those previously considered, essentially of an original mature; it is not congenitally perfect, as we may well assume sadism and masochism to be. While in the sexual perversions thus far described we have met only cases of a congenital nature, here we meet only acquired cases. Aside from the fact that in fetichism the causative circumstance of its acquirement is often demonstrable, here the physiological conditions are wanting, which in sadism and masochism, by means of sexual hypernesthesia, are intensified to perversions, and justify the assumption of congenital origin. In fetichism, every case requires an event which affords the subject of perversion. As has been said, it is, of course, physiological in sexual life to be partial to one or another of woman's pecaliarities, and to be enthusiastic about it; but concentration of the entire sexual interest on such partial impressions is here the essential thing; and for this concentration there must be a particular reason in every individual affected. Therefore, we may accept Binet's conclusion that in the life of every fetichist there may be assumed to have been some event which determined the association of bodful feeling with the single impression. This event is to be referred to the time of early youth, and, as a rule, occurs in connection with the first awakening of the vita sexualis. This first awakening is associated with some partial sexual impression (since it is always something standing in some relation to woman), and stamps it for life as the principal object of sexual interest. The circumstances under which the association arises are usually forgotten. It is only the result of the association that is retained. The general predisposition to psychopathic states and the sexual hypersesthesis of such individuals are all that is original here.

Like the other perversions thus far considered, crotic (pathological) feticlaism may also express itself in strange, unnatural, and even criminal acts; gratification with the female person loss isolebito, theft and robbery of objects of fetichism, pollution of such objects, etc. Here, too, it only depends upon the intensity of the perverse impulse and the relative power of opposing ethical motives, whether and to what extent such acts are performed. These perverse acts of fetichists, like those of other sexually perverse individuals, may either alone constitute the entire external vita sexualis, or occur together with the normal sexual act. This depends upon the condition of physical and psychical sexual power, and the degree of excitability is normal stimuli that has been retained. Where excitability is diminished, not infrequently the sight or touch of the fetich serves as a necessary preparatory act.

The great practical importance which attaches to the facts of fetichisms, in accordance with what has been said, lies in two factors. First, pathological fetichism is not infrequently a cause of psychical impotence. Since the object upon which the sexual interest of the fetichist is concentrated stands, in itself, in no lowerliste relation to the normal sexual act, it often happens that the fetichist diminishes his excitability to normal stimuli

* Though first (ep. at.) declars that every social personian, without emplies depends upon such as "accident acting on a predisposed subject" (where, ends predisposed subject "(where, ends predisposed to, only hypermethesis in general is understood), yet such an assumption for other perventions than federalises is dettler necessary nor sublisheday. For example, it is not observe the signification of positionary positional entity accounty even a very emitable infinitely. If the physiological relationship of fact and exactly had not been developed into explain solves to an almost active medicality.

&lt;sup>8</sup> When young husbands who have associated much with postitute feel improve in the face of the plantity of their young wires—a thing that frequently or are—the condition may be regarded as a kind of (psychiral) buildian in a wider some. One of up patients was never potent with his boundful and chaste young wife, because in was never bound to the last trious methods of prostitutes. When he pow and then attempted solves with profile he was perfectly potent. Bianuscul (sp. rd.) reports a very similar interesting race. Of course, in such cases, a bad conscience and hypothendrismal four id impotence play as important part.

by his perversion, or, at least is capable of coitus only by means of concentration of his fancy upon his fetich. In this perversion, and in the difficulty of its adequate satisfaction, just as in the other perversions of the sexual instinct, lie conditions favoring psychical and physical onanism, which again reacts deleteriously on the constitution and sexual power. This is especially true in the case of youthful individuals, and particularly in the case of those who, on account of opposing ethical and aesthetic motives, shrink from the realization of their perverse desires. Secondly, fetichism is of great forensic importance. Just as sadism may extend to murder and the infliction of bodily injury, fetichism may lead to theft and even to robbery for the possession of the desired articles.

Erotic fetichism has for its object either a certain portion of the body of a person of the opposite sex, or a certain artitle or material of wearing-apparel of the opposite sex. (Only cases of pathological fetichism in men have thus far been observed, and therefore only portions of the female person and attire are spoken of here.) In accordance with this, fetichists fall into three groups.

- (a) The Fetich is a Fort of the Female Body.—Just as, in physiological fetichism, the eyes, the hand, the foot, and the hair of woman very frequently become fetiches, so, in the pathological domain, the same portions of the body become the sole objects of sexual interest. This exclusive concentration of interest on these parts, by the side of which everything else feminine fades, and all other sexual value of woman may sink to nil, so that, instead of coitus, strange manipulations of the fetich become the object of desire,—this it is that makes these cases pathological.
- Case 74: (Binet, op. cit.) X., agod 34, teacher in a Gymanium. In childhood he suffered with convulsions. At the age of ten he began to maxturbate, with institul feelings, which were connected with very strange ideas. He was particularly partial to women's eyes; but since he washed to imagine some form of coltus, and was absolutely innocent in sexual matters, to avoid too great a separation from the eyes, he evolved the idea of making the nastrils the sext of the featule sexual organs. Then his lively sexual desires were connected with this idea. He sketched drawings representing correct Greek profiles of female heads, but the nostrile were so large that immissio penis would have been possible.

One day, in an consilius, he saw a girl in whom he thought he recognized his ideal. He followed her to ber home and immediately proposed to her. Shown the door, he returned again and again, until arrested. X. naver had sexual intercourse.

Hand-fetichists are very numerous. The following case is not really pathological. It is given here as a transitional case:—

Case 75. B., of neuropathic family, very sensual, mentally interAt the sight of the hard of a beautiful young hely he is always charmed and feels sexual excitement to the extent of epeculation. It is his delight to kiss and press such hards. As long as they are revered with gloves he feels unlarppy. By pretexts he tries to get hold of such hards.
He is indifferent to the foot. If the beautiful hards are ommented with rings, his last is increased. Only the living band, not its image, causes him this lastful excitement. It is only when he is exhausted sexually by frequent coitus that the hand loses its sexual charm. At first the memory-picture of female hands disturbed him even while at work.
(Binet, op. cit.)

Binet states that such cases of enthusiasm for the female hand are numerous. Here it may be recalled that, according to Case 24, a man may be partial to the female hand as a result of sadistic impulses; and that, according to Case 46, the same thing may be due to masochistic desires. Thus such cases have more than one meaning. But this is by no means to say that all, or even a majority, of the cases of hand-fetichism allow or require a sadistic or masochistic explanation.

The following interesting case, that has been studied in detail, shows that, in spite of the fact that at first a sadistic or masochistic element seems to have exercised an influence, at the time of the individual's maturity and the complete development of the perversion, the latter contained nothing of these elements. Of course, it is possible that, in the course of time, these disappeared; but here the assumption of the origin of the fetichism in an accidental association meets every requirement:—

Case 76. A case of Acadyfetickiem, communicated by Albert Mell. P. L., aged 28, a merchant of Westphalia. Aside from the fact that the patient's father was remarkably moody and somewhat quick-temperal, nothing of an hereditary nature could be proved in the family. At school the patient was not very diffigent; he was never able to concentrate his attention on any one subject for any length of time; on the other hand, from childhood he had a great inclination for music. His temperament was always nervous.

In August, 1890, he came to me complaining of beelsche and abdominal pain, which in every way gave the impression of being neurasthenic. The patient also said he was destitute of energy. Only after accumularly directed questions did the patient make the following stateneuts concerning his sexual life. As for as he could remember, the beginnings of sexual excitement occurred in his seventh year. Whenever he saw a boy of his own age urinate and caught sight of his peritals, he became instfully excited. L. states with certainty that this excitement was associated with very evident erections. Led astray by another boy, L. learned to masturbate at the age of seven or eight. Being of a very excitable nature," said L., "I practiced masturbation very frequently until my eighteenth year, without gaining any clear idea of the evil results or the meaning of the practice." He was particularly fond of practicing mutual ournism with some of his school friends, but it was by no means an indifferent matter who the other boy was; on the contrary, only a few of his companions could satisfy him in this respect. To the question as to what particularly caused him to prefer this or that hoy, L. replied that a schife, benefitfully formed hand in his school-fellows impelled him to practice mutual onanism with them. L. further remembered that frequently, at the beginning of the gymnastic lesion, he would exercise by himself on a bar standing apart. He did this for the purpose of exciting himself as much as possible; and he was so approximafid that, without using his hand and without ejaculation,-L. was still too young be had lustful pleasure. Another early event which L. remembers is interesting. One day his favorité companion, N., who presticed metual oranism with him, proposed that L. should try to get. hold of his (N.'s) penis, and he would do all he could to prevent it. L. acquireced. In this way the countsm was directly combined with a struggle between both parties, in which N, was always overcome. The struggle always finally ended in N.'s being compelled to allow L. to practice onanism on him. L. assured me that this kind of musturbation had given him, as well as N., especial pleasure. In this way L. continned to practice maxturbation very frequently until his eighteenth year. Warned by a friend, he then began to struggle with all his might against his cril lishit. He became more and more successful, and finally, after the first performance of coitus, he stopped the practice of coanism entirely. But this was only accomplished in his twenty-second year. It now seems incomprehensible to the patient—and by says he is filled with disgust at the thought of it-how he could ever have found pleasure in performing masterbation with other boys. Now, nothing could induce him to touch another man's genitals, the sight of which is even engineant to him. He has lost all inclination for men, and feels attracted by women exclusively.

A kind of radiometery antists in L. and mastelies in N.

It must be mentioned, however, that, though L. has a decided inclination for the female sex, he presents an abnormal phenomenes.

The essential thing in woman that excites him is the sight of her beautiful lumbs; L. is by far more impressed when he touches a beautiful female hand than he would be were he to see its presence in a state of complete undity. The extent to which L.'s preference for beautiful female hands goes is shown by the following incident:—

It know a beautiful young hely possessed of every charm, but he hands were quite large and not teantifully formed, and often they were not as clean as It could wish. For this reason it was not only impossible for It, to conselve a desper interest in the hely, but he was not able even to touch her. It believes that there is nothing more diagnosting to his than dirty finger-nails; this alone would make it impossible for him to touch a woman who in all other respects was most beautiful. It formerly, as a substitute for coitus, had the puells perform genital manufation with her hand until ejaculation took place.

To the question as to what there was about a woman's hand that attracted him in particular, whether he saw in it a symbol of power, and whether it gave him pleasure to be directly humiliated by a woman, the patient answered that only the beautiful form of the hand charmed has ; that it afforded him so gratification to be humiliated by a woman; and that he had never had any thought to regard the hand as the symbol or instrument of a woman's power. The preference for the hand is shift so great that the potient has greater pleasure when his gentals are touched by it than when he performs ceitus in vaginam. Yet, the patient prefers to perform the latter, because it seems to him to be natural, while the former seems abnormal. The touch of a beautiful female hand on his body immediately causes him to have erection; he thinks that kissing and other centacts do not exert nearly so strong an influence. It is only of inte years that the patient has performed collar frequently, but it has always been very difficult for him to determine to its it. Too, in coitse, he did not find the complete satisfaction he sought However, when he finds himself near a woman whom he would like to possess, sometimes, at more night of her, his sexual excitement becomes so intense that ejaculation results. L. says expressly that during this be does not intentionally touch or press his genitals; ejaculation under such circumstances affords him much more pleasure than he experiences in actual coitus."

To go tack, the potient's dreams were never about coitus. When

In had pollations at night, they were almost always associated with other thoughts than those that occur in the normal use. The patient's dreams are of events of his school-days. During his school-days, besides the mutual countent described, he had ejaculations whenever he became anxiously excited. When, for example, the teacher dictated an extemporaneous exercise, and L. was unable to follow in translation, ejaculation often occurred. The pollutions that now occur occusionally, at night, are only accompanied by dreams that have the same or a similar subject,—the events at school just mentioned. On account of his armatural feeling and sansibility, the patient thinks he is incapable of loving a woman long-

Treatment of the patient's perversion has not yet been possible.

This case of hand-fetichism certainly does not depend on masochism or sadism, but is to be explained simply by early indulgence in mutual onanism. There is here, also, quite as little of contrary sexual instinct. Before the sexual appetite was clearly conscious of its object, the hands of school-fellows were used. As soon as the instinct for the opposite sex became evident, the interest for the hand was transferred to woman.

In hand-fetichists, who, according to Binet, are so numerous, it is possible that other associations lead to the same result.

Next to the hand-fetichists, naturally come the foot-fetichists. While glove-fetichism, which belongs to the next group of object-fetichism, seldom takes the place of hand-fetichism, we find shoe- and boot-fetichism, of which there are innumerable cases occurring everywhere, taking the place of enthusiasm for the naked female foot. There are only here and there traces of the latter enthusiasm, and these are scarcely pathological. It is easy to see the reason for this. The female hand is usually seen uncovered; the foot, covered. Thus the early associations which determine the direction of the vita sexualis are naturally connected with the naked hand, but with the covered foot.

Shoe-fetichism also finds its place in the following group of dress-fetichism; however, on account of its demonstrable

11

*This is also served hypermethods. Any interest affects the record sphere (Bineria "dynamogenic genérale"). Concerning this, Dr. Mell communicates the following case : "A risultar string in described by Mr. E., aged 27; merchant. While at second, and afferward, he after had ejacurates with pleasurable feeling when he was setted with a feeling of interest attainty. Bender, almost every other physical or number pile elected a similar influence. E., so be make, but a person sexual position, but suffers with nervous impotence."

masochistic character in the majority of cases, it has been, for the most part, described already (p. 123 et seq.).

Besides the eyes, hand, and foot, the mouth and ears often play the rôle of a fetich. Among others, Moll (op. cit.) mentions such cases. (Comp. also Belot's romance, "La Bouche de Madame X.," which, B. states, rests upon actual observation.)

The following remarkable case came under my personal observation:—

Case 72. A gentleman of very bod horedity consulted me reseeming impotence that was driving him almost to despair. While he was young, his fetich was women of plump form. He married such a bely, and was impay and potent with her. After a few months the ledy fell very iil, and lost much desh. When, one day, he tried to resume his maribal duty, he was absolutely impotent, and remained so. If, however, he attempted collins with plump women, he was perfectly potent.

Even bodily defects may become feticlies.

Deceates, who himself ("Traité des Passions," caxxvi) expresse some opinions concerning the origin of peculiar affections in associations of ideas, was always partial to cross-eyed women, because the object of his first love had such a defect. (Binet, sp. cit.)

Lydeton ("A Lecture on Sexual Perservion," Chicago, 1890") reports the case of a man who had a love-affair with a woman whose right lower extremity had been augustabed. After separation from her, he searched for other woman with a like defect."—A negative fields.

When the part of the female hody forming the fetich is capable of removal, like the hair, the most extravagant aris may be performed. Therefore, hair-fetichists form an interesting and forensically-important category. While such admirers of female hair are probably not infrequent within physiological limits, and possibly various senses (sight, smell, and hearing, through crepitant sounds,—and certainly touch, just as with velvet- and silks fetichists, v. infree) are thus excited with an accompaniment of lustful feeling; yet, a sense of similar pathological cases has also been observed, in which the hair-fetichism had become an overpowering impulse, and driven the individuals to commit crimes.1.2 These form the group of hair-despotlers.

* Philas Med. and Stary, Tep., Sept. 2, 1889.

<sup>7</sup> This rice was originally reported by fiv. A. S. Seyanida, Chicago (Western Mol., Reporter, Nov., 1988).

Case 18. A buir-desposler. P., aged 40, artistic locksmith, single. His father was temporarily insune, and his mother was very nervous. He developed well, and was intelligent; but he was early affected with nice and imperative ideas. He had never masturbated. He loved platouscally, and often busied himself with matrimonial plans. He level ceites infrequently with prostitutes, but never felt satisfied with such intercourse-rather, disgusted. Three years ago he was overtaken by misfortune (financial rain), and, besides, he had a federile disease, with delicities. These things had a very bull effect on his bereditarily-predisposed nervous system. On August 28, 1883, P. was arrested at the Trocaloro, in Paris, is floymed, as he forcibly out off a young girl's hair. He was arrested with the hair in his hand and a pair of absers in his socket. He excused himself on the ground of momentary mental confusion and an unfortunate, irreststible passion; he confused that he hal ten times cut off mir, which he took great delight in keeping at home. On searching his home, sixty-free switches and trasses of hair were found, assorted in packets. P. had already been once arrested, on Becomber 15, 1886, under similar circumstances, but was released for lack of evidence.

P. states that, for the last three years, when he is alone in his recent at night, he feels ill, anxious, excited, and diany, and then is troubled by the impulse to touch female hair. When it happened that he could actually take a young girl's hair in his hand, he felt intensely excited sexually, and had erection and speculation without touching the girl in say

&quot;Molt (sp. et., p. 131) reports: "A man, X., becomes intensely exceed scenarily electron be seen a woman with the lain in a besid; loose har, no matter how heavilled, cannot produce this effect."

Of course, it is not justifiable to consider all but drapotlers intichists, for in a few cases each arts are time for the purpose of gain,—i.e., the stolen hair is not a few-h.

Magenta (Arch. de Neurologie, vol. 8 actil. No. 80, 1800) gives the details of a case of sexual personnes in a degenerate individual, where the elements of feticities and serious Services kined, and desirate miner the authors require found extisted the in self-maritanen. The persons impulse began at the age of six; the sight of a boy or gui with a delicate, white this awakened in him sexual appetits, with a desire to hite and eat a piece of the fide. While currening a horse, the impedac to bits the soft akin of its nostrill arose, and allowerd the memory of this became attacked with the act of entadors. Later, he began by pack kinnelf with pine, knives, etc., while mesterbating. The desire is life and ear this was also provoked by the sight of shiring blades, like those of scissors. He was always able to result the impulse to attack young girls; but the struggle was hard, and for sight mostly be healthted tofice ventley but passive on his own person. He was finally errorbed in the act of curring a large place of skin from his arm with sciouse. Asked the notice of his pell-montation, in stated that for several hours he had been following a younggid who had a fire, where skin, and was burning with drafter in cut out a piece of it and cut R. the his person there were many some of previous mutilations. The impulse was devoid of natural second desire. Chapter the piece of skip provided ejecutation .- Trans-other way. On reaching home, he would feel ashamed of what had taken place; but the wish to possess hair, always accompanied by great sensual pleasure, became more and more powerful in him. He wondered that previously, even in the most intimate intercourse with women, he had experienced no such feeling. Our evening he could not resist the impalse to est off a girl's lair. With the hair is his hand, at home, the mount percens was repeated. He was forced to rule his body with the hur and envelop his genitals in it. Finally, quite exhausted, he grew ashared, and could not trust himself to go out for several days. After meetly of rest he was again impelled to possess himself of female hair, indifferent as to whose it might be. If he attained his end, he felt himself possessed by a supernatural power and unable to give up his booty. If he could not attain the object of his desire, he became greatly depressed, nurried housand there revoked in his collection of hair. He combed and feedled it, and thus had intense orgasm, satisfying himself by masturbation. Hair exposed in the cases of hair-dressers made no impression on him; it required hair hanging down from a female head.

At the height of his act, he states, he is in such a state of excitment that he has only imperfect appeareption and subsequent memory of what he does. When he touches the hair with the shears he has erection, and, at the instant of cutting it off, ejaculation. Since his misfortune, about three years ago, he states that he has had weakness of memory, is easily exhausted mentally, and has been troubled by electioners and night-terrors. P. deeply regrets his crime.

Not only hair, but a number of hair-pins, ribbons, and other articles of the feminine toilet, were found in his possession, which he had had presented to him. He had always had an actual manis for collecting such things, as well as newspapers, pieces of wood, and other worthirse trash, which he would never give up. He also had a strange and, to him, inexplicable fear of passing a certain street; if he ever tried it, itemade him all.

The opinion (medico-legal) showed him to be hereditarily prelipowed, and proved the imperative, impulsive, and decidedly involuntary character of the criminal acts, which had the significance of an expentive set, induced by an imperative idea, with an accompanion of everpowering abnormal sexual feeling. Pardon; asylum for insute. (Voida, Socquet, Motel, Annales of Vagiciae, April, 1890.)

Following this case, is a similar one which also deserves attention; for it has been well studied, and may be called almost classical; and, too, it places the fetich, as well as the original associative awakening of the idea, in a clear light:—

Case 79. A hade-despoider. E., aged 25. Maternal aunt, spilepie; brother had convulsions. E. says he was fairly healthy as a child, and learned quite easily. At the age of lifteen he had a serson! Seeing of pleasure, with erection, at the sight of one of the village beauties combing ber hair. Until that time persons of the opposite sex had unde no impression on him. Two months later, in Paris, the sight of young girls with their hair dowing down over their shoulders always excited him intensely, One day he could not resist an opportunity to twist a young girl's hair in his dagers. For this he was arrested and sentenced to imprisonment for three months. After that he served five years as a soldier. During this time hair was not dangerous for him, though also not very accessible; but he dreamed sometimes of female heads with the lair besided or flowing. Occasional coitus with women, but without laving their lair effective as a feticle. Once more in Paris, he again dreamed as before, and because greatly excited by femule hair. He never dreamed about the whole form of a woman, only of heads with benids of hair. His sexual excitement due to this fetich had become so intense of late that he had resorted to masturbation. The idea of touching female hair, or, better, of possessing it to masturbate while handling it, grew more and more powerful. Of late, when he had Semale bair in his fingers, ejaculation was induced. One day he succeeded in sutting hair, about 25 centimetres long, from three little girls in the street, and keeping it in his possession, when he was arrested in a fourth attempt. Deep regret and shame. He was not sentenord. Since spending same time in the saylum, he has so far improved that female hair no longer excites him. Set at liberty, he thought of going to his native place, where the women wear their hair done up. (Magnan, Archio, de l'authropol, erisunelle, v., Nr. 28.)

A third case is the following, which is likewise suited to illustrate the psychopathic nature of such phenomena; and the remarkable means which induced a cure are worthy of note:—

Case 80. Hair-fetichism. Mr. X., between thirty and forty years old; from the higher class of society; single. He says that he comes of a healthy family, but from childhood has been nervous, vacilisting, and peculiar; that since his eighth year he has been powerfully attracted by female hair. This was particularly true in the case of young girls. When he was nine years old, a girl of thirteen sestneed him. He did not understand it, and was not at all excited. A twelve-year-old sister of this girl also courted, kissed, and hugged him. He allowed this quietly, because this girl's hair pleased him so well. When about ten years old, he began to have sensual feelings at the sight of female hair that pleased him. Gradually these feelings occurred spontaneously, and memory-pictures of girls' hair were always immediately associated with them. At the age of eleven he was taught to musturbate by school-makes. The associative connection of sexual feelings and a fetichistic idea was already established, and always appeared when the potient indulged in evil practices with his companions. With advancing years, the feticle grew more and more pamer. fel. Even false hair began to excite him, but he always preferred natural hair. When he could touch or kiss it, he was perfectly happy. He wrote essays and poems on the beauty of female hair; he sketched basis of hair and masturbated. After his fourteenth year he became so powerfully excited by his fetich that he had violent erections. In contrast with his early taste while a boy, he was now charmed only by laxurient, then black hair. He experienced intense desire to kiss such lair, particulate to suck it. To touch such hair afforded him but little satisfaction; he obtained much more pleasure in looking at it, but particularly in kiesing and enoking it. If this were impossible, he would become anhappy, even to the extent of tadium vitas. Then he would attempt to relieve himself. imagining fantastic "hair-adventures" and mosturbating. Not infrequently, in the street and in crowds, he could not keep from imprinting a kiss on ladios' heads. He would then harry bome to meeturbate Sometimes he could resist this impulse; but it was then personer for him, filled with feelings of fear, to run away as quickly as possible, is order to escape the domination of his fetich. He was only once inpelled to cut off a god's hair in a crowd. In the set be was seized with fear, and was not successful with his pocket-knife; and, by flight, he narrowly escaped detection.

When he become mature, he attempted to satisfy himself in colum with puellis. He induced powerful erection by kissing the hair, but enald not induce ejaculation. Therefore, he was unsatisfied by coitus. At the same time, his favorite idea was coltus with kissing of hair; but even this did not satisfy him, because it did not induce ejeculation. Finds de micur, he once stole the combings of a lady's hair, put it in his mouth, and masturbated while calling its owner up in imagination. In the dark a woman could not interest him, because he could not then see her bair. Flowing hair also had no charm for him; nor did the hair about the genitals. His crotic dreams were all about hair. Of late the patient had become so excited that he had a kind of entyrissis. He was incopable of business, and felt so unhappy that he sought to drown his sorrow in alcohol. He drank large quantities, had alcoholic delirium, an attack of alcoholic epilepsy, and required hospital frontment. After the intentestion ind passed away, under appropriate instituent, the sexual excitement soon disappeared; and when the patient was discharged, he was freed from his Schichistic idea, save for its pocasional occurrence in dreams. The physical examination showed normal genitals and podegenerative signs winteren.

Such cases of hair-fetichism, which lead to attacks on female hair, seem to occur everywhere, from time to time. In November, 1890, according to reports in American newspapers, several cities in the United States were troubled by such hairdespoilers.

(b) The Fetick is an Article of Female Attire.-The great importance of adomment, ornament, and dress, in the normal vita sexualis of man, is very generally recognized. Culture and fishion have, to a certain extent, endowed woman with artificial sexual characteristics, the removal of which, when woman is seen unattired, in spite of the normal sensual effect of this sight, may exert an opposite influence.' It should not be overlooked that female dress often shows a tendency to emphasize and exaggerate certain sexual peculiarities,-secondary sexual characteristics (bosom, waist, hips). In most individuals the sexual instinct awakes long before there is any possibility or opportunity of intimate intercourse, and the early desires of youth are concerned with the ordinary appearance of the attired female form. Thus it happens that not infrequently, at the beginning of the vita sexualis, ideas of the persons exerting sexual charms and ideas of their attire become associated. This association may be lasting-the attired woman may be always preferredif the individuals dominated by this perversion do not in other respects attain to a normal vita sexualis, and find gratification in natural charms.

In psychopathic individuals, sexually hyperasthetic, as a result of this, it actually happens that the dressed woman is always preferred to the nude female form. It may be recalled that in Case 48 the woman was not to take off a garment, and Comp. Guelle's remarks about his adventure in Genera ("Busch and der Schwein," 1. Abtheti., Schlaus).

I The frequent changes of style of dress which fashion dictates may be referred to a payabological law. The reaction of the necrous system to a constant allocates dissolities in proportion to the dentities of the action of the stimulus. Constant association with stallty removes its power to emits scrumly. Owing to then, the savage emissions to allocat attention by changing his physical permission; he dresses his hair in some remarkable way, or paints his body; then he introduced his skim, or performs stilling actionation, such as half-characters and circumciases (comp. Westermarch, op. ot., p. 190). Finally, multilating is replaced by narrable appendages, upon which transmits are worn; and thus there is affected opportunity for change, in obedience to the abcouncines physicagical requirement, which is called a "daste for change." Undentatedly, remain's desire for changes of fashion is primarily dependent upon man's desire to be pleased; and her fashion in the discrime has certainly been mandered from him to her by circlication (comp. p. 16).—Takes.

that in Case 51, square evolutes, the woman was preferred dressed. In Case 89, of the sixth edition,—that of a man manifesting contrary sexuality,—the same preference is expressed.

Dr. Moll (op. cit.) mentions a patient who could not perform coitus with puella nuda; the woman had to have on a chemise, at least. The same author (op. cit., p. 129) mentions a man affected with contrary sexuality, who was subject to the same dress-fetichism.

The reason for this phenomenon is apparently to be found in the mental onanism of such individuals. In seeing innumerable clothed forms, they have cultivated desires before seeing mudity.<sup>1</sup>

A more marked form of dress-fetichism is that in which, instead of the dressed woman, a certain kind of attire becomes a fetich. One can understand how, with an intense and early sexual impression, combined with the idea of a particular garment on the woman, in hypernesthesic individuals, a very intense interest in this garment might be developed.

Hammond (op. cit.) reports the following case, taken from Rouband ("Tmité de l'impuissance," Paris):—

Case 81. X., son of a general. He was raised in the country. At the age of fourteen he was initiated into the joys of love by a young lady. This hady was a bloods, and wore her hair in ringlets; and, in needer to would detection in sexual intercourse with her young lover, she always wore her usual clothing,—guiters, a correct, and a silk dress.

When his studies were completed, and he was sent to a garmen where he could eajoy freedom, he found that his sexual desire could be excited only under certain conditions. A bennette could not excite him in the least, and a woman in night-clothes could stifle every bit of love in him. In order to awaken his desire, a woman had to be a bloade, and wear guiters, a corset, and a silk dress,—in short, she had to be dressed into the lady who had first awakened his sexual desire. He was slurge compelled to give up thoughts of matrimony, because he knew he would be muchle to fulfill his marital duty with a woman in night-clother.

Hammond reports another case where coltus maritalis could be performed only by the help of a certain costume; and Dr. Moll mentions b The fact that the partitived does is often more charming than when it is petterty made, is, as far as object goes, similar, but quite different psychically. This depends upon the effect of evaluate and expectation, which are contains phenomena, and in some particlogical.

several similar cases in individuals of betero and home-saxuality. The same may often be shown to be an early association, and such may always be assumed. It is only in this way that one can explain why a certain costume cannot be resisted by such individuals, no matter what person wears the fetich. Thus one can understand why, as Coffiguou (op. cit.) relates, men at brothels demand that the women with whom they are concerned put on certain costumes, such as that of a ballet-dancer, or non, etc.; and why these houses are familiable with a complete wardrobe for such purposes.

Binet (sp. cst.) relates the case of a judge who was exclusively in love with Italian girls who came to Paris as artists' models, and their peculiar costonse. The cause was here demonstrably an impression made at the time of the awakening of the sexual instinct.

A third form of dress-fetichism, having a much higher degree of pathological significance, is by far the most frequent. In this form it is no longer the woman herself, dressed, or even dressed in a particular fashion, that constitutes the principal sexual stimulus, but the sexual interest is so concentrated on some certain article of female attire that the lustful idea of this object is entirely separated from the idea of woman, and thus obtains an independent value. This is the real domain of dressfetichism, where an immimate object—an isolated article of wearing-apparel—is alone used for the excitation and satisfaction of the sexual instinct. This third form of dress-fetichism is also the one that is important forensically.

In a large number of these cases the fetiches are articles of female underwear, which, owing to their private use, are suited to occasion such associations.

Case 82. K., aged 45, shoomaker, is reported to be without hereditary taint. He is peculiar, and has small mental endowment. He is of musculine habitus and without signs of degeneration. Previously blancless in conduct, on the evening of July 5, 1876, he was detected taking stoken female under-garments from a place of concenherat. There were found with him about three hundred acticles of the female toilet, among them, besides chemises and deavers, night-caps, garters, and a female dell. When arrested he was wearing a chemise. Since his thirteenth year he had been a slave to an impulse to steal women's linear; but, after his first panishment for it, he had become very careful, and stoken with refinement and success. When this longing came over him, he would grow maxious, and his head would become heavy. Then he could not resist the impulse, cost what it might. He was indifferent to the source of the articles. At night, on going to bed, he would put on the stolen clothing and create beautiful women in imagination, thus inducing pleasurable feeling and ejacuistion. This was apparently the motive of his thefts; at least, he had never disposed of any of the articles, but had hidden them here and there.

He declared that, earlier in his life, he had indulged in normal sexual intercourse with women. He denied commism, pedernsty, and other sexual acts. He said he was engaged at twenty-five, but the engagement was broken through no fault of his. He was inexpuble of insight into the abnormality of his condition and the wrong of his acts. (Passow, Free-telpahraschrift f. per. Medic., N. F. aaviii, p. 81; Krams, "Psychologic des Verbrechens," 1884, p. 190.)

Hammond (op. cit.) reports a case of passionate interest in single articles of female wearing-apparel. Here, also, the patient's pleasure consisted in wearing a corset and other female garments (without any traces of contrary sexual instinct). The pain of tight lacing, experienced by himself or induced in women, is a delight to him,—sadistic-masochistic element.

A case probably belonging here is one reported by Dier ("Der Selbstmord," 1838, p. 24), where a young man could not resist the impulse to tear female linen. While tearing it, be always had ejaculation.

A combination of fetichism with an impulse to destroy the fetich (in a certain sense, sadism with inanimate objects) seems to occur quite frequently (comp. Case 93).

An article of dress, which, though it has not really a private character, by its material and color, as well as by the place where it is worn, recalls under-garments, and hence has sexual relations, is the apron (comp. also the metonymic use of the word "apron" for "petticoat" in the saying, "To chase every apron," etc.). This explains the following case:—

Case 83. C., aged 37; of a badly tainted family; of small mental endownest; plagiocephalic. At fifteen his attention was attracted by speak hung out to dry. He bound them shout himself and masturbated behind the fence. From that time he could not see agrous without repealing the set. If any one—no matter whether man or woman—with an aprea or came near him, he was compelled to run after the person. In order to free him from this constant stealing of aprons, he was sent as a marine in his sixteenth year. In this calling he saw no aprons, and had continual rest. When, at miseteen, he esturned home, he was again compelled to steal aprons, and, as a result, got into serious complications, and was several times locked up. He sought to free himself of his weakness by a sojourn of several years in a cloister. When he came out, he was just as had as before. As a result of a new theft, he underwest a medico-legal examination, and was committed to an asylum. He never stole anything but aprons. It was a pleasure to him to revel in the memory of the first apron he ever stole. His drams were filled with aprons. He occasionally used the memory of his thefts to make cettus possible, or for masturbation. (Charcot and Magnan, Arch, de neurolog., 1852, Nr. 12.)

In a case reported by Lombroso (*Amori anomali precess neipairs," Arch. da peich., 1885, p. 17), analogous to those of this series, a boy of very had heredity, at the age of four, lad crections and great sexual excitement at the sight of white garments, particularly underelething. He was instituly excited by handling and crumpling them. At the age of ten he began to masterione at the sight of white, starched lines. He seems to have been affected with moral inamity, and was executed for murder.

The following case of petticoat-fetichism is combined with peculiar circumstances:—

Case 84. Z., aged 35; efficial; the only child of a nervous mother and healthy father. From childhood he was "nervous," and at the consultation his neuropathor eyes, delicate, sleader body, fine features, very thin voice, and sparse growth of beard attracted attention. The patient presents nothing abnormal except symptoms of slight neurosthenia. Senitals and sexual functions normal. Patient states that he has only masturbated four or five times, and that when he was very young. As only as at the age of thirteen, the patient was powerfully excited sexually by the sight of wet famale dresses; while the same dresses, when dry, had no effect upon him. His greatest delight was to look at women with wet garments in the rain. If he môt a women having a pleasing face under such circumstances, he experienced an intense feeling of lost-ful pleasure, had erection, and felt impelled to perform coitss. He states that he has never had any desire to wet female dresses or to throw water on women. He can give so explanation of the origin of his peculiarity.

It is possible that, in this case, the sexual instinct was first awakmed by the sight of a woman as she exposed her charms by raising her skirts in wet weather. The obscure instinct, not yet conscious of its object, then became directed to the wet garments, as in other cases.

Lovers of female handkerchiefs are frequent, and, therefore, important forensically. As to the frequency of landkerchief-fetichism, it may be remarked that the handkerchief is the one article of feminine attire which, outside of intimate association, is most frequently displayed, and which, with its warmth from the person and specific odors, may by accident fall into the hands of others. The frequency of early association of lustful feelings with the idea of a handkerchief, which may always be presumed to have occurred in such cases of fetichism, probably is due to this.

Case 85. A taker's assistant, agod 22, single, previously of good repute, was discovered stealing a handkerchief from a hely. In sincere remores, he confessed that he had slolen from eighty to ninety such landkerchiefs. He had cared only for handkerchiefs, and, indeed, only for those belonging to young women attractive to him. In his outward appearance the culprit presents nothing peculiar. He dresses himself with much taste. His conduct is peculiar, anxious, depressed, and unmindy, and beoften lapses into whining and tears. Lack of self-edimos, weakness of comprehension, and slowness of peropetion and reflection, are noticeable. One of his sisters is epileptic. He lives in good circumstances; was never severely sick; developed well. In relating his history, he shows weakness of memory and task of clearness; calculation is hard for him, though when young he learned and comprehended easily. His antices, uncertain state of mind gives rise to a suspicion of manism. The culprit confessed that he had been given to this practice excessively since his nineteenth year. For some years, as a result of his vice, he had suffered with depression, lassitude, trembling of the limbs, pain in the tack, and distrehination for work. Frequently a depressed, arxious state of mink cams over him, in which he avoided people. He had exagremted, face tastic notices about the results of sexual intercourse with women, and could not bring himself to indulge in it. Of late, however, he had thought of marriage. With great remorse and in a weak-minded way, X asw conferred that six mouths before, while in a growd, he became richardy excited sexually at the sight of a portty young girl, and was compelled to crowd up against her. He felt an impulse to compensate himself for the want of a more complete satisfaction of his sexual excitement, by stelling bur handkerchief. Thereafter, as soon as he came near attractive females, with violent sexual excitement, pulpitation of the heart, exection and numeries cocured, the impulse would seize him to growd up against them and, faste de mieux, steal their handkerchiefs. Although the consciousness of his criminal art never left him for a moment, he was unable to make any resistance to the impulse. During the set he felt un maxify which was in part due to his inpedinate sexual impulse, and partly to the fear of detection. The medico-legal opinion rightly gave weight to the congenital mental enfectbement and the permicious influence of masturbation, and referred the abnormal impulses to a perverse sexual impulse, calling stiention to the presence of an interesting and well-known physiological connection between the offactory and sexual senses. The inshiftly to resist the pathological impulse was recognized. X. was not punished. (Zippe, Wiener Mod. Workenscheife, 1879, Nr. 23.)

I am indebted to the kindness of Dr. Fritsch, of Vienna, for further facts concerning this handkerchief-fetichist, who was again arrested in August, 1890, in the act of taking a handkerchief from a lady's pocket;—

On searching his house, four hundred and forty-six ladies' hundkerchiefs were found. He stated that he had burned besides two bendless of them. In the course of the examination, it was further shown that X. had been punished with imprisonment for fourteen days, in 1883, for stealing twenty-seven handkerchiefe, and again with imprisonment for three weeks, in 1886, for a similar crime. Concerning his relatives, nothing mere could be learned than that his father was subject to congestions, and that a brother's daughter was weak-minded and constitutionally neuropethic. X. had married in 1879, and embarked in an independent business, and in 1881 he made an assignment. Soon after that, his wife, who could not live with him, and with whom he did not perform his marital duty (denied by X.), demanded a divorce. Thereafter he lived as assistant baker to his brother. He complained butterly of an impulse for ladies handkerobleds, but when opportunity offered, unfortunately, he could not resist it. In the net he experienced a feeling of delight, and felt as if some one were forcing him to it. Sometimes he could restrain himself, but, when the hely we pleasing to him, he yielded to the first impulse. He would be wet with sweat, partly from four of detection, and partly on account of the impulse to perform the act. He says he has been sensually excited, by the sight of handkerchiefs belonging to women, since paberty. cannot recall the exact circumstances of this fetichistic association. The sensual excitement, occasioned by the sight of a tirty with a handkeredief hanging out of her pecket, had constantly increased. This had espectedly caused erection, but mover elaculation. After his twenty first year, he says, he had inclination to normal sexual indulgence, and had coitus without difficulty without ideas of handkerchieds. With increasing feticioen, the appropriation of handkerchiefs had afforded him much more satisfaction than coltus. The appropriation of the handkerchief of a inde attractive to him was the same to him as intercourse with her would have been. In the art he had true organs;

If he could not gain possession of the handkerchief he desired, he would become painfully excited, tremble, and sweat all over. He kept separate the handkerchiefs of indies particularly pleasing to him, and reveled in the sight of them, taking great pleasure in it. The oder of them also gave him great delight, though he states that it was really the oder peculiar to the linen, and not the perfume, which excited him sensually. He had mesturbated but very seldom.

X. complained of no physical aliments except secasional heathche and vertigo. He greatly regretted his misfortune, his abnormal impulse, the evil spirit that impelled him to such criminal acts. He had but one wish: that some one might help him. Objectively there are mid neurosthenic symptoms, anomalies of the distribution of blood, and inequal pupils.

It was proved that X, had committed his crimes in obedience to an abnormal, irresistible impulse. Parsion.

Such cases of handkerchief-fetichism, where an abnormal individual is driven to theft, are very numerous. They also occur in combination with contrary sexuality, as is proved by the following case, which I borrow from page 125 of Dr. Moll's frequently-cited work 1:—

Case 86. Handkerchief-feticities in a Case of Contrary Servici Instinct.—K., aged 38; mechanic; a powerfully built man. He makes numerous complaints,—weakness of the legs, pain in the back, beafacts, want of piensure in work, etc. The complaints give the decided impression of neurasthenia with tendency to hypochondria. Only after the patient had been under my treatment several menths did be state that he was also abnormal sexually.

K. had never had any inclination whatever for women; but hardsome mon, on the other hand, had a peculiar charm for him. Patient had masturbated frequently until he came to me. He had never practiced mutual counters or pederasty. He did not think that he would have found satisfaction in this, because, in spite of his perference for men, an article of white linen was his chief charm, though the beauty of its owner played a rôle. The handkerchiefs of handsome men particularly excite him sexually. His greatest delight is to masturbate in men's tandkerchiefs. For this reason he often took his friend's handkerchiefs.

<sup>7</sup> On page 104 (sp. cit.) Dr. Moll writer concerning this impulse in below sexual bulls blasts; "The passion, for handlore third may go so far that the man is entirely needer their curries! A woman fells me: "I know a certain gratherase, and when I see him at a distance I only need to draw out my handlore hief so that it peops out of my pecket, set I am certain that he will follow me as a dog follows its master. Go where I please, this processas will follow me. He may be riding in a carriage or engaged in important business, and yet, when he sees my handlore third he drops storything in order to follow ms.—i.e., #F handlore third."

In order to save himself from detection, he always left one of his own handkerehiefs with his friend in place of the one he stole. In this way he sought to escape the enspicion of theft, by creating the appearance of a mistake. Other articles of men's linear also excited K, sexually, but not to the extent handkershiefs did.

K, had often performed coitus with women, having creetion and ejaculation, but without lustful pleasure. There was also nothing which could stimulate the patient to the performance of coitus. Erection and ejaculation occurred only when, during the act, he thought of a man's handkerchief; and this was easier for the patient when he took a friend's handkerchief with him, and had it in his hand during coitus. In accordance with his sexual perversion, in his nightly pollutions with lustful bless, men's linear played the principal ride.

It is possible that, in this interest in (used) handkerchiefs, elements of feeling in the sense of masochism, group "c." are also often at work.

Still far more frequent than the fetichism of linen garments is that of women's shoes. These cases are, in fact, almost innumerable, and a great many of them have been scientifically studied; but I have but a few reports at second hand of the similar glove-fetichism (concerning the reason for the relative infrequency of glove-fetichism, ride p. 161).

In shoe-fetichism the close relationship of the object to the feminine person, which explains linen-fetichism, is absolutely wanting. For this reason, and because there is a large number of well-observed cases at hand, in which the fetichistic enthusisam for the female shoe or boot consciously and undoubtedly arises from masochistic ideas, an origin of a masochistic nature, even when it is concealed, may always be assumed in shoefetichism, when, in the concrete case, no other manner of origin is demonstrable. For this reason the majority of the cases of shoes or foots fetichism have been given under "Musochism." There the constant masochistic character of this form of crotic freichism has been sufficiently demonstrated by means of transitional conditions. This presumption of the masochistic character of shoe-fetichism is weakened and removed only where another accidental cause for an association between sexual excitation and the idea of women's shoes-the occurrence of which is quite improbable a priori-is demonstrable. In the two following cases, however, there is such a demonstrable connection:-

Case 87. Shoe-feriouses. Mr. v. P., of an old and honombin family, Pole, aged 32, consulted me, in 1836, on account of "onnaturalness" of his vita sexualis. He gave the assurance that he came of a perfectly healthy family. He had been nervous from childhood, and had suffered with chores minor at the age of eleven. For ten years he had suffered with electromess and various neurosthesic allments. From his fifteents year he had recognized the difference of the sexes and been tapable of sexual excitation. At the age of seventeen he lad been reduced by a French governess, but coltus was not permitted; so that intense mutual sommal excitement (mutual masturbation) was all that was possible. In this situation his attention was attracted by her very elegant boost. They made a very deep impression. His intercourse with this lawd person instell four mouths. During this association her shoes became a fetich for the unfortunate boy. He began to have an interest in ladies! shoes in general, and actually went about trying to-catch sight of hilles wearing proxy boots. The shoe-fetichism gained great power over his mind. He had the governess touch his penis with her shoes, and thus ejeculation with great bustful feeling was immediately induced. After separation from the governors, he went to puellis, whom he had perform the same manipulation. This was usually sufficient for satisfaction. Only seldom did be resort to coitus as an auxiliary, and inclination for it grew less and less. His vita sexualis consisted of dram-polintiers, in which women's shoes played the exclusive role; and of gratification with women's shoes apposits ad mentulam, but this had to be done by the guells. In the society of the opposite sex the only thing that interested him was the shee, and that only when it was elegant, of the French style, with heels, and of a brilliant black, like the original,

In the rourse of time the following conditions have become accessory: A prostitute's also that is elegant and chie; starched patricula, and black home, if possible. Nothing else in woman interests him. He is absolutely indifferent to the naked foot. Women have not the alightest mental charm for him. He had never had unacochistic desirus, is the sense of being trod upon. In the course of years his feticism had gained such power that when he saw a lady on the street, of a certain appearance and with certain shows, he was so intensely excited that he had to masturbate. Slight pressure on the penis sufficed to induce ejaculation, in his state of severe neurathents. Shoes displayed in shops, and, of inte, even advertisements of shoes, anticed to excite him intensely. In states of intense little he made use of ominion, if shoes were not at his immediate commend. The patient quite early recognized the pain and danger of his condition, and, even when he was free from neurasthence adipents, he was morally very much depressed. He sought help of various physicians. Cold-water ource and hypnotism were unsuccessful. The most celebrated physicians advised him to marry, and assured him that, as soon as he once really loved a girl, he would be free from his fetiahism. The patient had no confidence in his future, but he followed the advice of the physicians. He was cruelly disappointed in the hope which the authority of the physicians laid aroused in him, though he led to the altar a lady distinguished by both mental and physical clusters. The welding-night was terrible; he feltlike a criminal, and flid not approach his wife. The next day he saw a prostungs with the required char. He was weak enough to have intercourse with her in his way. Then he bought a pair of elegant indies? boots, and aid them in bed, and, by touching them, while in marital embrace, after a few days, he was able to perform his marital duty. He classiated tardily, for he had to force himself to column and, after a few weeks, this artifice failed, because his imagination failed. Be felt. impeakably miserable, and would have preferred to make an end of himself. He could no longer satisfy his wife, who was sensual, and much excited by their previous intercorese; and he saw her suffering serender, both mentally and morally. He could not, and would not, disclose his secret. He experienced disgust in marital intercourse; he felt afraid of his wife, and feared the coming of night and being alone with hee. He could no longer induce erection.

He again unde attempts with prostitutes, and entistied himself by touching their shoes. Then the puells had to touch his penis, when he would have ejeculation; but, if this did not take place, he would attempt coitus with the lewd woman; without success, however, for ejeculation would occur immediately. In absolute despair, the putient comes for consultation. He deeply regretted that, against his inner conviction, he had followed the unfortunate advice of the physicians, and made a virtuous wife unhappy, having deeply injured her, both mentally and morally. Could be answer God for continuing such a marriage? Even if he were to discover himself to his wife, and sie were to do everything for him, it would not belp him; for the familiar perfunc of the desti-mossle was also necessary.

Aside from his mental pain, this unfortunate man presented so remarkable symptoms. Genitals perfectly normal. Prostate somewhat enlarged. He complained that he was so under the domination of his bootidess that he would even blush when boots were talked about. His whole imagination was given up to such ideas. When he was on his estate, to often suddenly had to go a distance of ten miles to the city, to satisfy his fetichism with shoe-stores or with puellis.

This pitiable man could not bring bimself to take treatment; for his faith in physicians had been greatly shoken. An altempt to ascertain whether hypnosis and a removal of the fetichistic association by this means, were possible, increased the mental excitement of the unforturate man, who was exclusively controlled by the thought that he had made his wife unhappy.

Case 88, X., aged 24, from a badly-tainted family (mother's beather and granifither instac, one sister spileptic, another sister sebsort to migraine, parents of excitatio temperament). During destition is tall had convenience. At the age of seven he was taught to masteriate by a servent-girl. X. first experienced pleasure in these manipulations when this girl occusionally stroked his pents with her foot with her shie on. Thus, in the predisposed boy, on association was established, as a result of which, from that time on, morely the eight of women's above. and, finally, merely the idea of them, suffered to induce sexual coults ment and erection. He now musturbated while looking at women's shoes, or while calling them up in imagination. At school the teactor's shoes excited him intensely, and in general he was affected by shoes that were partly conscaled by female garments. One day he could not keep from grasping the teacher's shoes,—an act that caused him great sexual excitement. In spite of penishment he could not keep from performing this not repeatedly. Finally, it was recognized that there must be an almormal motive in play, and he was sent to a male tencher. He then reveled in the memory of shoe-seeses with his former school-mistross, and thus had erections, organe, and, after his fourteenth year, ejaculation. At the same time, he masturbated while thinking of a warman's shoe. One day the thought came to him to increase his pleasure by using such a shoe for mosturbation. Thereafter he frequently took shoes secretly, and used them for that purpose,

Nothing else in a woman could excite him; the thought of coins filled him with horror. Men did not interest him in any way. As the age of eighteen he opened a general store, and, among other things handled ladies' shoes. He was excited sexually by litting shoes for his female patrons, or by manipulating shoes that they had worn. One sky, while sloing this, he had an epiloptic attack, and, soon after, another, while practicing omnism in his contempy way. Then he recognized, for the first time, the injury to health caused by his scann practices. He tried to overcome his oranism, sold no more shoes, and show to free himself from the abcornal association between women's shoes sell the sexual function. Then frequent pollutions, with crotic dresses about shoes, occurred, and the epiloptic attacks continued. Though devoid of the slightest feeling for the female sex, he determined on marriage, which seemed to him to be the only remedy.

He married a pretty young lady. In spite of lively excetions when he thought of his wife's shoes, in attempts at cohabitation he was absolutely impotent; for his distante for colum, and for close interceurs in general, was far more powerful than the influence of the shoeldes, which induced sexual excitement. On account of his impotence, the patient applied to Dr. Hammond, who treated his epilepsy with bromides.

and advised him to hang a shoe up over his bed, and look at it fixedly during costus, at the same time imagining his wife to be a slice. The patient became free from spileptic attacks, and potent so that he could have costus about once a week. Too, his sexual excitation by women's shoes grew less and less. (Hammon), "Sexual Impotence.")

Following these two cases of shoe-fetichism, which apparently depend merely upon accidental association, and are not favored by any inner relation between the things themselves, is given the very strange case of a fetichist who was excited sexually only by the idea of a night-cap on the head of an ugly old woman; also a case arising apparently from merely accidental association:—

Case 89. L., aged 37, clerk, from tainted family, and his first erection at five years, when he saw his hed follow-on aged relative-put on a night-mp. The same thing occurred inter, when he saw an old servant pot on her night-cap. Later, simply the idea of an old, ugly women's head, covered with a night-cap, was sufficient to cause an erection. Simply the sight of a cap, or of a naked woman or man, made no impresdon, but the more touch of a night-up induced erection, and sometimes even ejaculation. L. was not a masturbator, and had never been sexually active antil his thirty-second year, when he married a young girl with whom he had fallen in love. On his marriage night he remained cold until, from necessity, he brought to his aid the memory-picture of an ugly women's head with a night-cap. Coitus was immediately succosoful. Thereafter it was always necessary for him to use this means, Since childhood he had been subject to occasional attacks of depression, with tendency to enicide, and now and then to frightful hallocinations at night. When looking out of windows, he became dizzy and anxious. He was a perverse, peculiar, and easily embarrassed man, of bed mental constitution. (Chareot and Magnan, Arch. de neurol., 1882, No. 12.)

In this very peculiar case, the simultaneous coincidence of the first sexual excitation and an absolutely heterogeneous impression seems to have determined the association.

Hammond (op. cit.) also mentions a case of accidental associative fetichism that is quite as peculiar. A married man, aged 30, who, in other respects, was healthy, physically and mentally, is said to have suddenly lost his sexual power, after moving to another house, and to have regained it as soon as the furniture of the sleeping-room had been arranged as it was before.

(c) The Fetich is Some Special Material.—There is a third principal group of fetichists who have as a fetich neither a partion of the female body nor a part of female attire, but some particular material which is so used, not because it is a material for female garments, but because in itself it can arome or accrease sexual feelings. In many cases of this kind, the act of feeling of such material during the sexual act seems indispensable, in order to make the latter possible, or at least satisfactory. Such materials are furs, velvet, and silk.

These cases differ from the foregoing instances of grotic dress-feticleism, in that these materials, unlike female linen, do not have any close relation to the female body; and, unlike shoes and gloves, they are not related to certain parts of the person which have peculiar symbolic significance. Moreover, this fetichism cannot be due to an accidental association, like that in the cases of the night-caps and the arrangement of the sleeping-room; for these cases form an entire group having the same object. It must be presumed that certain metile sensations (a kind of tickling which stands in some distant relation to lustful sensations (), in hypersesthetic individuals, furnish the occasion for the origin of this fetichism.

The following is a personal observation of a man affected with this peculiar fetichism:—

Case 90 N. N., aged 37; of a neuropathic family; neuropathic constitution. He makes the following statement: " From my earliest youth I have always had a deeply-rooted partiality for firs and velves, in that these materials cause me sexual excitement, and the sight and touch of them give me leafful pleasure. I can recall no overt that caused this peculiarity (such as the simultaneous occurrence of the first sexual vocitation and an impression of these naterials, i.e., first excitation by a woman dressed in them); in fact, I cannot remember when this enthusism began. However, by this I would not exclude the possibility of such an event, -of an accidental connection in a first impression and consequent association; but I think it very improbable that such a thing took place, because I believe such an occurrence would have deeply impressed me. All I know is, that even when a small child I had a lively desire to see and stroke furs, and thus had an obscure sensual pleasure. With the first occurrence of definite sexual ideas, - i.e., the direction of sexual throughts to woman, - the pseudiar preference for women dressed in such materials was present. Since then, up to mature manbood, it has remained unchanged. A woman wearing furs or velvel, or, better, both, excites me much more quickly and intensely than one devoid of these auxiliaries. To be sure, three materials are not a conditio sinc que nos of excitation; the desire occurs also without them, in response to the usual stimuli; but the sight and, particularly, the touch of these felich-materials form for me a powerful aid to other normal stimuli, and intensify erotic pleasure. Often merely the wight of only a possably pretty girl, dressed in these materials, causes me lively excitement, and overcomes me completely. Even the aght of my fetich-materials gives me pleasure, but the touch of them much more. (To the peactisting odor of furs I am indifferent-rather, it is unpleasant-and it is endumble only by reason of the association with pleasing visual and tactile impressions.) I have an intense longing to touch these materials while on a woman's person, to stroke and kiss them, and bury my face in them. My greatest pleasure is, inter section, to see and feel my fetich on the woman's shoulder.

"Fur, or velvet alone, exerts on me the effect described, the former seach more intensely than the latter. The combination of the two has the most intense effect. Too, Sumle garments of velvet and for, seen and tenched without the wearer, cause me sexual excitement; indeed, though to a less extent, the same effect is exerted by furs or robes having no relation to female attire, and also by the relvet and plush of furniture and drapery. Merely pictures of costumes of furs and velvet are objects of crotic interest to me; indeed, simply the word "fur" has a magic classes for me, and immediately calls up crotic ideas.

"Fur is such an object of sexual interest for me that a man wearing für that is effective (e. (a/re)) makes a very unpleasant, repregnant, and disputing impression on me; such as would be made on a normal person by a man in the cosmume and attire of a bullet dancer. Similarly repagnant to me is the sight of an old or ugly weenes old in beautiful form; because opposing feelings are thus aroused.

"This erotic delight in fore and relvet is something entirely different from simple authoric pleasure. I have a very lively appreciation of beautiful female attire, and, at the same time, a particular partiality for point-lace; but it is purely of an authoric nature. A woman dressed in a point-lace toriette (or in other elegant, claborate attire) is more beautiful than another; but one dressed in my feticle-material is more charmag.

"But fare exercise on me the effect described only when the far has very thick, fine, smooth, and rather long hair, that stands out like that of the so-called bearded furs. I have noticed that the effect depends upon this. I am entirely indifferent not only to the common course, bushy fars, but also to those that are commonly regarded as beautiful and precious, from which the long hair has been removed (seal, beaver), or of which the hair is naturally short (cruine); and likewise to those of which the hair is over-long and lies down (monkey, bear). The specific effect is exerted only by the standing long hair of the subb, merter, alounk, etc. But velvet is made of thick, the, sharding hairs (three); and its effect may be due to this. The effect seems to depend upon a very definite impression of the points of thick, the hair upon the setorgans of the sensory nerves.

"But how this peculiar impression on the totale nerves is related to sexual instinct is a perfect enignm to me. The fact is, that this is the case with many men. I would also state expressly that beautiful femalhair pleases me, but plays no more important part than the other charm; and that while touching for I have no thought of female hair. The tastile sensation, also, has not the least resemblance to that imported by female hair. There is never association of any other idea. For, per se, arouses sensuality in me,—bow, I cannot explain.

"The more archetic effect, the beauty of costly furs, to which every one is more or less susceptible; which, since Raphice's Formatim and Reuben's Heime Formand, has been used as the foil and frame of famile beauty by immunerable pointers; and which plays so important a rife in Inchign.—the art and science of famile dress,—this sethetic effect, as has been remarked, explains nothing here. Beautiful fairs have the same authorize effect on me as on normal individuals, and affect me in the same way that flowers, ribbons, precious stones, and other ornaments affect every one. Such things, when skillfully used, enhance female beauty, and thus, under certain coronastances, may have an indirect seasonal effect. They never have a direct, powerful, sensual effect on me, as do the Suich-meterials mentioned.

"Though in me, and, in fact, in all 'fetichests,' the sensual and authoric effect must be strictly differentiated, nevertheless, that does not prevent me from demanding in my fetich a whole series of authoric qualities in form, style, color, etc. I could give a very lengthy description of these qualities that my taste demands; but I omit it as not being essential to the real subject in hand. I would only call attention to the fact that crotic fetichism is complicated with purely seathetic tastes.

"The specific erotic effect of my fittich-materials can be explained as better by the association with the idea of the person of the female wearing thou, than by their authoric impression. For, in the first place, as less been said, these materials, as such, affect me when entirely isolated from the body; and, in the second place, articles of clothing of a much more private asture, and which undoubtedly call up associations, exert a much weaker influence over me. Thus the fetich-materials have an independent sensual value for mr; why, is an origina to ms.

"Feathers in women's lasts, fans, etc., have the same crotic stricklistic effect on me as fore and velvet (similar metile semution of siry, peculiar tickling). Finally, the fetichistic effect, with much less intensity, is exerted by other smooth materials (satin and silk); but rough goods (cloth, finnel) have a repolling effect.

"In conclusion, I will mention that somewhere I read an article by Carl Vogt on microcephalic men, according to which these creatures, at the right of form, rushed for them and stroked them with every manifestation of delight. I am far from any thought, on this ground, to see in wide-operad fur-feticisism an attavistic retrogression to the taste of our hairy ancestors. Every creatin, with that simplicity belonging to his condition, touches anything that pleases birm; and the set is not accessfully of a sexual nature; just as many normal uses like to stroke a cut and the like, or even relvet and furs, and are not thus excited sexually."

In the literature of this subject, there are a few cases belonging here:-

Case FL. A boy, aged 12, became powerfully excited sexually when he chanced to put on a fex-skin. From that time there was masturbation with the employment of flurs, or by means of taking a furry dog to hell. Ejaculation would result, sometimes followed by an hysterical attack. His nactural poliutions were induced by dressing that he by entirely covered up in a white skin. He was absolutely insesseptible to stimuli coming from men or women. He was neutrathenic, suffered with delasions of being watched, and thought that every one noticed his sexual animaly. He had testium vites on account of this, and finally became lisens. He had marked taint; his genitals were imperfectly formed, and he presented other signs of degeneration. (Tarnowsky, up. cit., p. 22.)

Case 92. C. is an especial lover of velvet. He is attracted in a normal way by beautiful women, but it particularly excites him to have the person with whom he has sexual intercourse dressed in velvet. In this, it is remarkable that it is not so much the eight as the touch of the select that causes the excitation. C. told me that stroking a woman's select jacket would excite him sexually to an extent searcely possible in any other way. (Dr. Moli, op. cet., p. 197.)

The following is a very peculiar case of material-fetichism. It is combined with the impulse to injure the fetich, which, in this case, represents an element of sadism toward the woman wearing the fetich, or impersonal sadism toward objects, which is of frequent occurrence in fetichists (comp. p. 170). This impulse to injure made this a remarkable criminal case;—

Case 93. In July, 1891, Alfred Bachmann, aged 25, locksmith, was brought before Judge L, in the second term of the criminal court, in Berlin. In April, 1891, the police had had numerous complaints, according to which some will hand had cut women's dresses with a very sharp metruscut. On April 25, they were successful in accessing the perpetrator in the person of the accused. A policeman noticed how the no cused pressed, in a remarkable manner, against a lady in the commer of a gentleman, while they were going through a passage. The officer requested the lady to examine her dress, while he held the man under suspicion. It was ascertained that the dress had received quite a loansist. The accused was taken to the station, where he was exercised Bosishia a sharp knife, which he occifieded he used for cutting dresses. two silk sashes, such as ladies went on their dresses, were found on him: he also confessed that he had taken these from dresses in growis. Finally, the examination of his person brought to light a lady's silk neckelors. The accused said he had found this. Since his statement in this case could not be refuted, complaint was therefore made to rest on the result of the search; in two instances in which complaint was made by the injured parties his acts were designated as injury to property, and in two other instances as theft. The accessed, a man who had been often papished before, with a pale, expressionless face, before the judge, gave a stronge explanation of his enigmatical action. A major's cook had unce thrown him down-stairs when he was begging of her, and since that time be had entertained great hatred of the whole female sex. There was a doubt about his responsibility, and he was therefore examined by a physicinn. The medical expert gave the opinion, at the final trial, that there was no remon to regard the accused as insuse, though he was of low intelligence. The culprit defended himself in a peculiar manner. An irresistible impulse forced him to approach women wearing silk dresses. The touch of nik motorial gave him a feeling of delight, and this went so far that, while in prison for examination, he had been excited if a alk thread imported to pass through his fingers while raveling rags. Judge Miller considered the accused to be simply a dangerous, videous mus. who should be made harmless for a long time. He advised imprisonment for one year. The court sentenced him to six mouths' imprisement, with loss of honor for a year,

The following case was communicated to me by a physteinn:-

In a brothel a certain man was known by the name of "Velvet." He dressed a puella pleasing to him in a black velvet dress, and excited and satisfied his sexual appetite simply by stroking his face with a part of the velvet skirt, touching the woman in no other way.

I am assured by an officer that, among masochists, a partiality for fors, velvet, and feathers, is very frequent (comp. Case 44). In the novels of Sacher-Masoch, for plays an important part; indeed, it furnishes a title to some of them. The explanation given there seems far-fetched and unsatisfactory,— that fur (crmine) is the symbol of royalty, and therefore the fetich of the men described in the novels.

 Great Distinution or Complete Absence of Sexual Feeling for the Opposite Sex, with Substitution of Sexual Feeling and Instinct for the Same Sex. (Homosexuality, or Contrary Sexual Instinct).

After the attainment of complete sexual development, among the most constant elements of self-consciousness in the individual, are the knowledge of representing a definite sexual personality and the consciousness of desire, during the period of physiological activity of the reproductive organs (production of semen and ova), to perform sexual acts corresponding with that sexual personality,—acts which, consciously or unconsciously, have a procreative purpose.

The sexual instinct and desire, save for indistinct feelings and impulses, remain latent until the period of development of the sexual organs. The child is generis neutrins; and though, during this latent period,—when sexuality has not yet risen into clear consciousness, is but virtually present, and unconnected with powerful organic sensations,—too early excitation of the genitals may occur, either spontaneously or as a result of external influence, and find satisfaction in musturbation; yet, notwithstanding this, the psychical relation to persons of the opposite sex is still absolutely wanting, and the sexual acts during this period partake more or less of a reflex spinal nature.

The fact of innocence, or of sexual neutrality, is the more remarkable, since very early, in education, employment, dress, etc., the child undergoes a differentiation from children of the opposite, sex. These impressions, however, remain destitute of mental meaning, because they apparently are without sexual coloring; for the central organ (cortex) of sexual emotions and ideas is not yet capable of activity, owing to its undeveloped condition.

With the inception of anatomical and functional development of the generative organs, and the differentiation of form belonging to each sex, which goes hand in hand with it in the boy or girl, radiments of a mental feeling corresponding with the sex are developed; and in this, of course, education and external influences in general have a powerful effect upon the individual, who is now all attention.

If the sexual development is normal and undisturbed, a definite character, corresponding with the sex, is developed. Certain definite inclinations and reactions in intercourse with persons of the opposite sex arise; and it is psychologically worthy of note with what relative rapidity the definite mental type corresponding with the sex is evolved.

While modesty, for example, during childhood, is essentially but an uncomprehended and incomprehensible exaction of education and imitation, and in the innocence and saires of the child but imperfectly expressed; in the youth and maiden it becomes an imperative requirement of self-respect; and, if is any way it is offended, intense vasomotor reaction (blushing) and psychical emotion are induced.

If the original constitution is favorable and normal, and factors injurious to the psycho-sexual development exercise no influence, then a psycho-sexual personality is developed that is so unchangeable, and corresponds so completely and harmonisusly with the sex the individual represents, that subsequent loss of the generative organs (as by castration), or the climacteric or semility, cannot essentially alter it. But this, of course, is not to declare that the rastrated man or woman, the youth and the aged man, the maiden and matron, the impotent and the potent man, do not differ essentially from one another mentally.

An interesting and important question for what follows is, whether the peripheral influences of the generative glands (testes and ovaries), or central cerebral conditions, are the determining factors in psycho-sexual development. The fact that congenital deficiency of the generative glands, or removal of them before puberty, has a great influence on physical and psycho-sexual development, so that the latter is distorted and assumes a type more closely resembling the opposite sex (cumuchs, certain virugoes, etc.), betokens their great importance in this respect.

But that the physical processes taking place in the genital organs are only co-operative, and not the exclusive factors in the process of development of the psycho-sexual character, is shown by the fact that, notwithstanding a normal anatomical and physiological state of these organs, a sexual instinct may be developed which is the exact opposite of that characteristic of the sex to which the individual belongs.

In this case, the cause is to be sought only in an anomaly of central conditions,-in an abnormal psycho-sexual constitution. This constitution, as far as its anatomical and functional foundation is concerned, is absolutely unknown. Since, in almost all such cases, the individual subject to the perverse sexual instinct displays a neuropathic predisposition in several directions, and the latter may be brought into relation with hereditary degenerate conditions, this anomaly of psycho-sexual feeling may be called, clinically, a functional sign of degeneration, This perverse sexuality appears spontaneously, without external cause, with the development of sexual life, as an individual manifestation of an abnormal form of the vita sexualis, and then has the force of a congenital phenomenon; or it develops upon a sexuality the beginning of which was normal, as a result of very definite injurious influences, and thus appears as an sequired anomaly. Upon what this enigmatical phenomenon of acquired homo-sexual instinct depends is still inexplicable, and only a matter for hypothesis. Careful examination of the so-called acquired cases makes it probable that the predisposition also present here consists of a latent homo-sexuality, or, at least, bi-sexuality, which, for its manifestation, requires the influence of accidental exciting causes to rouse it from its slumber.

In so-called contrary sexual instinct there are degrees of the phenomenon which quite correspond with the degrees of predisposition of the individuals. Thus, in the milder cases, there is simple hermaphroditism; in more pronounced cases, only homo-sexual feeling and instinct, but limited to the vita sexualis; in still more complete cases, the whole psychical personality, and even the bodily sensations, are transformed to correspond with the sexual perversion; and, in the complete cases, the physical form is correspondingly altered. The following division of the various phenomena a this psycho-sexual anomaly is made, therefore, in accordance with these clinical facts:—

A. Homo-sexual Feeling as an Acquired Manifestation,— The determining condition here is the demonstration of perverse feeling for the same sex; not the proof of sexual acts with the same sex. These two phenomena must not be confounded with each other; perversity must not be taken for perversion.

Perverse sexual acts, not dependent upon perversion, often come under observation. This is especially true with reference to sexual acts between persons of the same sex, particularly pederasty. Here paresthesia sexualis is not necessarily at work; but hypersesthesia, with physical or mental impossibility of natural sexual satisfaction. Thus we find homosexual intercourse in impotent musturbators or debauchees, or faute de mieux in sensual men and women in imprisonment, on ship-board, in garrisons, bagnios, boarding-schools, etc.

There is an immediate return to normal sexual intercourse as soon as obstacles to it are removed. Very frequently the cause of such temporary abstration is masturbation and its results in youthful individuals.

Nothing is so prone to contaminate-under certain circumstances, even to exhaust-the source of all noble and ideal sentiments, which arise of themselves from a normally developing sexual instinct, as the practice of masturbation in early years. It despoils the unfolding bud of perfome and beauty, and leaves behind only the coarse, animal desire for sexual satisfaction. If an individual, spoiled in this manner, reaches an age of maturity, there is wanting in him that asthetic, ideal, pure, and free impulse which draws one toward the opposite Thus the glow of sensual sensibility wanes, and the inclination toward the opposite sex becomes weakened. This defect influences the morals, character, fancy, feeling, and instinct of the youthful masturbator, male or female, in an unfavorable way, and, under certain circumstances, allows the desire for the opposite sex to sink to nil; so that musturbation is preferred to the natural mode of satisfaction.

Sometimes the development of higher sexual feelings toward the opposite sex suffers, on account of hypochondriscal fear of infection in sexual intercourse; or on account of an actual infection; or they suffer as a result of a faulty education which points out such dangers and exaggerates them. Again (especially in females), fear of the result of coitus (pregnancy), or abhorrence of men, by reason of mental or moral weakness, may direct into perverse channels an instinct that makes itself felt with abnormal intensity. But too early and perverse sexual satisfaction injures not merely the mind, but also the body; massement as it induces neuroses of the sexual appuratus (irritable weakness of the centres governing erection and ejaculation; defective pleasurable feeling in coitus), while, at the same time, it maintains the imagination and libido in continuous excitement.

Almost every masturbator at last reaches a point where, frightened on learning the results of the vice, or on experiencing them (neurasthenia), or led by example or seduction to the opposite sex, he wishes to free himself of the vice and re-instate his vita sexualis. The moral and mental conditions are the most unfavorable possible. The pure glow of sexual feeling is destroyed; the fire of sexual instinct is wanting, and self-confidence, no less; for every masturbator is more or less timid and cowardly. If the youthful sinner at last comes to make an attempt at coitus, he is either disappointed because enjoyment is wanting, on account of defective sensual feeling, or he is lacking in the mental strength necessary to accomplish the act. The fiasco has a fatal effect, and leads to absolute psychical impotence. A bad conscience and the memory of past failures prevent success in any further attempts. The constant libido sexualis, however, demands satisfaction; but this moral and mental perversion separates him further and further from women. reasons, however (neurasthenic complaints, hypochondrineal fear of the results, etc.), the individual is kept from musturbation. Occasionally, under such circumstances, there may be bestighty. Intercourse with the same sex is then near at hand,-as a result of occasional seduction or of the feelings of friendship which, on the level of pathological sexuality, easily associate themselves with sexual feelings. Passive and mutual onanism then becomes the equivalent of the avoided act. If there is a seducer,—which, unfortunately, is so frequent,—then the cultivated pederast is produced,—i.e., a man who performs quasi acts of onanism with persons of his own sex, and, at the same time, feels and prefers himself in an active rôle corresponding with his real sex; who is mentally indifferent not only to persons of the opposite sex, but also to those of his own sex.

Sexual aberration in the normally constituted, autointol, mentally healthy individual, reaches this degree. No case has been demonstrated in which perversity has been transformed into perversion,—into a reversal of the exxual instinct.

With minted individuals, the matter is quite different. The latent perverse sexuality is developed under the influence of neurasthenia induced by masturbation, abstinence, or otherwise.

Gradually, in contact with persons of the same sex, sexual excitation by them is induced. Related ideas are colored with

I Garater (Assembles Seriodies, Paris, pp. 508, 509) reports two cases (Cases 239 and 255) that are apparently opposed to this assumption, particularly the first, in which despits stout the authority falson of a lower led the individual to authorit to the sedaminal of men. But the case itself clearly shows that this individual near found pleasure in home sexual ares. In Case 225, the individual was effectivated at regree, or was at last a pyrichical homeophyside.

Those who hold to the opinion that the origin of home-serval feelings and leather in found to be exclusively in defective education and other psychological inflorates are cutting in arror.

An antaineed male may be raised never so much like a female, and a female like a smale, but they will not become home-acquait. The nathral disposition is the determining condition; not education and other architectal circumstances, like adjustion. There as the so thought of contrary messal instinct more when the person of the same sex others a psycho-accual influence on the individual, and thus brings about 1960s and organic—i.e., has a psychical attraction. Those cases no quite different in which, finds its even; with great semmality and a defective molecule sense, the body of a person of the same sex is used for an outsidity and not for cotton in a psychical armse).

In his exertical immograph, Moll shows very electry and convintingly the Impetance of original predisposition in communit with scribing causes (comp. sp. rst., pp. Dichitis). He knows "many cases where variy account intercounts with now was not capable of intering percention." Moll significantly cays, fluriber: "I know of such an application for natural manistry in a Bertin second, where a percent who is new as never planaturely interduced service consists. Though I now have the masses of very many senting in the decision of could not accordant even with anything like probability, that assume all the scholars of that school at that time there was one that had become an uniting; but, or the other hand, I have quite certain knowledge that many of those administrator are now mental secondary, in freeling and intercourse."

Instful feelings, and awaken corresponding desires. This decidedly degenerate reaction is the beginning of a process of physical and mental transformation, a description of which is attempted in what follows, and which is one of the most interesting psychological phenomena that has been observed. This metamorphosis presents different stages, or degrees.

I. Degree: Simple Received of Sexual Feeling.—This degree is attained when persons of the same sex have an aphrodisine effect, and the individual has a sexual feeling for them. Character and feeling, however, still correspond with the sex of the individual presenting the reversal of sexual feeling. He feels himself in the active rôle; he recognizes his impulse toward his own sex as an aberration, and finally seeks aid. With episodical improvement of the neurosis, at first even normal sexual feelings may re-appear and assert themselves. The following case seems well suited to exemplify this stage of the psycho-sexual degeneration:—

Case 94. Acquired Contrary Sexual Instinct.—"I am an official, and, as far as I know, come of an untainted family. My father died of an acute disease; my mother is living and is quite nervous. A sinter has been very intensely religious for some years,

"I myself am tall, and, in speech, gait, and manner, give a perfectly masculine impression. Measles is the only disease I have last; but since my thirteenth year I have suffered with so-called nervous headarhe. My sexual life began in my thirteenth year, when I became acquainted with a boy somewhat older than myself, with whom I took pleasure in mutual fondling of the genitals. I had the first ejaculation in my four-teenth year. Seduced to omnism by two older school-mates, I practiced it partly with others and partly alone; in the latter case, however, always with the thought of persons of the female sex. My libido sexualis was vary great, as it is to-day. Latter, I tried to win a pretty, stout servant-gal who had very large mammas; id solum assecutors sum, at no procedule superiorem corpories sai parters studence missingue concellered or mannague osculari, dam ipsa penem menta vable creetum in manum stram recenit comque trivit.

"Notwithstanding my orgent demand for ceitas, she would not allow it; but she finally permitted me to touch her genitals.

"After going to the University, I visited a brothel and succeeded without especial effort.

"There an event occurred which brought a change in ms. One evening I accompanied a friend home, and in a mild state of intoniration I grasped him ad genitulia. He made but slight opposition. I then went up to his room with him, and we practiced mutual musturbation. From that time we included in it quite frequently; in fact, it come to immissio penis in os, with resultant ejacoulations. But it is stronge that I was not at all in love with this person, but passionately in love with another friend, near whom I never felt the slightest sexual excitement, and whom I never connected with sexual matters, even in thought. My viers to brothels, where I was gladly received, became more infrequent; in my friend I found a substitute, and did not desire sexual intercourse with women.

"We never practiced pedenasty, and that word was not even known between us. From the beginning of this relation with my friend, I again menturbated more frequently, and naturally the thought of females receded more and more into the background, and I thought more and more about young, hundsome, strong men with the largest genitals. I perfected young fellows, from sixteen to twenty-five years old, without heards, but they had to be hardsome and clean. Young laborers dressed in trousers of Manchester circh or English leather, particularly mason, especially excited me.

"Persons in my own position had larelly my effect on me; but, at the sight of one of those strapping fellows of the lower class, I experienced marked sexual excitement. It seems to me that the touch of such trousors, the opening of them, and the grasping of the penis, as well as kissing the fellow, would be the greatest delight. My sensibility to female charms is consented dulled; yet in sexual intercourse with a woman, paticularly when she has well-developed mamms, I am always potent without the help of imagination. I have never attempted to make me of a young laborer, or the like, for the satisfaction of my syll desires, and never shall; but I often feel the longing to do it. I often impress reinvest the positial image of such a man, and then masterbate at home.

"I am absolutely devoid of taste for female work. I rather like to move in female society, but dancing is repugnant to me. I have a fively interest in the fine arts. That my sexual sense is partly repersed is, I believe, in part due to greater convenience, which keeps me from satering into a relation with a girl; as the latter is a matter of too much trouble. To be constantly visiting houses of prostitution is, for sethetic reason, repognant to me; and thus I am always returning to solitary onesine, which is very difficult for me to avoid.

"Hundreds of times I have said to myself that, in order to have a normal nexual series, it would be necessary for me, first of all, to evercome my irresistible passion for oranism,—a practice so repugnant to my seatheric feeling. Again and again I have resolved with all my might to fight this passion; but I am still unsuccessful. When I felt the sexual impulse grining strength, instead of neeking satisfaction in the natural manner, I preferred to musturbate, because I felt that I would thus have more enjoyment.

"And yet experience has taught me that I am always potent with girls, and that, too, without trouble and without the help of imagining musculine genitals. In one case, however, I did not attain ejaculation because the woman—it was in a bruthel—was devoid of every charm. I cannot avoid the thought and severe suff-accusation that, to a certain extent, my contrary sexuality is the result of excessive counters; and this especially depresses me, because I am compelled to acknowledge that I scarcely feel atrong enough to overcome this vice by the force of my own will.

"As a result of my relations with my fellow-student and schoolmate for years, mentioned in this communication,—which, however, began while we were at the University, and after we had been friends for seven years,—the impulse to unnatural satisfaction of libide has grown much atranger. I trust you will permit the description of an incident which occupied me for mentis.—

"In the summer of 1882, I made the nequalitance of a companion six years younger than myself, who, with several others, had been introduced to me and my acquaintances. I very soon felt a deep interest in this handsome man, who was unusually well proportioned, alim, and fall of bealth. After a few weeks of association, this feeling become friendship, and at last passionate love, with feelings of the most intense jealousy. I very soon noticed that, in this, sexual excitation was also very marked; and, notwithstanding my determination, saids from all others, to keep sayself in obeck in relation to this man, whom I respected so highly for his superior classecter, one night, after free indulgence in bear, as we were enjoying a bottle of elempague in my room and drinking to good, true, and lasting friendship, I yielded to the irresistible impulse to embrace him, etc.

"When I saw him, next day, I was so askemed that I could not look him in the face. I felt the deepest regret for my action, and accused myself hitterly for laving thus sullied this friendship, which was to be and remain so pure and precious. In order to prove to him that I had last central of myself only momentarily, at the end of the semester I arged him to make an excursion with me; and after some reloctance, the reason of which was only too clear to me, he consented. Several nights we slept in the same room without any attempt on my part to repeat my setion. I wished to talk with him about the event of that night, but I could not bring myself to it; even when, during the next somester, we were separated. I could not induce myself to write to him on the subject; and when I visited him, in March, at X., it was the same. And get I felt a great desire to clear up this dark point by an open statement. In October of the same year, I was again in X, and this time found courage to speak without reserve; indeed, I asked him why he buil not resisted me. He suswered that, in part, it was because he wished to please me, and, in part, owing to the fact that he was somewhat agathetic as a result of being a little intoxicated. I explained to him my condition, and also gave him "Psychopethia Sexualis" to read, expressing the loge that by the force of my own will I should become fally and lastingly master of my minimum impulse. Since this confession, the relation between this friend and me has been the most delightful and happy possible; there are the most friendly feelings on both sides, which are learnful and true; and it is to be hoped that they will endure.

"If I should not improve my almormal condition, I am determined to put myself under your treatment; the more become, after a careful study of your work, I cannot count myself as belonging to the estegory of so-called urnings; and, too, became I have the firm conviction, or hope, at least, that a strong will, assisted and combined with shiffed treatment, could transform me into a man of normal feeling."

Case 95. Ilms S., aged 29; single; merchant's daughter. She comes of a family having bad peryons taint. Father was a drinker and died by saicide, as also did the patient's brother and sister. A sister suffers with convelsive hysteria. Mother's father shot himself while insane. Mother was sickly, and died paralyzed after apoplexy. The patient never hall any severe illness. She is bright, enthusiastic, and dramy. Menses at the age of eighteen without difficulty; but thereafter they were very irregular. At fourteen, chilorosis and catalopsy from fright. Later, hysterm gravis and an attack of hysterical insanity. At eighteen, relations with a young man which were not platonic. This man's love was passionately returned. From statements of the patient, it seems that she was very sensual, and after separation from her lover practiced maturhation. After this she led a remantic life. In order to cars a living, she put on male clothing, and became a tintor; but she gave up her place because her mistress, not knowing her sex, fell in love with her and courted les. Then she became a railway employed. In the company of her companious, in order to conceal her sex, she was compelled to visit brothels with them, and hear the most valgar stories. This became so distastsful to ker that she gave up her place, resumed the garments of a Souslo, and again sought to carn her living. She was arrested for a theft, and on account of severe hystero-collepsy was sent to the hospital. There, inclinates and impulse toward the same sex were discovered. The patient because troublesome on account of presionate love for female nurses and patients.

Her sexual perversion was considered congenital. With regard to this the potient made some interesting statements:—

"I am judged incorrectly, if it is thought that I feel myself a matoward the female sex. In my whole thought and feeling I am more more a woman. I loved my cousin as only a woman can love a man.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Audior's Experimental Study in the Donald of Hypnoties, 1862 G.F. Polymer's Sons, New York.

"The change of my feeling originated in this, that, in Pesth, drassed as a man, I had an opportunity to observe my counts. I saw that I had whelly deceived myself in him. That gave me terrible heart-pangs. I have that I could never love another man; that I belonged to those who love but once. Of similar effect was the fact that, in the society of my companions at the railway, I was compelled to hear the most offensive language and visit the most disreputable houses. As a result of the insight into men's motives, gained in this way, I took an unconquerable dislike to them. However, since I am of a very passicuate nature and need to have store loving person on whom to depend, and to whom I can whally surrender myself, I felt myself more and more powerfully drawn toward intelligent woman and girls who were in sympathy with me."

The contrary sexual instinct of this patient, which was clearly acquired, expressed itself in a stormy and decidedly sensual way, and was further augmented by masturbation; because constant oversight in hospitals made sexual satisfaction with the same sex impossible. Character and occupation remained feminine. There were no manifestations of viraginity. According to information lately received by the author, this patient, after two years of treatment in an asylum, was entirely freed from her neurosis and sexual perversion, and discharged cured.

Case 96. X., aged 19; mother nervous; two sisters of mother's father were instance. Patient of nervous temperament; well-endowed mentally; well-developed; normally formed. When he was twelve years old, he was seduced into mutual ontains by an elder brother.

After this, the patient continued the vice alone. In the last three years, during the act of musturisation, he had ind poculiar funcies in the sense of "contrary sexual instinct."

He fancies himself's female; as, for example, a hallet-dancer in the act of soitus with an offices or circus rider. These percerse fancies have accompanied the act of musturbation since the patient became neurosthesic. He understands the harm of musturbation, fights desperately against it, but always gives up to the impulse.

If he is able to withstand the impulse for a few days, a normal desire for actual intercourse with females is neukened; but a certain fear of infection holds these desires in check, and always drives him again to mesturbation.

It is worthy of remark that this unfortunate's lastivious dreams concerned only families.

In the course of the last few months, the patient had become very neuralhanic and hypochondriscal. He feared takes.

I advised treatment of the neurasthesia, suppression of master. lation, and marital colubitation, if possible, after improvement of the neurasthenia.

Case 97. Mr. X, aged 35, single, official; mother issues, brother hypochondriscal.

Patient was bealthy, strong, of lively sensed temperament. He and manifested powerful sexual instinct abnormally early, and masterbated while yet a small boy. He had cottue the first time at the age of fourteen, he says, with enjoyment and complete power. When fifteen years old, a man sought to soluce him, and performed manustruration on him. X. experienced a feeling of repulsion, and freed himself from the disgusting situation. At maturity be committed excesses in libids, with coites; in 1880 he became neurasthenic, being afflicted with weakness of erection and spaculatio procox. He thus became less and less potent, and no longer experienced pleasure in the sexual act. At this time of sexual decadence, for a long time, he still had what was previously foreign to him, and is still incomprehensible to him, an inclination for sexual intercourse with immuture gurls of the age of twelve or thirteen. His libido increased as virility diminished.

Gradually be developed inclination for boys of thirteen or fourteen. He was impelled to approach them.

Quadsi ei comio data est at tangere posset pueros qui si placuere, penis velicizanter se crexit tum maxime quan crura pueroran targere potuisset. Abhine Seminus non expivit. Nonnunquum Seminus ad collum coègit sed erectio debilis, epocalatio pramatma erat sine ulla soloptale.

Now only youths interested him. He fremed about them and hal pollutions. After 1882 he now and then had opportunity concumbere cum juveniless. This ted to powerful sexual excitement, which be satisfield by masterlation. It was only exceptional for him to venture to touch his hed-fellow and includes in mutual masturbation. He shaned pederasty. For the most part, he was compelled to entisfy his actual needs by means of solitary maximilation. In the act he called up the vision of pleasing boys. After sexual intercourse with such boys, by always felt strongthened and refreshed, but morally depressed; because there was consciousness of having performed a percens, induced, and conishable act. He found it painful that his disgusting impulse was more powerful than his will.

X. thinks that his love for his own sex has resulted from great excess in natural sexual intercourse, and bemouns his situation. On the occasion of a consultation, in December, 1885, he saked whether there were any means to bring him back to a normal sexual condition, since in had no real horror femine, and would very gladly marry.

This intelligent patient, free from degenerative signs, presented as abnormal symptoms except those of sexual and spinal neurosthesia of moderate degree.

II. Degree: Extration and Defendation.—If, in cases of contrary sexual instinct thus developed, no restoration occurs, then deep and lasting transformations of the psychical personality may occur. The process completing itself in this way may be briefly designated extration. The patient undergoes a deep change of character, particularly in his feelings and inclinations, which become those of a female. After this, he also feels himself to be a woman during the sexual act, has desire only for passive sexual indulgence, and, under certain circumstances, sinks to the level of a prostitute. In this condition of deep and more lasting psycho-sexual transformation, the individual is like the (congenital) urning of high grade. The possibility of a restoration of the previous mental and sexual personality seems, in such a case, excluded.

The following case is a classical example of this variety of lasting acquired contrary sexual instinct:—

Case 98. Sels, aged 30, physician, one day told me the story of his life and malady, asking explanation, and advice concerning certain anomalies of his cita sexualis. The following description gives, for the most part verbatim, the details of the autobiography; only in some portions is it shortened:—

"My parents were healthy. As a child I was sickly; but with good care I thrived, and got on well in school. When eleven years old, I was taught to masturbate by my playmates, and gave myself up to it passionately. Until I was fifteen, I learned easily. On account of frequent polititions, I became less capable, did not get on easily in school, and was uncertain and embarrassed when called on by the teacher. Frightened by my loss of capability, and recognizing that the loss of semen was responsible for it, I gave up masturbation; but the pollutions became even more frequent, so that I often had two or three in a night. In despoir, I now consulted one physician after another. None were able to help me.

"Since I grew weaker and weaker, by reason of the loss of sensen, with the impulse to sexual satisfaction growing more and more powerful, I sought houses of prostitution. But I was there unable to find satisfaction; for, even though the sight of a naked female pleased meneither organs nor erection occurred; and even manustupration by the puells was not capable of inducing creetion. Scarcely would I have the house, when the impulse would seize me again, and I would have violent experious. I grew ashamed before the girls, and ceased to visit such houses. Thus a couple of years passed. My sexual life consisted of pollutions. My inclination toward the opposite arx grow less and less. At nineteen I went to the University. The theater had more attractions for me. I wished to become an actor. My parents were not willing. At the Capital I was compelled now and then to visit girls with my conroles. I found such a situation; because I know that coins was impossible for me, and because my friends might discover my impotence. Therefore, I avoided, as far as possible, the danger of becoming the bart of jokes and ridicule.

"One ovening, in the opera-house, an old gentleman set near me, He courted me. I hughed beartily at the foolish old man, and entered into his joke. Eximplicate genitalis men prefermin, que facto statin peuls mens se crexit. Frightened, I demanded of him what he mean,
He said that he was in love with me. Having heard of hemsphredites in the clinics, I thought I had one before me, and became curious to see his genitals. The old man was very willing, and went with me to the water-closet. Signit penson maximum signs erection adspect, perfections efforts.

"This man followed me, and unde strange proposals which I did not understand, and repetled. He did not give me any rest. I beared the secrets of male love for males, and felt that my sexuality was excited by it. But I resisted the straneful passion (as I then regarded it), and, for the next three years, I remained five from it. During this time I repeaedly attempted cotton with girls in vain. My attempts to five myself of my impotence by means of medical treatment were also vain. Once, when my libido sexualis was troubling me again, I recalled what the old team had told me; that unde-loving men were accustomed to meet on the E. Promenade.

"After a hard struggle, and with beating beart, I went there, make the acquaintance of a bloode man and allowed myself to be seined.
The first step was taken. This kind of sexual love was satisfactory in me. I always preferred to be in the arms of a strong man. The satisfaction consisted of mutual manustrapration; occasionally in esculure alpeners alterius. I was then twenty-three years old. Sitting, topether with my comrades, on the tests of putients in the clinic during the setures, excited me so intensely that I could scarredy listen to the lectures.
In the same year I entered into a formal love-relation with a merchant of thirty-four. We lived as man and wife. X. played the sam and fell more and more in love. I gave up to him, but now and then I had in play the man. After a time I grew tired of him, became infaithful, and the became jealous. There were terrible scenes, which led to temporary separation, and finally to actual supture. (The merchant aftermine became insone, and died by suicide.)

I made many acquaintances, and loved the most centrary people.
I preferred those having a full beard, and who were tall and of middle age, and able to play the active rôle well. I developed a proctitis. The pro-feasor thought it was the result of sitting too much while preparing for examinations. I developed a fistula, and had to undergo an operation; but this did not care me of my desire to allow myself to be used passively. I became a physician, and went to a provincial city, where I had to live tike a num. I developed a desire to move in ladies' society, and was gially released there; because it was found that I was not so one-sided as most men, and was interested in referrer and such ferminine things. However, I felt very unhappy and lonesome. Fortunately, in this town, I unde the sequeintance of a man, a 'sister,' who felt like me. For some time I was taken care of by him. When he had to have, I had an attack of despair, with depression, which was accompanied by thoughts of spiride.

"When it became impossible for me to longer endure the town, I became a military surgeon in the Capital. There I began to live again, and often made two or three nequalintances in one day. I had never level boys or young people; only fully-developed men. The thought of falling into the hands of the police was frightful. Thus I have escaped the clutches of the blackmaller. At the same time, I could not keep myself from the satisfaction of my impulse. After some manths I fell in love with an official of forty. I remained true to him for a year, and we lived like a pair of lovers. I was the wife, and was formally courted by the lover. One day I was transferred to a small town. We were in despair. The last night was spent in continually kissing and caressing one another.

"In T. I was unspeakably unhappy, in spite of some sisters' whom I found. I could not forget my lover. In order to satisfy my sexual desire, which cried for satisfaction, I chose soldiers. Money obtained men; but they remained cold, and I had no enjoyment with them. I was successful in being re-transferred to the Capital. There, there was a new love relation, but much jealousy; because my lover liked to go into the society of 'sisters,' and was proud and coquettish. There was a rupture. I was very unhappy and very glad to be transferred from the Capital. I now stayed in C., alone and in despair. Two infantry privates were brought into service, but with the same unsatisfactory result. When shall I ever find true love again?

"I am over medium height, well developed, and look somewhat aged; and, therefore, when I wish to make conquests I use the arts of the toilet. My manner, movements, and face are musculine. Physically I feel as youthful as a boy of twenty. I love the theatre, and especially art. My interest in the stage is in the actresses, whose every movement and gesture I notice and criticise.

"In the society of gostlesses I am silent and embarrassed, while in the society of those like myself I am free, witty, and as favoing as a cut, if a man is sympathetic. If I am without love, I become decidy melancholic; but the favors of the first handsome man dispel my depression. In other ways I am frivolous; snything but ambitious. My profession is nothing to see. Mascaline pursuits do not interest me. I prefer novels and going to the theatre. I am effectionate, sensitive, easily moved, easily injured, and nervous. A sudden noise makes my whole body tremble, and I have to collect myself in order to keep from crying out."

Remarks: The foregoing case is certainly one of acquired contrary sexual instinct, since the sexual instinct and impulse were originally directed toward the female sex. Sch. became neurasthesic through maximisation.

As an accompanying manifestation of the neurostanic neurosis, lessened impress/smability of the erection-sentre and consequent selative impotence came on. As a result of this, sexual sensibility toward the opposite sex was lessened, with simultaneous persistence of fields sexualls. The sequired contrary sexual instinct must be abnormal, since the first touch by a person of the same sex is an adequate stimulus for the crection-centre. The perverse sexual feeling because complete. At first Scin, felt like a man in the sexual net; but more and more, as the clarage progressed, the feeling and desire of satisfaction changed to the form which, as a rule, characterizes the (congenital) unaling.

This eviration induces a desire for the pussive rôle, and, further, for (possive) potentialy. It makes a deeper impress on the character. The character becomes feminine, incomuch as Sch. now prefers to more in the secrety of actual females, has an increasing desire for feminine occupations, and, indeed, makes use of the arts of the toilet in order to improve his fading charms and make "conquests."

The foregoing facts, concerning acquired contrary sexual instinct and effemination, find an interesting confirmation in the following ethnological data:—

Even Herodotus describes a peculiar disease which frequently affected the Scythians. The disease consisted in this; that men became effection to in character, put on female garments, did the work of women, and even became effectionts in appearance. As an explanation of this insunity of the Scythians, Herodotus relates the myth that the goldess Venus, angered by the plandering of the temple at Ascalos by the Scythians, had made women of these planderers and then posterity.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Sprengel, "Aprilogie des filippolicates," Leipeng, 1791, p. 811; Printintal, "Libertingswitchte der perch. Etunkheiten," 1820, p. 81; Latienand, "Des perce stationales," Parce, 1826, i. p. 181; Nysten, "Detimals de rabbettes," in edit. Parce, 1826, Art. "Arteriam et Maintie des Scytless"; Marandon, "De la maintie des Scytless"; "Assall mético-perchal," 1827, Mars. p. 161; Rammond, American Journal of Scorriogy and Psychostry, August, 1880.

Hippocrates, not believing in supernatural diseases, recognized that impotence was here a causative factor, and explained it, though incorrectly, as due to the custom of the Seythians, by attributing it to disease of the jugular veins induced by excessive riding. He thought that these veins were of great importance in the preservation of the sexual powers, and that when they were severed, impotence was induced. Since the Seythians considered their impotence due to divine punishment, and insurable, they put on the clothing of females, and lived as women among women.

It is worthy of note that, according to Kiaproth (* Reise in den Kankasus, * Berlin, 1812, v. p. 285) and Chotomski, even at the present time impotence in very frequent among the Tartars, as a result of riding ansadded horses. The same is observed among the Apoches and Nava-jos of the Western Continent, who ride excensively, scarcely ever going on foot, and are remarkable for small genitals and mild libido and similar. Sprengel, Lallemand, and Nysten recognized the fact that excessive riding may be injurious to the sexual organs.

Hammond reports analogous observations of great interest concoming the Pachlo Indians of New Mexico. These descendants of the Aziers millicate so-railed "mujerados," of which every Pueblo tribe requires one in the religious ceremonies (acten) orgies in the spring), in which pederusty plays an important part. In order to cultivate a "mujorado," a very powerful man is chosen, and he is made to masterbate excossively and ride constantly. Gradually such irritable weakness of the greated organs is engendered that, in riding, great loss of senses is induced. This condition of pritability passes into paralytic impotence. Then the testicles and penis atrophy, the hair of the beard falls out, the voice loses its depth and compass, and physical strength and energy decrease. Inclimations and disposition become Semining. The "mojerado" loses his position in society as a man. He takes on feminine manners and customs. and associates with women. Yet, for religious reasons, he is held in hence. It is probable that, at other times than during the festivals, he is used by the chiefs for pederasty. Rammond had an opportunity to exanime two " majorados." One had become such seven years before, said was thirty-five years old at the time. Seven years before, he was entirely masculine and potent. He had noticed gradual atrophy of the testicles and penia. At the same time he lost libido and the power of erection. He differed in nowise, in dress and manner, from the women among whom Hammond found him. The genital hair was wenting, the penis was alrunken, the serotum lax and pendelous, and the testicles were very much atrophied and no longer sensitive to pressure. The "imperedo " had large mamme like a progrant woman, and asserted that he had sursed several children whose mothers had died. A second "majerado," aged thirty-six, after he had been ten years in the resultion, prescated the same peculiarities, though with less devolopment of mamme. Like the first, the voice was high and this. The body was plump!

 Degree: Stage of Transition to Metawarphonia Sexualia Paranoira.

A further degree of development is represented by those cases in which bodily sensation is also transformed in the sense of a transmistatio sexus. In this respect the following case is unique:—

&lt;sup>5</sup> The following description of the "bots" is taken from Br. J. G. Ehrman's artists on " Responsibility to Sexual Personality," read before the Chicago Medical Scriety, March I, 1900 : " In accordance with the well-known physiological law, that too frequent excitation of a perty exhausts the craction of that were to that excitant, sexual excess exhausts the normal resettion, whence it occurs that abnormal attendes is required and the rise type of sermal percentice mentis. Such this types crop up among savages. Dr. A. B. Holder (N. V. Mod. June, 1806) describes a second percent called the "hote" by the Mintana and the burdach" by the Wesbirgton Indians. Such a prevent is found among all the fabrach the Northwest. Like all other sexual prevents, these 'Indea' can recognize each other. By Holder has bound that the 'bole 'wears the appare from, parts his hair like a appare, and secretor feminine speech and marmers. Their features are obsu musculars. In children Sminior from and manners are assumed, but not antill patenty do thotal grantices would These countil in tiking the male segan of the active party in the lips of the "bote," who experiences the sexual organic at the mane time: A ! tota ! examined by Dr. Hinder was a spiredally formed fellow, of preparenting face, in perfect braits, across in novement, and happy in disposition. By offering payment, he induced him to entent himself, though with complication refrictance, to a thorough examination. He was five fort eight inches high weighed one humbed and fifty-right pounds, and had a frank, intelligent free,-bring the Indian, of course brandens. He was thirty there years of age, and had worn wrent's dress for twenty eight years. His dress was the usual dress of the Indian Sounds, condeting of four articles,-- a single dress or group of half a stores yaeds of circle, made i-with wide slowers, and elder murriage to the making the pairs and nody of our pices, very much tile the 'Muther Wathard' negligit from by ladies; a braded tell loosely contains this at the water; stockings from government abstilly goods, and backship morrolles extending above the inkine. The hide, twenty-four or recenty-six inches long, was parted in the center and allowed to long lone in two masses behind the abouilders. Since among the Storn and some other tribes it is usual for men to wear their hair in this way, it is well to observe that in this tribe (Absorde) the men notally wear the hair in long house, and all ways part it on the title and 'south' the front. His able was smooth and free from hit? there being attachately none on the legs, seems, or broast, or in the armoits. This is of sespecial significance, as male and female Indians are both free from hair on these parts of the body. The mamme were as radimentary as those of the noise. When he removed his free he three his thighs together so us to completely concent the organi, whether male or Runky and a novement is made by tight women under examination,—a mirrorest smally exconstat in the female, owing in the non-projecting character of the gentials and in the retunitly of the thighs; but not usually easy, for the severe reasons, in the main. In this the bote '-either from the conformation of the thight, which had the feminise retunday, er from skill sequired by habit-exceeded completely. When he aspirated his thirtie, male organs came into they, in size perhaps not quite as large as the physique of the man would indicate, but in position and shape altogether normal. The posit was flacted. The 'lote' in higher very closely resembles a class described by Hipportains aroung the forthtime of Catomens, called by the Greeks anandreis, a wood surfamply stuffer in meaning to both !"-Taken.

Case 30. Autobiography. "Born in Hungary in 1844, for many years I was the only child of my parents; for the other children died for the most part of general weakness. A teather came late, who is still living.

"I come of a family in which nervous and mental diseases have been numerous. It is said that I was very pretty as a little child, with founds locks and transparent skin; very obedient, quiet, and modest, so that I was taken everywhere in the society of helics without any offense on my port.

"With a very setive imagination-my enemy through life-my talents developed rapidly. I could read and write at the age of four; my memory reaches back to my third year. I played with everything that fell into my hands, with leader soldiers, or stones, or ribbons from a children's store; but a machine for working in wood, that was given to me as a present, I did not like. I liked best to be at home with my mother, who was everything to use. I had two or three friends, with whom I got on good-asturedly; but I liked to play with their sisters quite as well, who always treated me like a girl, which at first did not emberrass me. I must have already been on the road to become just like a girl; at least, I can still well remember how it was always said . 'He is not intended for a boy." At this I tried to play the boy, imitated my companions in everything, and tried to surpass them in wildness. In this I succeeded. There was no tree or building too high for me to reach its top. I took great delight in soldiers. I avoided girls more, because I did not wish to play with their play-things; and it always annoyed me that they treated me so much like one of themselves.

In the society of mature people, however, I was always modest. and, also, always regarded with favor. Fantastic dreams about wild animals—which once draws me out of bed without waking me-frequently troubled me. I was always very simply, but very elegantly, dressed, and thus developed a taste for boantiful clothing. It seems permitty to me that, from the time of my school-days, I had a partiality for laties' gloves, which I put on serretly as often as I could. Thus, when once my mother was about to give away a pair of gloves, I made great opposition to it, and told her, when she asked why I noted so, that I wanted them myself. I was laughed at; and from that time I took good care not to display my perference for female things. Yet my delight in them was very great. I took especial pleasure in masquerale costumes,-i.e., only in female attire. If I sow them, I envised their owners. What seemed to me the prettiest eight was: two young men, leantifully dressed as white holies, with masks on ; and yet I would not have shown myself to others as a girl for anything; I was so abadd of being ridiculed. At school I worked very hard, and was always among the first. From childhead my purents taught me that duty came first; and they always set me an example. It was also a pleasure for me to attend school; for the teachers were kind, and the elder scholars did not plague the younger ones. We left my dest home; for my father was compelled, on account of his husiness,—which was dear to him,—to are arate from his family for a year. We moved to Germany. Here there was a stricter, rougher manner, partly in teachers and partly in scholars; and I was again ridiculed on account of my girlishness. My schoolmates went so far as to give a girl, who had exactly my features, my name, and me hers; so that I hated the girl. But I later came to be on terms of friendship with her after her marriage. My mother tried to ifrees me elegantly; but this was repugnant to me, because it made me the object of joke. So, finally, I was deligited when I and correct trousers said costs. But with these came a new annoyance. They irritated my genitals, particularly when the cloth was rough; and the touck of tailers while measuring ms, on account of their tickling, which almost convalued ric, was mendarable, particularly about the generals. Then I had to practice gymnastics; and I simply could do nothing at all, or only indifferently the things that girls eannot do easily. While bathing I was troubled by feeling ashamed to undress; but I liked to bathe. Dutil my twelfth year I had a great weskness in my lock. I learned to swim late, but sillimately so well that I took long awins. At thirteen I had public hair, and was about six feet tall; but my face was feminine until my eighteenth year, when my beard come in abundance and gave me rest from resemblance to women. An inquired Lernia that was acquired in my twelfth year, and cared when I was twenty, gave me much trouble, particularly in gymnastics. Besides, from my twelfth year on, I lad, after sitting long, and particularly while working at night, an itrhing, burning, and twitching, extending from the peaks to my back, which the acts of sitting and standing increased, and which was made worse by rateling cold. But I had no suspicion wintever that this could be rounceted with the genitals. Since none of my friends suffered in this way, it seemed strange to me; and it required the greatest patience to endure it; the more owing to the fact that my abdomes troubled me-

"In cornables I was still perfectly innocent; but now, as at the age of twelve or thirteen, I had a definite feeling of preferring to be a young lady. A young lady's form was more pleasing to me; her quiet manner, her deportment, but particularly her attire, attracted me. But I was careful not to allow this to be noticed; and yet, I am sure that I should not have shrunk from the contention-knife, could I have thus attained my desire. If I had been asked to say why I preferred famile attire, I could have said nothing more than that it attracted me powerfully; perimps, too, I seemed to myself, on account of my meconstonly white skin, more like a girl. The skin of my face and hands, particularly, was very sensitive. Girls liked my society; and, though I should have preferred to have been with them constantly, I avoided them when I could; for I had to exaggembe in order not to appear femisine. In my heart I always envied them. I was particularly envious when one of my young girl friends got tong dresses and wore gloves and reils. When, at the age of fifteen, I was on a journey, a young lady, with whom I was bearding, proposed that I mask us a hely and go out with her; but, dwing to the fact that she was not alone, I did not sequiesce, much as I should have liked it. Others stood on very little secenous with me, While on this journey, I was pleased at seeing toys in one city wearing Mozess with short sleeves, and the arms here. A lady cialorately dressed was like a goddess to me; and if even her hand touched me celdir I was happy and envious, and only too gladly would have put myself in her place in the beautiful garments and lovely form. Nevertheless, I studied assidnously, and passed through the Realschule and the Geneusing in vice years, passing a good final examination. I remember, when fifteen, to have first expressed to a friend the wish to be a girl. In suswer to his question, I could not give the reason why. At seventeen I got into fast society; I drank beer, smoked, and tried to joke with waiter-girls. The latter liked my society, but they always treated me as if I wore petticonts. I could not take dancing lessons, they repelled me so; but if I could have gone as a mask, it would have been different. My friends loved me durrly; I hated only one, who seduced me into onanism. Shame on those slays, which injured me for life! I practiced it quite frequently, but in it seemed to myself like a double man. I cannot describe the feeling; I think it was masculine, but mixed with feminine elements. I could not approach girls; I foured them, but they were not strange to me. They impressed me as being more like myself; I envised them. I would have denied myself all Hessures if, after my classes, at home I could have been a girl and thus have gone out. Crinoline and a smoothly-fitting glove were my ideals. With every hely's gown I saw I forced how I should feel in it, i.e., as a hdy. I had no inclination toward men. But I remember that I was somewhat foringly attached to a very handsome friend with a gui's face and dark hair, though I think I had no other wish than that we both might be girls.

"At the high-school I finally once and column; her mode sensi, me libertim sub-parila concubations of peners means runs course mutatum malaisse. To my autonishment, too, the girl had to treat me as a girl, and slid it willingly; but she treated me as if I were she (she was still quite inexperienced, and, therefore, did not length at me).

"When a student, at times I was wish, but I always felt that I assumed this withness as a mask. I drawk and duelled, but I could not take lessons in dancing, because I was afmid of betraying myself. My friendships were close, but without other thoughts. In pleased me most to have a friend masked as a lady, or to study the ladies' costumes at a built. I understood such things purfectly. Gradually I began to feel like a girl.

"On account of unimpey circumstances, I twice attempted wileste. Without any cause I once alept fourteen days, had many hallmenations (visual and auditory at the same time), and was with both the living and the dead. The latter habit of thought remains. I also had a friend (a lady) who knew my hobby and put on my gloves for me but she always looked upon me as a girl. Thus I understood women better than other men did, and in what they differed from men; so I was always treated more feminarym, as if they had found in me a female friend. On the whole, I could not endure obscenity, and indulged in it myself only out of braggadocio when it was necessary. I soon overcame my aversion to foul offices and blood, and even liked them. I was wanting in only one respect: I could not understand my own condition. I knew that I had feminine inclinations, but believed that I was a man. Yet I doubt whether, with the exception of the attempts at coltus, which never gase me pleasure (which I averibe to onsnion), I ever admired a woman without wishing I were she; or without saking inyself whether I should not like to be the woman, or be in her attire. Obstetries I learned with difficulty (I was ashamed for the exposed girls, and had a feeling of pity for (born); and even now I have to overcome a feeting of fright in obstetrical cases; indeed, it has happened that I thought I felt the traction myself. After filling several positions successfully as a physician, I went through a military compaign as a volunteer surgeon. Riding, which, while a student, was prinful to me, because in it the genitals had more of a feminize feeling, was difficult for me (it would have been easier in the female style).

"Still, I always thought I was a man with obscure mascriline feeling; and whenever I associated with bolies, I was still soon treated as an insuperiorced boly. When I were a uniform for the first time, I should have much preferred to have slipped into a body's costume, with a well;
I was disturted when the stately uniform attracted attention. In private practice I was successful in the three principal brunches. Then I made another military campaign; and during this I came to understand my nature; for I think that, since the first see, no beast of burden has ever had to endore with so much patience as I have. Decorations were not wanting, but I was indifferent to them.

"Thus I went through life, such as it was, never satisfied with myself, full of dissatisfaction with the world, and rescillating between sentimentality and a wildness that was for the most part affected.

My experience as a candidate for matrimony was very peculiar. I should have preferred not to marry, but family circumstances and prictice forced me to it. I married an energetic, amiable hely, of a family in which female government was recopent. I was in love with her as much as one of us can be in love,—i.e., what we love we love with our while hearts, and live in it, even though we do not show it as much us a genuine man does. We love our brides with all the love of a woman, almost as a woman might love her bridegroom. But I cannot say this for myself; for I still believed that I was but a depressed man, who would come to himself, and find himself out by marriage. But, even on my marriage-night, I felt that I was only a women in man's form; san femina focum meum ease mili visum est. On the whole, we lived contented and happy, and for two years were childless. After a difficult pregnancy, slaring which I was in meetal fear of death, the first boy was been in a difficult labor,-a boy on whom a melancholy nature still hange; who is still of melancholy disposition. Then came a second, who is very quiet; a third, full of peculiarities; a fourth, a lifth; and all have predisposition to negrathenia. Since I always felt out of my own place, I went much in pay society; but I always worked as much as human strength would allow. I studied and operated; and I experimented with many drugs and methods of sure, always on myself. I left the regulation of the house to my wife, as she understood home-keeping very well. My marital duties I performed as well as I could, but without personal satisfartion. Since the first coitus, the musculine position in it has been repormut, and, too, difficult for me. I should have much preferred to have the other role. When I had to deliver my wife, it almost broke my heart; for I knew how to appreciate her pain. Thus we lived long together, until severe good drove me to various totles, and made me neurasthenic. At the same time, I became so armine that every few mouths I had to take iron for some time; otherwise I would be almost. chlorotic or hysterical, or both. Stenocardia often troubled me; then came unlisteral cramps of chin, nose, neck, and laryax; benirman and rumps of the diaphragm and chest-muscles. For about three years I had a feeling us if the prostate were enlarged,-a learing-down feeling, as if giving hirth to something; and, also, pain in the hips, constant pain in the back, and the like. Yet, with the strength of despair, I fought against these complaints, which impressed me as being female or effendante, until three years ago, when a severe attack of arthritis completely broke me down.

"But before this terrible attack of gout occurred, in despair, to lessen the pain of gout, I had taken hot baths, as near the temperature of the body as possible. On one of these occasions it is present that I underly changed, and seemed to be near death. I sprang with all my remaining strength out of the bath: I had felt exactly like a woman with hitsdo. Too, at the time when the extract of Indian hemp cause into vague, and was highly prized, in a state of fear of a threatened attack of gout (feeling perfectly indifferent about life), I took three or four times the usual dose of it, and almost died of inachisch poisoning. Convenieve laughter, a feeling of unbeard of strength and awiffness, a perniar feeling in term and eyes, millions of sparks streaming from the brain through the skin,—all these feelings occurred. But I could not force myself to speak. All at once I saw myself a woman from my toes to my breast; I felt, us before while in the bath, that the gesitals had shrunken, the privis broadened, the breasts swellen out; a feeling of unspeakable delight came over me. I closed my eyes, so that at limit I did not see the face changed. My physician looked as if he had a gigantic pointee instead of a bead; my wife had the full moon on her notes. And yet I was strong enough to briefly record my will in my note-book when both left the room for a short time.

" But who could describe my fright, when, on the next morning, I awoke and found myself feeling as if completely changed into a woman; and when, on standing and walking, I felt valve and memme! When at hat I mised myself out of boil, I felt that a complete transformation had taken place in me. During my sickness a visitor said: 'He is too putient for a near.' And the visitor gave me a plant in bloom, which seemed strongs, but pleased me. From that time I was patient, and would do nothing in a burry; but I became teracions, like a cut, though, at the same time, mild, forgiving, and no longer bearing samity, -in short, I had a woman's disposition. During the last sickness I had many visual and auditory influcinations, speke with the dead, etc.; saw and heard familiar spirits; felt like a double person; but, while lying itt, I did not notice that the man in me had been extinguished. The charge in my disposition was a piece of good fortune which came over me like lightning, and which, had it come with me feeling as I formerly did, would have killed me; but now I gave myself up to it, and no longer recognized myself. Owing to the fact that I still often confounded neurasthenic symptoms with the good, I took many baths, until an Sching of the skin with the feeling of scales, instead of being diminished, was so increased that I gave up all external treatment (I was made more and more ansemic be the baths), and hardened muself as best I could. But the impositive female feeling remained, and became so strong that I want only the mask of a man, and in everything else feel like a woman; and gradually I have lost memory of the former individuality. What was left of me from the goot, the indusers rained entirely.

"Present Conditions: I am tall, slightly tald, and the heard is growing gray. I begin to steep. Since having the influenza, I have lost about a quarter of my strength. Owing to a valvalar lesion, my free looks nearewhat red; full beard; chronic empirectivitis; more muscular than fat. The left feet seems to be developing varieous value, and it often goes to sleep; but it is not really thickened, though it seems to be.

"The mammary region, though small, swells out perceptibly. The abdomen is feminius in form; the feet are placed like a woman's, and the calves, etc., are feminine; and it is the same with arms and lands. I can were ladies' hose, and gloves, 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) to 7\(\frac{1}{2}\) in size. I also were a correct without annoyance. My weight varies between 168 and 184 pounds. Uring without albumen or sugar, but it contains an excess of uric acid. But if there is not too much uric acid in it, it is clear, and almost as clear as water after any excitement. Bowels usually regular; but should they not be, then come all the symptoms of female obstipation. Sleep. is poor, for weeks at a time only two or three hours long. Appetite quite good; but, on the whole, my stomach will not bear more than that of a strong woman, and reacts to irritating food with ostaneous eruption and burning in the crethm. The skin is white, and, for the most part, feels quite amouth; there has been unbearable extancous itching for the had two years; but during the last few weeks it los diminished, and is now present only in the popliteal spaces and on the scrottme.

"Tendency to perspire. Perspiration was previously as good as wasting, but now there are all the edious peculiarities of the female perspiration, particularly about the lower part of the body; so that I have to keep myself cleaner than a woman. (I perfume my handkerthief, and use perfumed somp and emide Cologue.)

"General Feeling: I feel like a woman in a man's form; and even though I often am sensible of the man's form, yet it is always in a feminine sense. Thus, for example, I feel the penis as cirtoris; the urethraas uretim and vaginal ortice, which always feels a little wet, even when it is actually dry; the scrotum as labia majorn; in short, I always feel the velvs. And all that that means one alone can know who feels or has felt so. But the skin all over my budy Seels feminine, it receives all impressions, whether of touch, of warmth, or whether unfriendly, as femisine, and I have the sensations of a woman. I cannot go with hare hands, as both heat and cold trouble me. When the time is past when we men are permitted to carry sun-undrelins, I have to sudare great sensitiveness of the skin of my face, until sun-unbrellus can again be used. On awaking in the morning, I am confused for a few moments, as if I were seeking for myself; then the imperative feeling of being a woman awakens. I feel the sense of the sulva (that one is there), and always greet the day with a soft or loud sight; for I have fear again of the play that must be carried on throughout the day. I had to learn everything anew; the knife-apparatus, everything-less felt different for the last three years; and with the change of muscular sense I lind to learn everything over again. I have been successful, and only the use of the saw and bone-chisel are difficult; it is almost as if my strength were not quite sufficient. On the other hand, I have a keener souse of touch in working with the curette in the soft parts. It is unpleasant that, in examining balles, I often feel their sensations; but this, indeed, does not repell them. The most impleasant thing I experience is Satal movement. For a long time-several months-I was treakled by reading the thoughts of both sexes, and I still have to fight against it. I can endure it better with women; with men it is repugnant. Three years ago I had not yet conscionsly seen the world with a woman's eyes; this change in the relation of the eyes to the brain came almost said dealy, with violent headache. I was with a lady whose sexual feeling was reversed, when suddenly I now her changed in the sense I now fed myself,—viz., she as mun,—and I felt myself a woman in contrast with her; so that I left her with ill-concealed vexation. At that time she had not yet come to unferstand her own condition perfectly.

"Since then, all my sensory impressions are as if they were feminine in form and relation. The sereless system almost immeliately adjusted itself to the vegetative; so that all my silments womanifested in a feminine way. The sensitiveness of all perves, parties larly that of the auditory and offsetory and trigeminal, increased to a condition of nervousness. If only a window shanned, I was frightened inwardly; for a man dare not tremble at such things. If food is not absolutely fresh, I perceive a cadaverous ofor. I could never deposit on the trigeniums; for the pain would jump whimshally from one branch of it to another; from a looth to an eye. But, since my true. formation, I burr toothache and migraine more easily, and have less feel. ing of fear with stenocardia. It seems to me a simply fact that I feel myself to be a fearful, weak being, and yet, when danger threaters, I am much rather cool and collected; and this is true in dangerous operations. The storach relets against the slightest indiscretion (in Sensie diet) tint is committed without thought of the female nature, either by raries or other symptoms; but particularly against abuse of alcoholies. The indisposition after intoxication that a man who feels like a woman experiences is much worse than say a student could get up. It seems to me almost as if one feeling like a woman were entirely controlled by the regetative system.

"Small as my nipples are, they demand room, and I feel then as minimize; just as during the beginning of pulseity, the nipples are fled and pained. On this account, the white shirt, the waistcoat, and the contitrouble me. I feel as though the points were female, and it is the same with the axis and nates. At first the sense of a female ablomus was trouble some to me; for it cannot bear trousers, and it always possesses or induces the feminine feeling. I also have the imperative feeling of a waisi. It is as if I were robbed of my own skin, and put in a weman's skin that fitted me perfectly, but which felt everything as if it covered a woman; and whose sensutions passed through the man's body, and exterminated the masculine element. The testes, even though not strophied or degenerated, are still no longer testes, and often cause me pain, with the feeling limit they belong in the abdomen, and should be fastened there; and their mobility often bothers me.

"Every four weeks, at the time of the full moon, I have the male men of a woman for five days, physically and mentally, only I do not bleed; but I have the feeling of a less of fluid; a feeling that the generals and abdonous are (internally) swollen. A very plousant period comes when, afterward and later in the interval for a day or two, the physiological desire for procreation comes, which with all power permeates the woman. My whole body is then filled with this sensation, as an immersed piece of sugar is filled with water, or so full as a scaked sponge. like this: first, a woman longing for love, and then, for a man; and, in fact, the desire, as it weems to me, is more a longing to be possessed than a wish for rollins. The intense unfound instinct or the feminine concupies cence overcomes the feeling of modesty, so that indirectly coitus is desired. I have never felt coltas in a masculine way more than three times in my life; and even if it were so in general, I was always indifferent about it. But, during the last three years, I have experienced it passively, like a woman; in fact, oftentimes with the feeling of feminine ejaculation; and I always feel that I am impregnated. I am always fatigued as a woman is after it, and often feel ill, as a man never does. Sometimes it caused me so great pleasure that there is nothing with which I can compare it; it is the most blissful and powerful feeling in the world; at that moment the woman is simply a vulva that has devoured the whole persett.

"During the last three years I have never lost for an instant the feeling of being a woman, and now, owing to habit, this is no longer annoting to me, though during this period I have felt debased; for a man could endure to feel like a woman without a desire for enjoyment; but when desires come! The happiness ceases; then come the burning, the heat, the feeling of turgor of the genitals (when the penis is not in a state of erection the genitals do not play any part). In case of intense desire, the feeling of encking in the vagina and valva is really terrible-a beliish pain of last hardly to be endured. If I then have opportunity to perform coitus, it is better; but, owing to defective sense of being possessed by the other, it does not afford complete satisfaction; the feeling of sterility comes with its weight of shame, added to the feeling of passive copulation and injured modesty. I seem almost like a prestitute. Reason does not give any help; the imperative feeling of femininity dominates and rules everything. The difficulty in carrying on one's occupation, under such eircumstances, is easily appreciated; but it is possible to force one's self to it. Of course, it is almost impossible to sit, walk, or lie down; at least, any one of these cannot be endured long; and with the constant touch of the tromers, etc., it is unendumble.

"Marriage then, except during coitus, where the man has to feel himself a woman, is like two women bring together, one of whom regards herself as in the mask of a man. If the periodical molitism field to occur, then come the feelings of pregnancy or of sexual satisty, which a man never experiences, but which take passession of the whole being, just as the feeling of femininity does, and are repugnant in themselves; and therefore, I gladly welcome the regular molitism again. When crotic drams or ideas occur, I see myself in the form I have as a woman, and secorcited organs presenting. Since the new feels feminine, it would not be hard to become a passive pederast; only positive religious command prevents it, as all other deterrent ideas would be overcome. Since such conditions are repugnant, as they would be to any one, I have a desire to be sexices, or to make myself sexices. If I had been single, I should long ago have taken leave of testes, scrotum, and penis.

"Of wint use is female pleasure, when one does not conceive! What good comes from excitation of female love, when one has only a wife for gratification, even though constation is felt so though it were with a man? What a terrible feeling of shouse is caused by the feminine perspiration? How the feeling for dress and ormasent lowers a man't Even in his changed form, even when he can no longer recall the mastaline sexual feeling, he would not wish to be forced to feel like a women. He still knows very well that, before, he did not constantly feel sexually ; that he was merely a human being uninfluenced by sea. Now, anddealy, he has to regard his former individuality as a mask, and constantly feel like a woman, only having a change when, every four weeks, he has his periodical sickness, and in the intervals his insatisble female desire. If he could but awake without immediately being forced to feel like a worous! At last he longs for a moment in which he might mise his mask; but that moment does not come. He can only find amelioration of his misery when he can put on some bit of female attire or finery, an under garment, etc.; for he dare not go about as a woman. To be conpelled to fulfill all the daties of a calling with the feeling of being a woman costumed as a man, and to see no end of it, is no tride. Beligion alone saves from a great lapse; but it does not prevent the pain when temptation affects the man who feels as a woman; and so it must be felt and endured! When a respectable mon who enjoys an unusual degree of public confidence, and possesses authority, must go about with his rulysimaginary though it be; when one, leaving his ardusus daily task, is compelled to examine the toffette of the first buly he meets, and criticise her with feminine eyes, and read her thoughts in her face; when a journal of fashions possesses an interest equal to that of a scientific work (I felt this as a child); when one must conceal his condition from his wife, whose thoughts, the moment he feels like a woman, he can read in her face, while it becomes perfectly clear to her that he has changed in body and soul,-what must all this be? The misery caused by the feature gentleness that most be overcome! Oftentimes, of course, when I am away alone, it is possible to live for a time more like a woman; for example, to wear female attire, especially at night, to keep gloves on, or to wear a veil or a mask in my room, so that thus there is rest from excessive litido. But when the feminine feeling has once gained an extrance, it imperatively demands recognition. It is often satisfied with a molerate concession, such as the wearing of a bracelet above the ruff; but it impensively demands some concession. My only happiness is to see myself dressed as a woman without a feeling of shame; indeed, when my face is veiled or masked. I prefer it so, and thus think of myself. Like every one of Fashion's fools, I have a taste for the prevailing mode; so greatly am I immaformed. To become accustomed to the thought of feeling only like a woman, and only to remember the previous number of thought to a certain extent in contrast with it; such at the same time, to express one's self as a man,—it requires a long time and an infinite amount of persistence.

"Nevertheless, in spite of everything, it will happen that I betray myself by some expression of faminine feeling, either in servalstor, when I say that I feel so and so, expressing what a man without the female feeling cannot know; or when I accidentally betray that female attire is my talent. Before women, of course, this does not amount to anything; for a woman is greatly flattered when a usin understands something of her matters; but this must not be displayed to my own wife. How frightened I once was when my wife said to a friend that I laid great inste in ladies' dress! How a haughty, stylish lady was astonished when, as she was about to make a great error in the education of her little daughter, I described to her in writing and verbally all the feminine feelings! To be sure, I fied to her, saying that my knowledge had been gleaned from letters. But her confidence in me is as great as ever; and the child, who was on the road to insanity, is rational and happy. She had confessed all the feminine inclinations as sins; now she knows what, as a girl, she must bear and control by will and religion; and she foels that she is human. Both ladies would laugh heartily, if they knew that I had only drawn on my own sail experience. I must also add that I now have a finer sense of temperature and, besides, a sense of the elasticity of the skin and tension of the intestines, etc., in patients, that was unknown to me before; that in operations and autopoins, poisonous fuids more readily penetrate my (uninjured) skin. Every autonsy causes me pain; examination of a prostitute, or a woman having a discharge, a cancerous odor, or the like, is actually repugnant to me. In all respects I am now under the influence of antipathy and sympathy, from the sense of color to my judgment of a person. Women usually see in each other the periodical sexual disposition; and, therefore, a lady wears a veil, if she is not always accustomed to wear one, and usually she perfittees herseif, even though it be only with handkerchief or gloves; for her olfactory sense in relation to her own sex is intenss. Odors have an incredible effect on the female organism; thus, for example, the odors of violets and ross quiet me, while others disgust me; and with thing-hlang I cannot contain myself for sexual excitement. Contact with a woman seems homogeneous to'me; ecitus with my wife seems possible to me because she is somewhat massuline, and has a firm skin; and yet it is more an amer lederes.

"Besides, I always feel passive. Often at night, when I cannot sleep for excitement, it is finally accomplished, at Semora men distense haboo, signit multer com viro concumbers, or if I lie on my side; but an arm or the bed-clothing must not touch the mamme, or there is no sleep; and there must be no pressure on the abdoman. I sleep best in a chemise and night-robe, and with gloves on; for my lands easily get cold. I smalled comfortable in fermile drawers and petitionals, because they do not touch the generals. I liked fermile dresses best when crunoline was worn. Fermile dresses do not amony the fermine-feeding man; for he, like every woman, feels them as belonging to his person, and not as something foreign.

"My dearest associate is a lady suffering with accorathenia, who, since her last confinement, feels like a man, but who, since I explained these feelings to her, coits abstinct as much as possible, a thing I, as a husband, dare not do. She, by her example, helps me to endure my condition. She has a more perfect memory of the female feelings, and has often given me good solvier. Were she a man and I a young girl, I should seek to win her; for her I should be gird to endure the fate of a woman. But her present appearance is quite different from what it formerly was. She is a very alegantly dressed gentleman, notwithstanding forour and hair; she also speaks quickly and concisely, and no longer takes pleasure in the things that please me. She has a kind of melanthely discretished on with the world, but she bears her fate worthly and with resignation, finding her comfort only in religion and the fulfillment of duty. At the time of the assasses, she almost dies. She no longer likes female society and conversation, and has no liking for delicacies.

"A youthful friend felt like a girl from the very first, but he had inclinations toward the mule sex. His sister had the opposite condition; and when the oterus demanded its right, and she saw herself as a loving woman, in spite of her musculinity, she cut the matter short, and committed saicide by drowning.

Since complete effemination, the principal changes I have observed in myself are:—

- " I. The constant feeling of being a woman from top to toe.
- " 2. The constant feeling of having Sensle genitals.
- "3. The periodicity of the monthly molimen.
- " 4. The regular occurrence of female desire, though not directed to any particular man.
  - -5. The passive female feeling in coitus.
  - " 5. After that, the feeling of impregnation.
  - * 7. The female feeling in thought of column.
- "8. At the night of women the feeling of being of their kind, and the feminine interest in them.
  - "9. At the right of men, the feminine interest in them.
  - "10. At the sight of children, the same feeling,
  - "11. The changed disposition and much greater patience.
- "12. The final resignation to my fate, for which I have nothing to thank but positive religion; without it I should have long ago committed valcide.

"To be a man and to be compelled to feel that chaque femme est futuée on alle désire d'être, is hardly to be endured."

The foregoing autobiography, scientifically so important, was accompanied by the following no less interesting letter:—

"Sex: I must sext beg your indulgence for treubling you with my communication. I lost all control, and thought of myself only as a monster before which I myself shuddered. Then your work gave me courage again; and I determined to go to the bottom of the matter, and examine my past life, let the result be what it might. It seemed a duty of gratitude to you to tell you the result of my recollection and observation, since I had not seen any description by you of an analogous case; and, smally, I also thought it might perhaps interest you to learn, from the pen of a physician, how such a worthless burson, or mesculine, being thinks and feels under the weight of the imperative idea of being a roman.

"It is not perfect; but I no longer have the strength to reflect more upon it, and have no desire to go into the matter more deeply. Much is repeated; but I beg you to remember that any mask may be allowed to full off, particularly when it is not voluntarily worn, but suforced.

*After reading your work, I hope that, if I fidfill my daties so physician, citizen, father, and husband, I may still count myself among human beings who do not deserve merely to be despised.

"Finally, I wished to by the result of my recollection and reflection before you, in order to show that one thinking and feeling like a woman can still be a physician. I consider it a great injustice to defor woman from Medicine. A woman, through her feeling, gets on the track of many minerate which, in spite of all skill in diagnosis, remain obscure to a man; at least, in the diseases of women and children. If I could have my way, I should have every physician live the life of a woman for three mouths; then he would have a better understanding and more consideration in matters affecting the half of humanity from which he comes; then he would learn to value the greatness of women, and appreciate the difficulty of their lot."

Remarks: The badly-tainted patient is originally psycho-sexually almoratal, in that, in character and in the sexual act, he feels as a female. This abnormal feeling remained purely a psychical anomaly until three years ago, when, owing to severe neutrathenia, it received overmastering support in imperative bodily sensations of a transmittatio series, which now dominate consciousness. Then, to the patient's horror, he felt hodily like a woman; and under the impulse of his imperative feminine sensations, he experienced a complete transformation of his former measure feeling schought, and will; in fact, of his whole vita sexualis, in the sense of sviration. At the same time, his ogo is able to control these abnormal psycho-physical manifestations, and prevent descent to paramon,—a remarkable example of imperative fistings and ideas on the bade of sourcite taint, which is of great value for a comprehension of the way in which the psycho-examl transformation may be accomplished.

IV. Degree: Metamorphosis Sexualis Parassica.—A final possible stage in this disease-process is the delusion of a transformation of sex. It arises on the basis of sexual neumathenia that has developed into neurasthenia universalis, resulting in a mental disease,—paranoia.

The following cases show the development of the interesting neuro-psychological process to its height:-

Case 100. K., aged 36, single, servant, received at the clinic on Petermry 26, 1889, is a typical case of paranois persocutoria resulting from neurasthenia sexualis, with offactory hallprinations, sensations, etc. He comes of a predisposed family. Several brothers and sisters were psychopathic. Patient has an hydrocopinlic skull, depressed in the region of the right fontanelle; eyes neuropathir. He has always been very sensual; began to masturbate at nipoteen; had coltus at twentythree; begat three illegitimate children. He gave up further sexual intercourse, on account of four of begetting more children, and of being mable to provide for them. Abstinence proved very painful to him. He also gave up musturbation, and was then troubled with poliutions. A year and a half ago he became sexually negrosthenic, had diarnal pollations, became thereafter ill and miserable, and, after a time, generally nearastheric, finally developing paranols. A year ago he began to have puresthetic sensations, as if there were a great coil in the place of his conitals; and then he felt that his according and penis were gone, and that his genitals were changed into those of a female. He felt the growth of his brensis; that his hair was that of a woman; and that Seminia garments were on his body. He thought himself a women. The people in the street gave utterance to corresponding remarks: "Look at the woman! The old blowhard!" In a half dreamy state, he had the feeling as if he played the part of a woman in coltas with a man. During it he had the most lively feelings of pleasure. During his stay at the elinic, a remission of the parasola occurred, and, at the same time, a marked improvement of the neurosthesia. Then the feelings and ideas due to a developing metamorphosis sexualis disappeared.

A more advanced case of eviration, on the way to a transformatio sexus paramoira, is the following:-

Case 101. Franz St., aged 51; echoel-deacher; single; probably of tainted family; always neuropathic; emotional, timbl, intolerant of alsohol; began to masturbate at eighteen. At thirty there were minitedations of neurasthenia sexualis (pollutions with consequent fatigue, which at last began to occur during the day; min in the region of the secral plaxes, etc.). Gradually, spiral irritation, pressure in the head, and occuhral neurasthenia were added. Since the beginning of 1885 the patient had given up coits, in which he no longer experienced pleasurable feeling. He mastarbated frequently.

In 1888 be began to have delesions of suspicion. He noticed that he was avoided, and that he had unpleasant odors about him (olfactory inflacinations). In this way be explained the altered attitude of people, and their susceing, coughing, etc. He unclied corpose and foul urine. He recognized the cause of his bad smells in inward pollutions. He recognized these in a feeling he had so if a fluid flowed up from the symphysis toward the breast. Patient soon left the clinic.

In 1889 he was again received in an advanced stage of paranola masturbatoria persecutoria (delusions of physical persecution).

In the beginning of Mny, 1889, the patient attracted notice, in that he was cross when he was addressed as "mister." He protested against it, because he was a woman. Voices told him this. He noticed that his breasts were growing. Some weeks before, others had touched him in a sensual manner. He heard it said that he was a whore. Of late, dreams of pregnancy. He dreamed that, as a woman, he indulged in coitus. He felt the immissio penis, and, during the hallocinatory act, also a feeling of ejeculation.

Head straight; facial form long and narrow; porietal eminences prominent; genitals normally developed.

The following case, observed in the asylum at Illenau, is a pertinent example of lasting delusional alteration of sexual consciousness:—

Case 102. Metamorphasis Sermalis Paranouca.—N., aged 23, single, planist, was received in the asylum at Illenan in the last part of October, 1865. He came of a family in which there was said to be no hereditary taint; but it was tuberculous (father and brother died of pulmonary tuberculous). Patient, as a child, was weakly and dull, though especially talented in maste. He was always of abnormal character; silent, retising, unsocial, and sullen. He practiced musturisation after fifteen. After a few years accurathenic symptoms (pulpitation of the heart, insuitade, occasional pressure in the head, etc.), and also hypochondrized symptoms, were manifested. During the last year he had worked with great difficulty. For about six months neurosthenia had increased. He complained of pulpitation of the heart, pressure in the head, and sleep-leaness; was very irritable, and seemed to be sexually excited. He declared that he must marry for his health. He fall in love with an artist, but almost at the same time (September, 1965) he fell ill with paranoin persecutoria (ideas of enemies, derision in the street, poison in food; electroles were placed on the bridges to keep him from going to his removate). On account of increasing excitement and conflicts with those about him that he considered inimical to him, he was taken to the asylum. At first be presented the picture of a typical paranois persecutoria with symptoms of sexual, and later general, neurastheria, though the defunious of persecution did not rest upon this neurotic foundation it was only occasionally that the patient heard such sentences as this; "Now the senses will be drawn out of him. Now the bladder will be cut out."

In the course of the years 1865-68, the delusions of persecution became less and less apparent, and were for the most part replaced by crotic ideas. The sematic and mental basis was a lasting and powerful excitation of the sexual uphers. The patient fell in love with every woman he saw, heard voices which told him to approach her, and begged to be allowed to marry, declaring that, if he was not given a wife, he would waste away. With continuance of masturbation, in 1862, signs of future effenimation mode themselves manifest. "He would, if he should get a wife, love her only platonically." The patient grows more and more peculiar, lives in a circle of crotic ideas, sees prostitution practiced in the asylum, and now and then hears voices which impute immoral conduct with women to him. For this reason he avoids the society of women, and only associates with them for the take of music when two witnesses are with him.

In the course of the year 1812, the neurasthenic condition became markedly increased. Now paranola persecutoria again comes into the foreground, and takes on a clinical coloring from the neurotic basis. Offictory hallucinations occur. Magnetic influences are at work on him (false interpretation of sensations due to spiral asthenia). With continned and intense sexual excitement and excess in unsturbation, the process of effemination constantly progresses. Only episodically is he a man and inclined toward a woman, complaining that the shameless protitution of the men in the house makes it impossible for a lidy to come to him. He is stying of magnetically poisoned air and unsatisfied love. Without love he cannot live. He is poisoned by level poison that affects his sexual desire. The lady that he loves is wink in the lowest vice. The prostitutes in the house have fortune-chains; that is, chains in which, without moving, a man can indelge in lustful pleasure. He is ready now to satisfy himself with prostitutes. He is possessed of a wonderful ray of thought that cumnates from his eyes, which is worth twenty milions. His compositions are worth 500,000 france. With these indications of delusions of grandeur, there are also those of persecution—the food it poisoned by veneral excrement; he tastes and smalls poison, hears informous accusations, and asks for instruments to close his ears. From August, 1872, however, the signs of effemination become more and more frequent. He acts somewhat affected, declaring that he can no longer her among men that drink and smoke. He thinks and feels like a soman. He must thenreforth be treated like a woman and transferred to a female ward. He asks for confections and delicate desserts. Occasionally, on account of tenesions and systomesm, he asks to be transferred to a lying-in hospital and treated as a woman very ill in pregnancy. The absormal magnetism of musculine attendants has an unfavorable effect on him. At times he still feels himself to be a man, but in a way which indicates his abnormally altered sexual feeling. He pleads only for satisfaction by means of masturbation, or for marriage without coities. Manrisgs is a sensual institution. The girl that he would take for a wife must be a musturbator. About the end of December, 1872, his personality became completely feminine. From that time he remained a woman. He hid always been a woman, but in his habyhood a French Quaker, an artist, had put masculine genitals on him, and by rubbing and distorting his thorax had prevented the development of his breasts. After this he demanded to be transferred to the female department, protection from men that wished to violate him, and asked for female clothing. Eventually he also desired to be given employment in a toy-shop, with crecheting and embroidery work to do, or a place in a dress-making establishment with female work. From the time of the transformatio sexus, the patient begins a new reckoning of time. He conceives his previous personality in memory as that of a cousin.

He always speaks of himself in the third person, and calls himself the Countess V., the dearest friend of the Empress Engenie; saks for perfumes, corsets, etc. He takes the other men of the ward for girls, tries to mise a lead of heir, and demands "Oriental Hair-Remover," in order that no one may doubt his gender. He takes delight in praising common, for "she had been an openist from fifteen, and had nover desired any other kind of sexual satisfaction." Occasionally neurasthenic symptoms, elfactory hallicimations, and persecutory delusions are observed. All the events up to the time of December, 1872, belong to the personality of the cousin.

The petient's delusion that he is the Countess V. can no longer be corrected. She proves her identity by the fact that the norse has examined her, and finds her to be a lady. The countess will not marry, because she hates men. Since he is not provided with female clothing and shoes, he spends the greatest part of the day in bod, acts like an invalid hely of position, affectedly and moderally, and asks for bun-bons and the like. His hair is done up in a knot as well as it allows, and the board is pulled out. Breasts are made out of biscuits.

In 1874 caries began in the left knee-joint, to which pulmously interculosis was soon udded. Death on December 2, 1874. Skull formal. Frontal lobes strephic. Brain snewie. Microscopical (Dr. Schule): In the superior layer of the frontal lobe, ganglion cells somewhat shrunken; in the adventitio of the vessels, numerous fat-corpuckupgita unchanged; isolated pigment particles and colloid bodies. The lawer layers of the cortex normal. Genitals very large; testicles small, lay, and show no change uncroscopically on section.

The delusion of sexual transformation, displayed, in its conditions and phases of development, in the foregoing case, is a manifestation remarkably infrequent in the pathology of the human mind. Besides the foregoing cases, personally observed, I have seen such a case, as an episodical phenomenon, in a lady briving contrary sexuality (Case 92 of the sixth edition of this work), one in a girl affected with original paranoin, and another in a lady suffering with original paranoin.

Save for a case briefly reported by Arndt, in his text-hook (p. 172), and one quite superficially described by Sérieux ("Recherches Clinique," p. 33), and the two cases known to Esquirol, I cannot recall any cases of delusion of sexual transformation in literature. Arndt's case may be briefly given here, though, like Esquirol's cases, it gives nothing concerning the genesis of the delusion:—

Case 103. A middle-aged woman in the asylum at Greifswald thought she was a man, and noted out her belief. She out her bair short, and parted it on one side in the military fishion. A sharply-cut profile, a nose semewhat large, and a certain heaviness of all the features gave the face something characteristic, and, in combination with the short hair combod smoothly over the sura, gave the whole head a decidedly mosculine appearance. She was tall and lean; her voice low and rough; the bryax angularly prominent; her attitude erect; her guit, like all her movements, heavy, but not awkward. She looked like a min in Sounds dress. Asked how she had come to think she was a man, she would almost always cry excitedly; "Just look at me! Don't I look like a man? I feel like a man, too. I have always felt so, but I only gradually came to understand it clearly. The man who should be my husband is not a real man. I raised my children myself. I always felt somewhat like this, but I came to understand later. Did I not slways work like a man? The man who passed for my husband only helped He did what I planned. From my youth I have been more manualize then feminine. I have always had more liking for the gurden and farm than for work in the house and kitchen. But I never understood the reason. Now I know I am a man, and I shall bear myself like one. It is a slame to make me always wear women's clothes."

Case 104. X., aged 16, tall, and of handsome appearance. Since his earliest youth he has loved to wear famile attire. As he grew up, he managed it so that, when he was a participant in theatricals, he always had a female part. After an attack of mental excitoment, he imagined that he was actually a woman, and tried to convince others of it.

He liked to undress himself, and dress his hair and put so female slothing. In this state he wished to go out on the street. In other respects he was perfectly reasonable. He would spend the whole day arranging his hair and looking at himself in the glass, costuming himself in a night-dress as much like a woman as possible. In walking he imitated women. One day, when Equirol seted as if about to lift up his dress, he flew into a passion and upbraided him for his want of modesty (Esquirol).

Case 105. Mrs. X., widow. Owing to the death of her husband and loss of fortune, she had been greatly troubled in mind. She became disturbed mentally, and was admitted to the Salpëtriëre after attempting spicide.

Mrs. X., lean, thin; constantly maniscal; she believes herself a man, and flies angry if she is addressed as "madam." Once, when male clothing was placed at her disposal, she was beside herself with joy. She flied, in 1802, of a consumptive mulady; and she expressed her delastes of being a man until shortly before her death (Esquirol).

I have already mentioned the interesting relations existing between the facts of delusional transformation of sex and the so-called insensity of the Scythians.

Marandon ("Annales médico-psychologiques," 1877, p. 161), like others, has erroneously presumed that with the ancient Seythians there was an actual delusion, and that the condition was not merely that of eviration. According to the law of empirical actuality, the delusion, so infrequent to-day, must also have been very infrequent in ancient times. Since it can only be conceived as arising on the basis of a paramoia, there can be no thought of its endemic occurrence; it can only be regarded as a superstitious manifestation of eviration (the result of anger of the goddess), as is also evident from the statements of Hippocrates.

The facts of the so-called Scythian insanity, as well as the facts lately learned about the Pueblo Indians, are also noteworthy anthropologically, in that atrophy of the testes and genitals in general, and approximation to the female type, physically and mentally, were observed. This is the more remarkable, since, in men who have lost their procreative organs, such a reversal of instinct is quite as unusual as in women, sentatis syntadis, after the natural or artificial climacteric.

B. Hosse-Sexual Feeling as an Abnormal Congenital Manifestation.\(^1\)—The essential feature of this strange manifestation of the sexual life is the want of sexual sensibility for the opposite sex, even to the extent of horror, while sexual inclination and impulse toward the same sex are present. At the same time, the genitals are normally developed, the sexual glands perform their functions properly, and the sexual type is completely differentiated.

Feeling, thought, will, and the whole character, in cases of the complete development of the anomaly, correspond with the peculiar sexual instinct, but not with the sex which the individual represents anatomically and physiologically. This abnormal mode of feeling may not infrequently be recognized in the manner, dress, and calling of the individuals, who may go so far as to yield to an impulse to don the distinctive clothing corresponding with the sexual ville in which they feel themselves to be.

Anthropologically and clinically, this abnormal manifestation presents various degrees of development:—

- Traces of hetero-sexual, with perdominating homosexual, instinct (psycho-sexual hermaphroditism).
- There exists inclination only toward the same sex (homo-sexuality).

<sup>**</sup> Bibliography (busides works mentioned hereafter) Tardies, Des attentats our uneurs, 7 odit., 1979, p. 200.—Hofmann, Lebub. d. gus. Med., S Auff., pp. 173, 850.—Sky, Berne philosophique, 1984, Nr. 1.—Magnas, Annat. med.-psychol., 1885, p. 450.—Skaw and Forsts, formal of Nervous and Mental Bibense, 1885, April.—Bernhaudt, Ber Urminum, Berlin (Voltabachhamitung), 1882.—Chemilier, De Phovesian de Pustinci strust. Forstsand, 1885.—Hing, Gan. Schlem. de médectier et de chirary, 1878, é. Januar.—Tamanna, Berlin speries, 1879, pp. 90-117.—Lembrose, Archiv. de Phichare., 1881.—Charcot et Bagnas. Archiv. de neurologie, 1881, Nr. 7, 171.—Modi. De contaire Sematemphology, Berlin, 1981 (namerona intélographic references).—Chemilier, Archive de Parthropólogie etiminally, vol. 7, No. 17; vol. 6, No. 3.—Resas, "Abertalian du sons générique, "Armains d'applies partique, 1886.—danny, Étude clinique sur la folie héroditaire, 1881...-Benasold, Bar de hópiseues, 1889 and 1887.—Titler, L'anti-int somet chez l'homme et cher les animars, 1889.—Cartier, Los deux promitetions, 1887.—Lacamagne, ari. "Philipatie," in the Benaschpolitque, "Vinett, art. "Pridenatie," in the Domina. mid. et de chirregie.

- The entire mental existence is altered to correspond with the abnormal sexual instinct (effemination and viraginity).
- 4. The form of the body approaches that which corresponds to the abnormal sexual instinct. However, actual transitions to hermaphrodites never occur, but, on the contrary, completely differentiated genitals; so that, just as in all pathological perversions of the sexual life, the cause must be sought in the brain (androgyny and gynandry).

The first definite communications to encerning this enigmatical phenomenon of Nature are made by Caspar (* Ueber Nothrucht und Paderastio,* Caspar's Fierteljohruscheiß, 1852, 1), who, it is true, classes it with pederasty, but makes the pertinent remark that this anomaly is, in most cases, congenital, and, at the same time, to be regarded as a mental hermiphreditism. There exists here an actual disgust of sexual contact with women, while the imagination is filled with beautiful young meaned with statues and pictures of them. It did not escape Casper that in such cases emissio pents in anum (pederasty) is not the rule, but that, by means of other sexual acts (mutual ossuism), sexual satisfaction is sought and obtained.

In his "Cunical Novels" (1863, p. 33) Casper gives the interesting confession of a man showing this perversion of the sexual instinct, and these not hesitate to ascert that, naide from vicious imagination and vice, as a result of over-indulgence in normal sexual intercourse, there are numerous cases in which pedematy has its origin in a remarkable, obscure impulse, which is congenital and inexplicable. About the middle of the "sixties," a certain assessor, Ulriche, himself subject to this perverse instinct, came out and declared, in numerous articles," that the sexual

&lt;sup>3</sup> Dr. Mell, of Bertin, satied my amendon to the fact that in Morter's Magazin f. Estabranguactical-tender, vol. vili, Bertin, 1791, there are references to contrary sexual instinct in man. In fact, there two hiographies of men are reported who manifested as surhadisatic less for persons of their own sex. In the account case, which is particularly subcountry, the patient himself explains his abstraction by the fact that, as a child, he was narrowd only by grown persons, and, as a key of ten or twelve years, sady by his arboxic follows. "This, and the must of association with persons of the apposite sex, in measured the tentand testimation tensor the female sex to be excitally directed to the male sex." I am still quite indifferent to women."

It cannot be determined whether such a case is one of congenital (psycho-sexual termsphedician i) or acquired contemp sexual instinct. The object case of contemp sexual instinct, that has thus far been proved in Germany, is that of a woman who was married to another, and gratified herself sexually with a buthern pringes. A case of view glady, historically and legally interesting, ferrical from the legal proceedings, which took place marry in the eightheast hereiney, is reported by Dr. Miller (Alexandenbad), to Friedmin's Histor f. gev. Medicia, 1991, part w.

<sup>5 &</sup>quot;Vinden, Inciana, Vintieta, Essmatrin, Ara spri, Oladina forces, kritische Pfelle," Leipzig (Omo u. Kadler), 1864-1880.

mental sife was not connected with the bodily sex; that there were male individuals that felt like women toward men ("anima muliebris in corpore virili inclusa"). He called these people "armings," and demanded asthing less than the legal and social recognition of this sexual love of the unings as congenital and, therefore, as right; and the permission of marringe among them. Ulrichs failed, however, to prove that this certainly congenital and paradoxical sexual feeling was physiological, and not pathological.

Griesinger (Archiv f. Psychiatrie, i, p. 651) threw the first my of light on these facts, anthropologically and clinically, by pointing on the marked hereditary taint of the individual, in a case which came under his own observation.

We have Westpial (Archiv f. Psychintric, ii., p. 78) to think for the first systematic consideration of the manifestation in question, which he defined as "congenital reversal of the sexual fading, with renscionsness of the abnormality of the manifestation," and designated with the name, since generally accepted, of contrary sexual nutries. At the same time, he began a series of cases, which, up to this time, has reached ninety-three, those reported in this monograph not being included.

Westphal leaves it undecided as to whether contrary exxual feeling is a symptom of a neuropathic or of a psychogathic condition, or whether

In Semale Indiriduals : (1) Westphal, Asch. f. Peych , 6, p. 25; Gock, op. of., Nr. I., (2) Wise, The Allesist and Neurologist, 1883, January; (4) Cantarano, La Parkistria.

1885, p. 201; (3) Sieteus, sp. off.; obs. 14; (6) Klernat, ep. off.

h in male individuals : (1) Coper, Klin. Nurellen, p. 36 (Lebeb. d. per. Mal., 7) Aud., p. 126); (2) Wortplant, Archiv f. Peyra., E. p. 13; (3) Schutzke, M., 16, p. 220; (4) Schole, Viceteljahrusche, f. ger. Med., star (5) Geck, Arch. f. Psych., v., p. 584 ; (6) Ser. vace, id., vi. p. 484; (7) Westphal, id., vi. 620; (8, 0, 10) Stark, Zeitsch. f. Psychistra, 84, 21; (11) Limin (Casper's Letz's, der ger. Med.; 8 Auft., p. 509), p. 29; (12) Layrand An Santle, Acrost most payelist, 1876, May : (15) Storr, Jahrts f. Psychiatric, 91, 80-85; (14) Kenny, Brain, 1884, Oct.; (18) Charact et Magnan, Arch. de nouvelig., 1802, Nr. 9; (18, [17] Kies, Zeitsche, E. Paych., Ed. 39, p. 394; (19) Babow, Erlenmeyer's Connucts, 1988. Nr. 8; (30) Blumer, Americ Journ. of Insustry, 1882, July 1 (21) Sevage, Journal of Mestal Science, 1884, October ; (22) Schole, Vierbrijskrocht, f. per. Med., N. F. hi 41, Heft, 7; (37) Magness, Ann. rold. psychol., 1885, p. wit; (24) Cherality, De Playment de l'instinct sexusi, Paris, 1985, p. 129; (23) Morselli, La Elforma molina, ir. March; (35) Lempacher, Priedreich's Rutter, 1808, St. 8; (27) Bollander, Alig. Wieser Med. Zellg. 1882; (25) Enter, Erlenmyer's Contralbiant, 1888, Sc. 18; (19, 30, 31, 32) v. Knift, Perchopathia sexualis, il Asril, Beob. 22, 30, 47, 43, 43; (33) Golenba, Rum. Archia f. Psychistrie, Bd. in, H. S (v. Rollie, Zellechr. f. Psychiatric); (in) v. Kraft, Internationales Contralinit f. d. Physics u. Pathologie der Harn-u. Secontorguez, St. 1, H. 1; (35) Canutres, La Patchtures, 1887, v., p. 325; (36) Striver, Exchances offstignes our by animality of Pinistinct account, Partis, 1888, obs. 17; (III-42) Elevants, The Medical Stambard, 1888, 7 races; (43-48) Ratow, Zeitsche, f. blie, Medicia, St. rell, Suppl.; (47-51) c. Kmfl, New Forschungen, Book, I, 5, 4, 5, 8); (55-61) v. Keaff; Psychopath, Sernalls, 2 Auf., Book. 53, 62, 64, 66, 72, 23, 78, 86, 85, 82; (62-65) v. Kraffi, New Pettschoupen, 7 Auf., Book J. 4, 5, 6; c05, 67) Hemewood, Sernal Impotence; (69-71) Starator, Assumative settedlet, 1800, Con. 217, 229, 229, 230; (72) Miller, Printeletr's Sticker, 1801; (20.87) v. Riell, Psychographia Severaths, 6 Avill., Sept. 78, 81, 82, 84, 85, 86, 37, 88, 93, 94, 96, 96, 98, 101, 102.

it may occur as an isolated manifestation. He holds fast to the opinion that the condition is congenital.

From the cases published up to 1877, I have designated this peculiar sexual feeling as a functional sign of degeneration, and as a partial manifestation of a neuro-psychopathic state, in most cases hereditary,—a supposition which has found renewed confirmation in a consideration of additional cases. The following peculiarities may be given as the signs of this neuropsychopathic taint:—

 The sexual life of individuals thus organized manifests itself, as a rule, abnormally early, and thereafter with abnormal power. Not infrequently still other perverse manifestations are presented besides the abnormal method of sexual satisfaction, which in itself is conditioned by the peculiar sexual feeling.

The psychical love manifest in these men is, for the most part, exaggerated and exalted in the same way as their sexual instinct is manifested in consciousness, with a strange and even compelling force.

 By the side of the functional signs of degeneration attending contrary sexual feeling are found other functional, and in many cases anatomical, evidences of degeneration.

4. Neuroses (hysteria, neurosthenia, epileptoid states, etc.) co-exist. Almost always the existence of temperary or lasting neurosthenia may be proved. As a rule, this is constitutional, having its root in congenital conditions. It is awakened and maintained by masturbation or enforced abstinence.

In male individuals, owing to these practices or to congenital disposition, there is finally neurosthenia sexualis, which manifests itself essentially in irritable weakness of the ejaculation centre. Thus it is explained that, in most of the cases, simply embracing and kissing, or even only the sight of the loved person, induce the act of ejaculation. Frequently this is accompanied by an abnormally powerful feeling of lastful pleasure, which may be so intense as to suggest a feeling of magnetic currents passing through the body.

5. In the majority of cases, psychical anomalies (brillian) endowment in art, especially music, poetry, etc., by the side of bad intellectual powers or original eccentricity) are present, which may even go so far as pronounced conditions of mental degeneration (dementia, moral insanity).

In many urnings, either temporarily or permanently, insanity of a degenerative character (pathological emotional states, periodical insanity, paranoia, etc.) makes its appearance.

6. In almost all cases where an examination of the physical and mental peculiarities of the ancestors and blood-relations has been possible, neuroses, psychoses, degenerative signs, etc., have been found in the families.<sup>1</sup>

The depth of congenital contrary feeling is shown by the fact that the lustful dream of the male-loving urning has for its content only male individuals; that of the female-loving woman, only female individuals, with corresponding situations.

The observation of Westphal, that the consciousness of one congenitally defective in sexual desires toward the opposite sex is painfully affected by the impulse toward the same sex, is true in only a number of cases. Indeed, in many instances, the consciousness of the abnormality of the condition is wanting. The majority of urnings are happy in their perverse sexual feeling and impulse, and unhappy only in so far as social and legal barriers stand in the way of the satisfaction of their instinct toward their own sex.

The study of contrary sexual feeling points directly to anomalies of the cerebral organization of the affected individuals. Gley (Recuse philosoph., January, 1884) believes that he is able to solve the riddle by the theory that the individuals have a female brain and male sexual glands; and, further, that pubological brain conditions determine the sexual life, while normally the sexual organs determine the sexual functions of the brain.

One of my patients offered me an interesting theory in

I Turnowsky (sp. ct., p. 36) recents a case which shows that contrary extent follows as a concountract rescriptions with accurate deponention, may also affect the descendants of parents having no america tains. In this instance, how of the parents played a part, with a similar case of School (Vierteljahousta: I ger. Med.), is which the percention of the second desires shoot in reseal relation with an arrest of psychical development, caused by transmitten.

explanation of original contrary sexual instinct. He started with the actual bi-sexuality shown by the fortus anatomically up to a certain age. While normally the organs which attain complete development exclusively condition and determine the sexual type, and the influence of the opposite organs, which remain rudimentary, is vil, it is conceivable that, under the influence of a factor inimical to the normal development of the brain (hereditary taint, etc.), these rudimentary organs likewise exercise an influence which, under certain circumstances, may be even greater than that of the fully developed organs which determine the external sexual type.

In a similar manner, Klernan (Medical Standard, 1888) and G. Frank Lydston (Phila. Med. and Surg. Reporter, 1888) attempt to explain a part of the cases of congenital sexual paranois. Magnau, too (Ann. méd. psychol., 1885, p. 458), writes, in all carnestness, of the brain of a woman in the body of a man, and rice cered.

The attempted explanations of congenital urnings are not less superficial; for instance, that of Ulrichs, who, in his "Memnou," 1868, speaks of an "anima muliebris virili corpore inclusa (virili corport innata)," and thus tries to explain the congenital origin and the female character of his absormal sexual instinct. The idea of the patient, the subject of Case 124, is original. He supposes that when his father begat him he thought to beget a girl, but, instead of a girl, a boy resulted. One of the strangest explanations of congenital contrary sexual feeling is made by Mantegazza (op. cit., p. 106, 1886).

According to this author, in such individuals there exist anatomical anomalies which, by an error of Nature, consist in a distribution to the rectum of the nerves intended for the genitals; so that only in this situation the lustful sensation is aroused which otherwise results from stimulation of the genitals. But how does this author, in other ways so scute, explain the great majority of cases, where pederasty is abborred by those affected with contrary sexual feeling? Besides, Nature never makes such leaps. Mantegazza rests his hypothesis upon the statements of an acquaintance, a celebrated writer, who assured him that he was not sure that he took a greater pleasure in coltus than in deflection! Allowing the correctness of his experience, still it would only prove that the man was sexually abnormal, and that his pleasure in coltus was reduced to a minimum.

<sup>4</sup> This supposition is correlessed by the count of the post-morten of my case (115), where the brain-neight was $150 grammer, and of Case 130, where it was $150 grammer.

An explanation of congenital contrary sexual feeling may perhaps be found in the fact that it represents a peculiarity tred in descendants, but arising in ancestry. The hereditary factor might be an ecquired abnormal inclination for the same sex in the ancestors (v. infro), found fixed as a congenital abnormal manifestation in the descendants. Since, according to experience, acquired physical and mental peculiarities, not simply improvements, but essentially defects, are transmitted, this hypothesis becomes tenable. Since individuals affected with contrary sexual feeling not infrequently beget children, at least, they are not absolutely impotent (women never are), a transmission to descendants is possible.

This supposition is decidedly favored by Case 124, in which the eight-year-old daughter of an individual affected with contrary sexual feeling, practiced mutual unasturbation—a sexual act—at an age which permits the presumption of contrary sexual feeling. No less significant is the communication made to me by a young man of twenty-six, who belongs to the third group of contrary sexuality. He knew with certainty that his father, who had died some years before, was also subject to contrary sexuality. An informant assured me, at least, that he knew many other men with whom his father had sustained "relations." Whether, in the case of the father, it was an acquired or a congenital contrary sexual instinct, and to what group he belonged, could not be ascertained.

The foregoing hypothesis seems the more plausible, when it is considered that the first three degrees of congenital contrary sexual instinct correspond exactly with the developmental stages which are discoverable in the development of the acquired anomaly. One, therefore, feels inclined to designate the various degrees of congenital contrary sexual instinct as various degrees of an hereditarily-induced sexual anomaly, acquired from the progenitors or otherwise developed. Here, too, the law of progressive heredity must be taken into consideration.

The sexual acts, by means of which male urnings seek and find satisfaction, are multifarious. There are individuals, of fine feeling and strength of will, who sometimes satisfy themselves with platonic love, with the risk, however, of becoming nervous (neurasthenic) and insune, as a result of this enforced abstinence. In other instances, for the same reasons which may lead normal individuals to avoid coitus, onanism, fond de miesus, is indulged in.

In urnings with nervous systems congenitally irritable, or injured by onanism (irritable weakness of the ejaculation centre), simple embraces or caresses, with or without contact of the genitals, are sufficient to induce ejaculation and consequent satisfaction. In less irritable individuals, the sexual act consists of manustupration by the loved person, or mutual onanism, or imitation of coitus between the thighs. In urnings morally perverse and potent, quoad erectionem, the sexual desire is satisfied by pederasty,-an act, however, which is repugnant to perverted individuals that are not defective morally, much in the same way as it is to normal men. The statement of untings is remarkable, that the sexual act with persons of the same sex, which is adequate for them, gives them a feeling of great satisfaction and accession of strength, while satisfaction by solitary ontnism, or by enforced coitus with a woman, affects them in an unfavorable way, making them miserable and increasing their neurasthenic symptoms. The manner of satisfaction of the female urning is little known. In one of my cases, the girl masturbated, and during the act felt berself to be a man; and her fincy created a beloved female person. In another case, the act consisted of practicing onanism on the person loved, and fondling ber genitals.

Assor leshicus is presumably not infrequent here, for which an enlarged clitoris or an artificial priapus may be used. As to the frequency' of the occurrence of the anomaly, it is difficult to reach a just conclusion, since those affected with it break from their reserve only very infrequently; and in caminal cases the arning with perversion of sexual instinct is usually classed with the person given to pederasty for simply virious teasons. According to Casper's and Tardieu's, as well as my own, experience, this anomaly is much more frequent than reported cases would lead us to presume.

Ulrichs ("Kritische Pfeile," p. 2, 1880) declares that, on an average, there is one person affected with contrary sexual instinct to every two hundred mature men, or to every eight hundred of the population; and that the percentage among the Magyrs and South Slavs is still greater,—statements which may be regarded as untrustworthy. The subject of one of my cases knows personally, at his home (13,000 inhabitants), fourteen urnings. He further declares that he is acquainted with at least eighty in a city of 60,000 inhabitants. It is to be presumed that this man, otherwise worthy of belief, makes no distinction between the congenital and the acquired anomaly.

Psychical Hermophrodition. —The characteristic mark of this degree of inversion of the sexual instinct is that, by the side of the pronounced sexual instinct and desire for the same sex, a desire toward the opposite sex is present; but the latter is much weaker and is manifested episodically only, while the homo-sexuality is primary, and, in time and intensity, forms the most striking feature of the vita sexualis.

<sup>2</sup> Comp. author's work, <sup>11</sup> Uniter proclementality 2 witterfrom, <sup>12</sup> in the internationality. Contratingent f. d. Physiologie in Pathologie for Harm and Secondargame, 86 5, 80-7 2.

&quot;That investion of the sexual (nation) is infrequent is geored, among other (rings, by the sirrumstance that it is frequently a subject in notele. Cheruiler (qu. nt.) points and in Ferreth Rievalure, brokket the nevels of Rabies, like "In Passion on Desert" (healing of nestiality) and "Surrames" (treating of the love of a woman for a runnels). Didevolve "In Religiouse" (a stray of one given to associations). Ration is "In Vite and Tear of the "Complete States of the Religiouse" (a stray of one given to associations). Ration is "In Vite and Tear of the "Complete States of the Satismation of the Registry. Released Given J. Na Formati" may also be mentioned (new immulated him English). It is interesting that the berriams of these (Lection) sorted appear in the character and olds of the business of a lover of the same ser, and like their love is extensely passionate. Margoret, the recompution immulation of this serial perfection dods not competite writers. This thems is treated, in German Rieminae, in "Televistic described by Riemina Stration," by Energia Grad Station. The added tempers, and be the Riemina Station of the English that published by Petralius at Rose, and the English, and the title Surprises.

The hetero-sexual instinct may be but rudimentary, manifesting itself simply in unconscious (dream) life; or (episodically, at least) it may be powerfully exhibited.

The sexual instinct toward the opposite sex may be strengthened by the exercise of will and self-control; by moral treatment, and possibly by hypnotic suggestion; by improvement of the constitution and the removal of neuroses (neurasthenia); but especially by abstinence from masturbation. However, there is always the danger that homo-sexual feelings, in that they are the most powerful, may become permanent, and lead to enduring and exclusive contrary sexual instinct. This is especially to be feared as a result of the influences of masturbation (just as in acquired inversion of the sexual instinct) and its neurasthenia and consequent exacerbations; and, further, it is to be found as a consequence of unfavorable experiences in sexual intercourse with persons of the opposite sex (defective feeling of pleasure in coitus, failure in coitus on account of weakness of erection and premature ejaculation, infection). On the other hand, it is possible that resthetic and ethical sympathy with persons of the opposite sex may favor the development of heterosexual desires. Thus it happens that the individual, according to the predominance of favorable or unfavorable influences, experiences now hetero-sexual, now homo-sexual, feeling.

It seems to me probable that such hermaphrodites from constitutional taint are not infrequent.\(^1\) Since they attract very little attention socially, and since such secrets of married life are only exceptionally brought to the knowledge of the physician, it is at once apparent why this interesting and practically important transitional group to the group of absolute contrary sexuality, has thus far escaped scientific investigation. Many cases of frigiditas uxoris and mariti may possibly depend upon this anomaly. Sexual intercourse with the opposite sex is, in itself, possible. At any rate, in cases of this degree, no horror sexus alterius exists. Here is a fertile field for the application

A This sides to supported by the statements of an unusuarised arring which Dr. Mali, of Series, bludly communicated to me. He could report a number of cases of his sequentance, in which reserved term at the same time had "relations" with most of medical and moral therapentics (e. infra). The differential diagnosis from acquired contrary sexual instinct may present difficulties; for in such cases, as long as the vestiges of a normal sexual instinct are not absolutely lost, the actual symptoms are the same (v. infra). In the first degree, the sexual satisfaction of homo-sexual impulses consists in passive and mutual onanism and coitus inter femora.

Case 106. Psychical Hermophroditism in a Lady.-Mrs. M., aged 44, exemplifies the fact that an inverted and a normal sexual instinct may be snited in one person, be it in man or woman. The father of this lady was very musical, and very talested as an artist. He took life rasily, and to his extraordinary beauty was added a great admiration for the opposite sex. After several apoplectic attacks, he died demented in an asylum. Pather's brother was nemy-psychopathic, and when a child was a sommarshullst; and all his life he was afflicted with hypercethesia sexuals, Thus, sithough married and the father of married sons, he tried to seduce his nicce, Mrs. M., with whom he was whilly in lave, when she was eighteen years old. Father's father was very eccentric and a distinguished actor. He first studied theology, but, as a result of partiality for the dramatic more, he became an actor and singer. He committed excesses in baceho et venere; was a spenithrift and invurious. He died at forty-nine, of apoplexis cerebri. Mother's father and mather died of inberculosis of the langs.

Mrs. M. was one of eleven children, of whom six are still fiving. Two brothers, who resembled the mother physically, died, at sixteen and twenty, of toberculesis. A brother suffers with laryngest puthisis. Four living sisters and Mrs. M. resemble the 6ther physically, and the eldest is unmarried, very nervous, and shy of people. Two younger sisters are married, bealthy, and have bealthy children. The other is unmarried, and suffers with nervous complaints. Mrs. M. has four children, several of whom are delicate and neuropathic.

The patient can tell nothing of importance concerning her childbood. She learned easily, and was methetically and postically indicat. She was considered a little high-strong, and too much given to notelereading and sentimentality. Her constitution was neuropathic, and she was extremely sensitive to changes of temperature, sometimes having annoying outs ansering as a result of slight droughts. It is remarkable that one day, when she was about ten years old, she thought that her mother no longer loved her; and she put matches in her coffee to make herself really sick, that she might thus excite her mother's love for her.

Puberty began, without difficulty, at the age of eleven. Thereafter the menses were regular. Before the time of puberty sexuality matri fested itself, and, according to the opinion of the patient, its promptings have been abnormally intense all her life. The first feelings and impulses were decidedly inversed. She conceived a passionate but platonic love for a young lady. She wrote verses and souncts to her, and was perfeetly lappy if the could admire "the entrancing clurus" of her godfess in the bath, or steal a glimpse of her neck, shoulders, and bonnet while she was dressing. The wild impalse to touch these physical charms was always overcome. While a young girl, she had actually been in love with Madonuss of Ruphael and Guido Rent. In all kinds of woather she would run after pretty girls and ladies for hours at a time, abutring their beauty, losing no opportunity to please there, offering them bosquets, etc. The patient asserted that, until the age of ninetorn, she was absolutely without a suspicion of a difference of sex; because she had been educated as in a cloister by a very profish aunt, who was an old maid. As a result of this great ignorance, the patient became the victim of a man who was passionately in love with her, and who had coline with her by means of strategers. She became the wife of this man, hore one child, and lived an "eccentric" sexual life with him; She felt perfectly satisfied with married intercourse. After a few years she became a widow. Since then, women have again been the object of her love, primarily, as the patient thinks, from fear of the results of sexual intercourse with a man.

At twenty-seven, second marriage, without love, to a phthiciral frashead. Patient was three times confined, and fulfilled her material duties. Her physical health failed, and in the later years of this married life she had an increasing aversion for her husband, partly due to a sense of his disease, though, at the same time, there was constantly resent un intense desire for sexual indulgence.

Three years after the death of her second husband, the patient discovered the fact that her nine-year-old daughter, by her first husband, was given to masturination, and that she was falling in physical health. The patient read of this vice, and could not overcome the impulse to indulge in the practice, becoming, in consequence, an oranist. She is made to bring herself to give the details of this period of her life. She says that she was frightfully excited sexually, and had to send her disagiters from home to save them from terrible consequences; but the two hops she was able to keep at home.

Patient became neurosthenic ex unsturbatione (spinal irritation, feeling of pressure in head, weariness, back of mental control), and, at times, had dysthymin and painful technic site. Her sexual feeling would be directed at one time to women, at another to men. She was able to restrain herself, and suffered much from abstinence, especially because, on account of her necessitation troubles, she sought to obtain takeful in masturbation, though only in case of great necessity. At the present time, though forty-four years old, and menstranting regularly, she suffers intensely with a passion for a young man whose presence she cannot avoid on account of the exigencies of occupation.

Patient presents nothing remarkable in external appearance. She is gracefully formed, but the muscular system is not strongly developed. Pelvis is, in all respects, that of a female, but the arms and legs are decidedly large and of massuline form. Ludies' shoes do not fit her, but, being opposed to exciting attention, she forces her feet into female sisses, and they are, therefore, much deformed. Genitals normally developed, and present no other abnormality than descent of the merus, with hypertrophy of the vaginal portion. On thorough examination it is seen that the patient is essentially homo-sexual, and that the desire for the opporite sex is but episodical and sensual. Thus, at present, she suffers intensely with sexual desires for every unn with whom she comes in contact, but it is a more refined and higher pleasure for her to imprint a kiss on the soft, round check of a maiden. This pleasure is one she often enjoys, became she is much beloved as the "dear sust" by all the "sweet creatures"; for she voluntarily does them the most various chitalrons favors, always feeling herself at such times as a man.

Case 107. Contrary Sexual Instinct with Saxual Satisfaction in Hetero-Sexual Intercourse.—Mr. Z., aged 26, Hollander, consulted us, in 1838, on account of an anomaly of his sexual feelings, which had become a matter of anxiety to him in connection with an intended marrage. Patient's father was neuropathic, and suffered with nightmare and nighterwors. Grandfather was mentally unsound; father's brother an idiot. Patient's mother and her family were healthy and normal mentally. The patient had four sisters and one brother, the latter being subject to moral meanity. Three sisters are healthy, and living happy married lives.

As a child, the patient was weak, nervous, and subject to night-terrors, like his father; but he never had any severe sickness except coxitis, as a result of which he limps slightly. Sexual impulses were manifested early. At eight, without any teaching, he began to masturbate. From his fourteenth year, election. He was mentally well endowed, and his principal interest was in art and literature. He was always weak muscularly, and had no inclination for boyish aports and later for musty occupotions. He had a certain interest for female toilettes, arnaments, and occupations. From the time of puberty the patient noticed in himself an inexplicable inclination toward male persons. Youths of the lawest classes were especially attractive to him. Cavalrymen especially excited his interest. He experienced a limitful desire to press himself against such individuals from behind. Occasionally, in crowds, it was possible for him to do this; and in such an event an interse feeling of pleasure passed over him. After his twenty-second year, on such occasions, be now and then had an ejaculation. From that time ejaculation occurred when a sympathetic man laid his hand on the policet's thigh. He was now in great anxiety lest be might sometime assault a men sexually.

People of the lower chance, wearing tight, brown treasers, were especially dangerous for him. His greatest pleasure would be: to embrace such a man and press lames of him; but, unfortunitely, the morality of his country slid not allow such a thing. Pederasty seemed disgusting to him.

It gave him great pleasure to gain a sight of the genitals of males. He was always compelled to look at the genitals of every man be met. In circums, thentres, etc., only male performers interested him. Patient has never noticed any inclination for women. He does not avoid them, even dances with them on occasion, but he never feels the slightest sensual excitation under such circumstances.

At the age of twenty-eight the patient was neurasthenic as a result of his excessive masturbation.

Then frequent pollutions in sleep occurred, which weakened him very much. It was only occasionally that he dramed of men when he had pollutions; and never of women. A lastivious dream-pirture (pederasty) had occurred but once. He dreamed of dying-scenes, of being attacked by dogs, etc. After these, as before, he suffered with great libido sexualis. Often there came up before him such inscivious thoughts as gloating over the death of animals in the slaughter-house, or allowing himself to be whipped by boys; but he always overcame such desires, and also the impulse to dress in a military uniform.

In order to core himself of masturbation, and to thoroughly satisfy his libido, he determined to frequent brothels. He first attempted sexual intercourse with a woman when twenty-one, after over-insingence in wine. The beauty of the female form, and female modity in general, made no impression on him. However, he was able to copy the set of coitus, and thereafter he visited brothels regularly for "purposes of health."

From this time he took great pleasure in hearing men tell stories of their sexual relations with the opposite sex.

Ideas of fageliation would also come to him while in a brothel, but the retention of such fancies was not essential for the performance of coltus. He considered sexual intercourse with prostitutes only a remedy against the desire for musturbation and men,—a kind of safety-valve to present compromising himself with some man.

The patient now wishes to marry, but fears not only that he could have no love for a decent woman, but also that he might be impotent for intersourse with one. Hence his thought and need of medical advice.

The patient is very intelligent, and is, in all respects, of musculine appearance. In dress and manner he presents nothing that would attract attention. Guit, voice, and skeleton,—the pelvis especially,—musculine in character. Genizals of normal development. The normal growth of heir for a mule is abundant. The patient's relatives and friends have not the alightest suspicion of his sexual anumalies. In his inverted sexual functes, he has never fait himself in the rôle of a woman toward a man. For some years he has been entirely free from negreethenic troubles.

The question as to whother be considered binnell's subject of one genital inversion of sexual method he could not sexual. It seems probable that there was a congenital weak inclination for the opposits sex, with a greater one for the same sex, which, as a result of early magazintion in consequence of the homo-sexual instinct, was still more weak-smed, but not reduced to not. With the assention of masterbatios, the feeling for women became in a measure more natural, but only in a coarsely sensual way.

Since the patient explained that, for reasons of family and business, it was necessary for him to marry, it was impossible to avoid this deligate question.

Fortunately, the patient limited his inquiries to the question in to his rirility as a husband; and it was necessary to reply that he was virile, and that he would probably be so in conjugal intercourse with the wike of his choice,—at least, if she were to be in mound sympathy with him; besides, that he could at all times improve his power by exercising his inexpiration in the right direction.

The main thing was to strengthen the sexual belimition for the opposite sex, which was defective, but not absolutely wanting. This could be done by avoiding and opposing all homo-sexual feelings and impulses, possibly with the help of the artificial inhibitory influences of hypnotic suggestion (removal of homo-sexual desires by suggestion); by the excitation and exercise of normal sexual desires and impulses; by complete abstinence from maxturbation, and eradication of the remnants of the neurosthenic condition of the nervous system by means of hydro therapy, and possibly general faradization.

I am indebted to a physician, aged thirty, for the following autobiography, which in another respect is noteworthy:—

Case 148. Mental Hermaphrodition: Abortice Contrary Serval Instinct.—"In my accessing I am somewhat predisposed bereditarily. My grandfather on my fither's side was a high-liver and a speculator. My father was a man of character, but for more than thirty years he has suffered with folia circulaire, without, however, being much hindered by it in business. My mether, like her father before her, suffers with stanscarding attacks. My mether's father and brother are said to have been sexually hypermethetic. My only sister, about nine years older than myself, was twice subject to attacks of columpses, and during patenty was religiously exalted, and probably also sexually hypermethetic. During many yours she had to suffer with a severe hysterical nearosis, but she is now completely well.

"As an only son, and born late, I was the apple of my mother's eye; and I have ber indefinigable care to themk that I survived chibitred, after having passed through all the possible diseases of children (hydroosphalus, measles, crosp, small-pox, and, at thirteen, chronic intestinal estarrh that lasted a year). My mother, being herself very religious, raised me, without spoiling me, in a religious way, and implanted in me, as the guiding moral principle, an unyielding devotion to duty, which was further carried to an extreme in me by a teacher whom I still call a friend. Owing to my delicate health, my childhood, in greater part, was spent in bed; and I was thus given to quiet occupations, especially reading; and thus as a boy I came to be if not Mose-prematers at least. As early as eight or nine the parts of books that excited one most were those where injuries or operations that had to be endured ly beautiful girls or ladies, were described. Thus I was thrown into great excitement by a story in which was pictured a maiden that had run a thorn into her foot, with a boy taking it out for her. Indeed, every time that I looked upon this picture, which was in nowise insrivious, I had an erection. Whenever possible, I went to see chickens killed; and if I had missed that, I looked at the spots of idool, and stroked the warm bodies of the birds, with pleasurable shudders. I would emphasize the fact that I have always been a great lover of anireals, and have felt disgust and pity while killing larger animals, and even in the viviscotion of frogs.

"The killing of chickens is still a great sexual stimulus for me, and especially holding them, during which I have polylization of the heart and precordial oppression. It is of interest that my father had a passion for hinding together the hands of girls and young women.

"I think that another of my sexual absormalities is attributable to this strain of crucity. As I shall clearly describe later, one of my faverite games was that of an improvised doll theatre, where I prescribed the justs of my companions. Almost always it was a young gut who, at the command of her pape, whom I represented, had to have a gainful operation done on her foot. The more the girl cried, the more satisfaction I had. How I came to hit upon the foot as the constant object of operation will be seen from the following: When a very young boy, I happened to see my eldest sister change her stockings. When she hastily hid her feet, my attention was attracted, and immediately the sight of her have feet to the ankles came to be the ideal of my longing. Naturally, this made my sister very careful; and thus there was occasioned a constant quarrel, which, on my part, was kept up with all the wifes of curring and flattery, and with oven explosions of anger, until my seventeenth year. In other respects my sister was very indifferent. Indeed, for kins is repugnant to me. Faute de mirror, I musto use of the feet of servants; musculine feet had no effect on me. My greatest desire would have been to cut the nails, or, air wain werbo, the corus, on the beautiful fact of a women. My justful dreams were concerned with these things. Indeed, I applied myself to the study of melicine really in the expectation of gaining an opportunity to satisfy my desires, or care them.

Thank God, I attained the latter. After undertaking the first dissection of the lower extremity of a female, this unhappy desire was removed from me. I was unhappy because I was always deeply askamed of this impulse. I think I may spare further details concerning it, since this peculiar enthusiasm, which even inspired me to write reeses, has been sufficiently described by others.

"Now, concerning the last phase of my sexual errors : I was about thirteen, and had just begun to mature, when a school-mate, who happened to be our guest, teased me one night by kicking me with his bare feet under the covers. I seized his foot, and immediately become greatly excited, and had a pollution after it, the first that I had. The boy was peculiarly girlish in form, and was also mentally efferming to. Too, saother comrade who had very small and delicate hands and feet, whom I once saw in a hath, caused unusual excilement in me. I thought it a great piece of good fortune to be in bed with either of these, though any nearer sexual intercourse than embeacing them never came into my mind. Moreover, I always thrust such thoughts uside with aversion, Some years later, when about sixteen or sighteen, I made the sequinisuce of two other boys that awakened my sexual feeling. When I played with either of these, I immediately laid an erection. Both were very energetic and lively, but delicately formed and child-like. At the occurrence of puberty I lost interest in both of them, though a warm friendship was preserved. I should never have allowed myself to have induced in vicious practices with them.

"When I went to the University, I forgot completely these errors of my libble accusalis, and from principle I kept from sexual intercourse until I was twenty-four, in spite of the contempt of my companions. When pollutions became too frequent, and I began to fear corebral near rathenia or abstinctia, I gave myself up to normal sexual indefence, though somewhat mechanically; and it was, of course, very beneficial to use.

"The especial field of work to which I have devoted myself is respensible for the fact that I am almost impotent with puellis publicle, and also for the fact that the naked form of a woman disgusts rather than excites me. The act always estisfies me the most, if, during it, I can keep the vision of the face before me; but since, on the other hand, the idea that the girl near me is enjoyed by another is unbearable, for years I have found it absolutely necessary for my mental comfort, in spite of the pecuniary sacrifier, to keep a mistress, and, indeed, a virgin. Otherwise the most terrible jealansy made me absolutely incapable of work. I must also mention that, at thirteen, I fell is love platonically for the first time; and since then I have often pixel in chaste love. What distinguishes my case from all others is the fact that I have never core musturbated in my life.

- Some weeks ago, in sicep, I was frightened by a dream of a naked boy, from which I awake with an erection. In conclusion, I venture to undertake the difficult task of describing my present condition : Medium tright, pracefully formed. Shall delichecephalic, with prominence in the occipital region; or ounference, 39 centimetres; frontal prominence marked; glande somewhat neuropathic; pupils medium; teeth very defective; museulature strong and tense; obundant knir, blonds. Varicoccle on the left side; frenshim too abort, which hindered me in coltus. I severed it myself three years ago. Since then ejaculation is retarded, and pleasurable feeling much diminished. Temperament cholerie. Quick of comprehension; good at drawing conclusions; suergetic; for one hereditarily predisposed, very persevering. I learn imaginges easily, and have a good ear for music, but otherwise I have no takent for the arts. I am always ambitious to do my duty, but I am constantly troubled with ted un vice, and only kept from attempts at suicide by my religion and the thought of my mother. Otherwise I am a typical candidate for suicide. I am ambitious, jenlous, have a fear of purslysis; left-handed. I am filled with socialistic ideas. I like adventures, and I am courageous. I have decided never to marry."

Case 109. Psychical Bermsphroditism. Autobiography.—"I was born in 1868. The families of both my parents are healthy; at my rate, mental disease has never occurred in them. My father was a merchant; he is now sixty-five years old, and for years has been nervous and especially inclined to be melaneholic. Before his marriage, my father is said to have lived fast. My mother in healthy, though not very strong. There are two other healthy children.

"I was very early developed sexually, and in my fourteenth year was so much troubled by pollutions that I was frightened. Under wint circumstances they occurred, particularly the nature of the dreams that were connected with them, I am no longer able to state. The fact is, that for years I have only felt myself drawn toward men sexually; and, with every effort and a territor struggle, I am still anable to overcome this minutural impulse that is so repugnant to me. It is said that I had many severe illnesses in my childhood, and that my life was often despaired of. To this was probably due the fact that I was spoiled and made very delicate. I was always much in the house, preferred to play with dolls rather than with soldiers, and I liked to play quietly in the house better than to play noisily in the streets. I entered the Gymensinm at the age of ten. Though I was lazy, I was smoon the best scholars; for I learned very easily, and was the favorite of my teacher. From my earliest childhood (seventh year), I took pleasure in little girls. I remember that, even until my thirtoeath year, I had formal loveaffairs with them, and was jealous of those who nesociated with them; that I took pleasure in looking under the petticonts of my sister's friends and the servents; and that I had evertions when touching the persons of my female playmates. I can however, recall with certainty that boys attracted and excited me sexually just as early and powerfully. I always took great delight in reading and in the theatre. I had a doll-theatre, with which I played by preference. I know whole pieces by heart, and copied the actors I saw, taking especially the female parts, in which I was delighted to put on female attire.

"As my sexual life became more pronounced, my inclination for toys won the upper hand. I fell completely in love with my communions, and had justiful feeling if one of them who pleased me toucked my body. I became very sky, and refused to take gymmestic and swimming lessons. I thought I was different from my compules, and did not like to undress before them. I liked to look at the penes of my companions, and easily had erections. I masturbated but once, and that is my worth. When a friend told me that one could have pleasure without women, I likewise tried it; but I found no pleasure in it. At that time, also, a book fell in my hands which warned against the effects of countiest, After that one trial I never did it again. In my fourteenth or fifteenth year, I made the sequinistance of two younges boys who excited me sexunily to the highest degree. I was especially in love with one of them. I became sexually excited in his presence, and was restless when I did not have him near me. I was jenlous of those who associated with him, and embarrassed in his presence. He had no suspicion of my condition. I felt very unhappy, and often wept gladly, feeling then relieved. Yet I could not understand this feeling, and always felt its irregularity. I was also especially unlimppy because my ability to work disappeared all at once. I, who before had learned with case, suddenly had difficulty; my thoughts were never on the subject. Only by straining every nerve could I get anything through my head. I always had to study aloud, in order to keep my attention on the matter in hand. My memory, which was previously exestient, often left me in the lanch. Nevertheless, I continued to be a good scholar, and I still pass for a talented man; but I have terrible difficulty in learning anything. I overted all my energy to free myself from this and condition. Daily I went swimming; I peacticed turning, rode much, and practiced feecing, in all of which I enjoyed myself very much. I still like to be on a horse's back, though I know nothing about horses, and have no particular talent for physical exercises. I was never absent from a drinking-party, and I smoked. I was much liked. In co/es I associated much with waitresses, and likely to amuse myself with them, without, however, being sexually excited by them. Among my friends and tenchers, I passed for a man who was much with women, and spoiled by them. Unfortunately, this was not true.

"At the age of nineteen I went to the University. My first scheeter was spent at the University of B., and it is still terrible to recall it. My sexual appetite powerfully excited me, and at night, for hours at a time, I ran about looking for men, especially when I was intexicated.

The next morning I would be crazy about myself. Fortunately, I found no one. In the second semester, I went to M. This was my happiest time. I had pleasent friends, and, for a wonder, took pleasure in women, and was very happy about it. I had a love-affair with a young girl of spoiled claracter, with whom I spent wild nights. I was extraordinarily visite. I, who had formerly been chaste, also associated with other women, as never before. I felt fresh and well after coitss. I was not characed so much by the female figure, which was never beautiful to me, so by-I know not wint. In abort, I know women whose torch immsdistely induced erection. This joy and state of delight did not last long. I was so foolish as to take rooms with a friend. We laid one sleeping-room. My friend was very talented and amiable, and a favorite with women; and it was by these chameteristics that he at first so strongly attracted me. In fact, I love only highly-educated men; useducated, powerful persons are able to excite me intensely only for the moment, and cannot retain my affectious. I soon fell in love with my friend. Then come the terrible time that destroyed my health. I sleet In the same room with my friend, and had to see him undress daily; sothat it required all my strength to keep from betraying myself. I became servous, eried easily, and was jealous of those who associated with my friend. I still associated with women; but it was only with difficulty that I could perform coitus, which, like woman, was repagnant to me. The same women who had excited me intensely, so longer had any effect. on me. I followed my friend to W., where he met as earlier friend, with whom he associated. I became jealous and sick with love and longing. At the same time, I associated with women again, but seldom, and orde with difficulty, indulged in coitus. I became terribly depressed and almost insure. Work was out of the question. I led a feelish, wild life, and spent a great amount of money, almost throwing it away. Then, after six weeks of it, I broke down, and land to visit a water-core. where I spent many months. There I came to myself again, and soon became much liked; for I can be very gay, and I take great pleasure in the society of educated ladies. In conversation, I profer married women to rounger girls; I am also very gay in the society of gentlemen at the beentable and howling alley.

"At this sanitarium I met a man of twenty-nine, who was apparently constituted like myself. The follow forced himself upon me, and wanted to embrace and kies me; but he was very repagaint to me, though he excited me, and his touch caused exection, and even ejuculation. One evening he get me to perform mutual omnism. After it I spent a most frightful, sleepless night; I was terribly disgusted with the whole affair, and thought I should never do such a thing with a man again. All day long I could get so rest. It was terrible to me that, in spite of this, and against my will, this man so excited me sexually; yet, on the other hand, it gave me satisfaction that he was in love with me, and apparently had to go through struggles similar to my earlier ones. From that time I was successful in keeping him away from me.

"I again went to various Universities, and also visited many watercures, with temporary, but never permanent, benefit. I fell in love, too, with many friends, but never so deeply as with the friend at M. I as longer had sexual intercourse, neither with women—I was incapable of it—nor with men; for I had no opportunity for it with the latter, and I forced myself to avoid it. I still often mex my friend of M.; we are as good friends as ever, and, much to my delight, he no longer excites us. It is usually so; when for a long time I have not seen a person who excites me, the sexual influence disappears.

"I passed my examinations with distinction. During the last year before they took place, when I was twenty-three, I began to practice mosturbation; for I could find no other way in which to gratify my burdensome sexual appetite. Still, I did it very infrequently; for after it I was always disgusted, and spent a sleepless night. But when I have drunk much, I lose all strength; and then I run about for hours, serking men, and fimily come to omnism, to awake the next day with a shift head and a horror of myself, and go about all day in a melancholy state. As long as I have control of myself, I use all my strength to combat my nature. It is terrible when one can have no pleasure in associating with friends, and every erect soldier or butcher-bay makes one tremble and throb. It is frightful when night comes, and I watch at the window for some one to urinate against a wall across the way, and give me an opportunity to see his genitals. These thoughts are terrible; and besides, there is the consciousness of the immorality and criminality of my state of mind and my longing. I have a repugnance for myself that I cannot describe. I consider my condition abnormal; I cannot think that it is congenited, but I believe that the impulse was bred in me by finity education. My suffering makes me reckless and egotistical; it takes away all kindness of disposition, and makes me carriess about my family. I am moody, and often almost insure; often I am so depressed that I know not what to do, and then am easily moved to tears. And yet I have a horror of sexual intercourse with men. One evening when I came from a drinking-party, drunk and excited and in a half-conerious state, and, fall of desire, was wandering about, I met a young man, who got me to perform nutual masturbation. Though he excited me, after the act I was beside myself. To-day, when I go by the place, I am overcome with horror; and intely, when riding by it, without any cause, I fell from my gentle horse, that I know so well -I was so overcome by the memory of my unworthy deed.

I love family life and children, and social intercourse; and, with my position in society, I am suited to have a family. But I must give up all that; and yet, I cannot abandon hope of cure. And so I vacilate between hopeful guicty and frightful hopefulness, and neglect business.

and family. Indeed, I do not sak that I may marry and found a family I wish only to overcome the terrible inclination for the mule sex; only to associate quietly with my friends, and to learn to respect myself again.

"No one has any suspicion of my condition; I poss rather for a great road,—a reputation I try to maintain. I often try to have relations with girls, for which I often have opportunity. I have known many who loved me, and who would have sacrificed their bonor for me; but I have no love to offer them, and nothing sexual to give. And yet I can love a man. I am excited only by young men,—i.e., aged from seventeen to twenty-five, without full beards, and preferably with no beards at all. I can love only those that are colorated, respectable, and amiable. I am, in short, very prond, and quick; I am also entimainstic, and easily led by persons who please me. These I try to imitate, but I am very sensitive with them, and easily hurt. I put much value on appearances, love beautiful furniture and dress, and assume a distinguished manner and slegant address. I am unknopy in that my neurospheric condition keeps me from doing and learning what I should like."

Last fall I made the patient's acquaintance. He is destitute of degenerative signs, and of perfectly masculine appearance, even though he is delicately formed and slender. Genitals perfectly normal. Appearance distinguished, with nothing striking. He is much troubled about his sexual perversion, and wishes to be freed from it at any price. In spite of the greatest effort on the part of both physician and potient, only a slight degree of hypnosis, insufficient for suggestive treatment, could be induced.

"I was four years old when my scausi appetite awake. A man between twenty and thirty years old, who played with us children, and took us in his arms, excited in me the desire to embrace and hiss him passionately. This desire for senseal kissing on the mosth is characteristic of me, and it still forms the chief charm of my sexual gratification.

"I experienced a similar excitation in about my ninth year. A man who was ngly and dirty, and had a red beard, likewise excited in we this desire for him. Here was nonifested, for the first time, a characteristic pseulinr to me, which is still present,—i.e., the peculiar stimulus which coarseness—the filthiness of a person in dress and conduct—is to my senses at times.

"While in the Gymnasium, from my eleventh to my fifteenth year, I was affected with a passion for a contrade. In this case, it was also my greatest pleasure to embrace him, and kiss him on the mouth. I was often seized with a desire for him as intense as that I now have for persons I love. I think, however, that I first had erections in my thirteenth year. During these years, as I have said, I had only the desire to embrace and kies; supplies vidends vel tangends allowant genitalis miniplane deerat. I was a perfectly innocent, naise boy, and, until my lifteenth year, dist not know the meaning of an erection; indeed, I never once ventured to kies the beloved person; for I felt that it would be sloing something strange. I felt no desire to musturbate, and also had the good fortune not to be seduced to it by older committees. I have never yet unstarbated; I feel a certain reprogramme for it.

"In my fourteenth and afternth years I was seized with a passion for several young persons, some of whom still attract me. Thus I was very much in towe with a boy with whom I had never species. If was even a delight to meet him on the street.

"That my passions were of a sensual nature is shown by the fact that, when I pressed and careased the hands of those I loved, I had powerful erections. But it has always been my greatest pleasure amplicati at on osculari; I desired nothing else.

"I did not know that what I experienced was sexual love; I only said to myself that it was impossible that I alone felt such stimuli.

"Until my afteenth year a woman had never excited me; but one evening, when I was alone with our servant-girl in a room, I experienced the same desire that I had for many boys. At first I played with her; and, when I found that she liked to be kissed, I covered her with kisses. I felt such seasonal pleasure in it as I now seldom experience. Mosta to month, we kissed each other, and after about ten minutes ejaculation securred. Thus I gratified myself two or three times a week. I assu began a similar relation with our cook, and with other servant-girls. Ejaculation always took place after kisking for about ten minutes.

"In the meantime, I had taken descing lessons. There I was first charmed by a nice girl; but this love soon disappeared, and I fell in love with another girl, with whom I never become acquainted, but at the sight of whom I felt an attraction like that of boys, and unlike the purely brutal passion I felt for other girls. At this time my impalse for girls was at its some; I was pleased by about an equal number of girls and boys. As mentioned above, I gratified my seasonity by kinding the servant-girl and inducing ejacuintion. Thus I spent the time from my sixtsenth to my eighteenth year. The departure of the servant depriced me of opportunity.

"Then came two or three years during which I had to give up sexual pleasure. In general, girls pleased me loss; and, too, now that I had grown older, I was astramed to surrender myself to the servant-girls.

"It was not possible for me to obtain a mistress; for, notwitestanding my years, I was carefully watched by my parents, and associated but little with young mur, and thus had but little independence. With the dissinution in the desire for women, the attractiveness of youths increased.

"Since I had had, since my sixteenth year, frequent pollutions at night with dreams, in part of women and in part of men, which weakqued and depressed me exceedingly, I desired to make an end of them by means of normal soitus. But scruples and the belief that prostitutes would have no affect on me, kept me from the brothel until my twentyfirst year. For two or three years I went through a daily struggle (if there had been male houses of prostitution, no scruples would have hindered me). Finally I visited a brothel. I could not even induce erection; for one reason because the girl, though she was unusually fresh and postty for a prostitute, did not affect me; but really because she would not kiss me on the mouth. I was very much depressed, and thought I was impotent. Three weeks afterward I visited another prostitute, and she immediately induced erection by her kiss. She was erect and had thick lips, and was much more seasonl than the first one. After only three minutes of simple kissing, mouth to mouth, ejecalation was induced,-of course, sate portam. Thus it was only after I and visited prostitutes about seven times that I was niccessful in cottes.

"At one time I would have no erection at all, because the girl made no impression on me; again I would ejeculate permaturely. The first times I was reloctant penem introducers; and, too, even after I was successful in normal rollins, I found no pleasure in it. Seasond satisfaction comes with kissing on the month; for me this is the principal thing, coltus serving only as something secondary to embracing. Coltus, no matter how much the woman might charm me, would be no indifferent matter without kissing; indeed, spection disappears, or does not occur at all, when the woman will not kiss on the month. Yet, I cannot kiss every woman, but only such as have faces pleasing to me; a prostitute, the sight of whom is repregnant to me, with any amount of kissing, which then only disgusts me, cannot excite me.

"Thus, during the last four years, I have visited brothols about every ten days or two weeks. Only seldom does cottus fail; for I have learned my peculiarities, and in the choice of a prostitute know homediately whether she will excite me or have no effect. Of late, however, it has again happened that I thought the woman would stimulate me, and yet no erection occurred. This happened when, the day before, I had to represe too foreibly the desire for men.

"At first, when I went to brothels, the sensual pleasure was very slight; only a very few times did I have true footful feeling (as in kinning previously). Now, on the contrary, for the most part I experience sensual pleasure. The lower houses have a particular clarm for mo; for of late the coarseness of the women, the dark entrance, the yellow light of the imps, and all the surroundings, have a peculiar clarm for me; probably because my sensuality is unconsciously excited by meeting soldiers, who frequent such places, and who at the same time lead a certain charm to the women. If I but find a woman whose face attracts me, I can have intense instful pleasure. Resides by prostitutes, my desire can be excited by peasant-grie, servent-girls, working-women, and girls of the lower classes,—in general, by these in common dress. But checks, thick lips, and erect forms please me particularly. I am also lately indifferent to respectable women and young ladies.

"My pollutions are usually without justful pleasure, and often occur with dreams of men, but very selfous—almost never—with dreams of women. As is shown by the last circumstance, in spite of regular coites, my desire is still for young men. Indeed, I may say that it has only increased, and that very markedly. Though immediately after coites the girls have no charm for me, yet the kies of a pleasing woman could immediately indeed erection again. For the first few days after rooms.

young men seen the most attractive to me.

"Sexual congress with women does not satisfy all my sexual desire. I have skys when I frequently knye erections with an interne desire for young men; then come quieter days, with moments of complete indifference for women and latent desire for men. On the other land, too great seasons rest unless me melancholy; viz., when such rest follows moments of repressed excitement. Only, then, when the thought of beloved youths again courses erection, do I feel light-learned again. Then the rest changes to interne nervousness; I feel depressed, and sometimes have heafacles (after repressed erection). This nervousness often increases to ungovernable restlessness, which I then seek to overcome by coites.

"Last year an essential change took place in my sexual life, when I dured to enjoy male love for the first time. In spite of pleasurable coits with women (more correctly, pleasurable kinning with resultant ejaculation), my desire for young men gave me no pence. I determined to go to a bratted much frequested by soldiers, and, in extremity, to buy a soldier for my-self. I had the good luck to next immediately one like my-self, who, notwithstanding his much lower station, in character and balaxior was not innvertily of me. What I experienced (and still experience) with this young man is something different from what I feel with women. The sensoral pleasure is not greater their with prostitutes, whose kesses and embraces excite me extraordinarily; but I can experience bratfal pleasure with him at any time, and for him I have a feeling that is wanting for women. Unfortunately, I have been able to embrace and him turn only about eight times.

"Though we have been separated many months, he having been sent to a parrison in Hangary, we have not forgotten each other, and keep up a regular correspondence. In order to possess him, I dured to go to a brothel and there embrace him, being in danger of being betraved. "Early in our acquaintance there came a time when I heard acthing more of him; for he did not think he could trust me. During these weeks I endered anxiety and pain that brought me into a state of coperation and anxiens restlessness, such as I had never before experienced. Scarcely to have found a lover and then to be compelled to lase him, seemed the greatest minfortune to me. When, thanks to my efforts, we met again, my joy was unbounded; indeed, I was so excited that, is his embrace again for the first time, in spite of my sensual last, I could not induce ejaculation.

"Usus sexualis in osculis et amplexionibus solis constitit, pene mee indere at licebut (while the touch on it of a woman's hand is mendurable to me, and I never allow it). It is also to be soted that, in the company of my lover, I immediately have an erection; the pressure of his hand, or even his look, is sufficient. Evenings, for hours at a time. I have gone about with him, never tiring of his society for a moment, despite his inferior station. With him I feel happy, and the sexual entiafaction is merely the crowning of our love. Although I had finally found the man like myself, whom I had so long sought, and I could at last enjoy male love, yet I have not become insensitive to women; and I visit brothels when I am too socily troubled by desire. I had heped to be able to spend this winter in the city where my lover is; but this is, unfortunately, impossible, and I am now forced to be separated from him for an indefinite period. Nevertheless, we study toy to see each other, if only for a short time, sud only once or twice a year; at least, I hope that in the future we may again be together for a longer time. Thus, for this winter, I am again compelled to be without a friend like myself. I had, indeed, resolved, on account of the danger of discovery. never to try to find another urning; but this is impossible. Sexual intercourse with women does not satisfy me, and my desire for young men constantly increases. I am often afraid of myself; afraid that, in asking all prostitutes, as I do, whether they know others like me, I might be discovered. Yet I cannot keep from seeking a youth like provide; indeed, I know that in case of necessity I shall buy a soldier, though I know perfectly well the penalty meted out to one enight in such circumstances.

"I can no longer do without male love; without it I should always be out of harmony with myself. My ideal would be to be associated with a number like myself; but I should be satisfied if I could have investrained intercourse with one lover. I could easily dispense with women, if I had regular male satisfaction; but I think that at long intervals I should embrace a woman for the sake of sariety, as my nature is absolutely hermophroditic in a psycho-sexual sense (women I can only desire sensually, but I can love and sensually desire young men). If there were marriage between men, I think I should not avoid a life-long union; while courrings with a woman seems to me something impossible.

For, in the first place, though the women clurred me, the charm would soon be lost in regular intercourse, and then all sexual indulgence, if not impossible, would certainly be devoid of pleasure for me; and, in the second place, true love for the wife would be wanting—the attraction that I feel with young men I love, and which makes the intercourse that is not simply sensual seem desirable to me. The constant association with a youth physically pleasing and in mental harmony with me, and who could understand all my feelings and share my intellectual opinions and desires, would, it seems to me, be the greatest happiness.

"The young men who please me must be between eighteen sol twenty-eight. As I have grown obler, the limit of age in those pleasing to me has increased; otherwise, I am pleased with the most various forms. The principal role, if not the exclusive one, is played by the face, Bloudes excite me more than dark persons; they must have no beard, but merely a small moustocke that is not too thick, or nose at all. As for the rest, the only thing I can say is, that certain kinds of faces please ms. Faces with large, straight noses are excluded, as are also pale checks; but there are exceptions. I regard soldiers with favor, and many please me when in uniform who do not affect me when in civil dress. Just as in women certain ordinary articles of dress (like lightcolored jackets) please me, so the military costume attracts me. To go to dance-halls-usually beer-halls-where there are many soldiers, and mix with the crowd of soldiers and hove that please me, and try to get a kiss and embrace, this mingling with them would, of course, he as excitant only of sensuality; intellectually and socially, everything common in speech and conduct is repugnant to me.

"With young men of higher position, my sensual desire is less prominent.

"Went I have said of the attractiveness of certain kinds of dress is not to be understood in the sense that they attract me in themselves. This charm only means that the dress may help to strengthen or make prominent the attraction exerted by the face, when, perhaps, the same face in itself would not attract me to the same extent. I may say the same thing, though with a different meaning, of the odor of lighted rigars. In indifferent persons the odor of cigars is rather repagnent then pleasing to me, but exciting in those sexually attractive. The loss of a prostitute smelling of eigen-smoke, affords greater pleasure (because, even though in part inconsciously, I am reminded of the kies of a man) Therefore, I took pleasure in kissing my lover just after he had smoked (It is to be noted that I myself have never smoked a eight or eightetic, and here never even tried to smoke.) I am tall and thing my face is mescaline, my eyes are restless; and in my whole form I often have comething girlish. My health leaves much to be desired. It is much influenced by my sexual anomaly. As previously mentioned, I am very nervous, and I often have paraxysms of commutaments. At times, I also have terrible depression and melancholia, when I see the difficulty of gratification corresponding with my male-loving nature; and when I am greatly excited asxually, and have overcome the desire, owing to impossibility of male gratification. In such conditions, often the depression is associated with absolute tack of sexual desire. In work I am industrious, but often too quick; for I am inclined to work too rapidly and violently. I have a lively interest in set and literature. Among posts and writers of fiction, I prefer, for the most part, those who describs refined feelings, peculiar passions, and far-fetched impressions; an artificial or hyper-artificial style pleases mr. Likewise in music, it is the nervous, exciting music of a Chopin, a Schumann, a Schulert, or a Wagner, etc., that is in most perfect harmony with ms. Everything in art that is not only original, but licensee, attracts me.

"I do not like physical exercise, and do not practice it.

"In character I am kind and compassionate; and, though I have much to softer with my anomaly, I am not unlappy because I love young men, but because the satisfaction of such love is runsidered improper, and because I cannot gratify it without restmint. I cannot regard male love as a vice, though I can well understand who it is considered victors. But, since this love is regarded us criminal, in gratifying it I am in harmony with myself, but not with our age of the world; and, therefore, I must, necessarily, he somewhat depressed; the more, since I have a frank character that hates a lie. The pain of laying always to lide it all in myself has induced me to confess my anomaly to a few friends, of whose silence and appreciation I am confident. Neverthriess, my situation often seems sad. On secount of the difficulty of gratification and the general abhorrence of male love, I am often a little proud that I have such anomalous feelings. Of course, I shall never marry. This does not seem any misfortune, even though I love family life, and have thus far lived only with my parents. I live in the hope. that later I shall have a lover; I must have one; without one, the future. scens dark and burren, and all the ambitious usually cherished-honor, position, etc. seem empty and unattractive. If I should not have this hope fulfilled, I know I shall be mable to long devote myself to my business with pleasure, and I shall soon be in a condition to socrifice everything to obtain male love. I no longer have any moral scruples on account of my anomalous inclination; I have, in fact, never been troubled because I felt attracted to boys. I am much more inclined to judge morality and immorality in accordance with my feelings than in accordance with fixed principles; for I have always been given to skepticism, and have never yet studied out a fixed belief for myself. As yet, only what injures others seems to me to be evil and immoral, and that that I would not have inflicted on myself; and, in this direction, I may say that I try to infrince on the rights of others as little as possible, and that I am capable of great indignation at injustice inflicted on another. But, why love of men should be something immoral, I cannot understand; purposeless activity of the sexual instinct (if the immoral is to be seen in all that is meters and ununional) is also found in intercourse with prostitutes, and even in marriage where means to prevent conception are used; and it seems to me that the sexual intercourse of men must be placed on the same level with all sexual congress that has not procession as an end. But that only sexual gratification that has this parpose is moral, seems to me to be questionable. Certainly, sexual satisfaction that is not directed to procreation is not contrary to nature; and, whether it has not other purposes unknown to us, is uncertain; and, even if it were purposeless, it would not necessarily be despirable (it is not certain that the measure of a moral art is its usefulness).

"I am very cortain that present prejudice will disappear, and that when once such individuals experience male-love, the right of surestricted love will be scknowledged. For the possibility of such recognition one need but recall the Greeks and their friendships, which were nothing has sexual love; and one has only to think that, despite such unantural vice, practiced by their greatest men in intellectual and restlectic matters, the Greeks are still regarded as an unattainable example, and held up for imitation.

"I have already thought of having my anomaly sured by hypnotism. If it were to be of any use, which I doubt, yet I should certainly desire to be assured of a lasting love for women. For even though I assured satisfy myself with men, yet I perfer to feel this capability of indefinate lust and love, even ungratified, to being absolutely without feeling. Thus I still have the hope that I shall find opportunity to satisfy the love I desire, the love that would make me happy; and I should not prefer the suggestive removal of homo-sexual feelings, without the simultaneous substitution of a hetero-sexual equivalent, to my present condition. Finally, I should like to add, in contrast with the statements of semings in the published hiographies, that I, at least, find it very difficult to recognize these like myself. Though I have described my sexual anomaly somewhat in detail, it seems to me that the following notes are important for a better understanding of my condition:—

"Of late I have given up immissio penis, and confined myself to ceitus inter femore puells. Ejeculation occurs enriler than with conjunctio membrorum, and I experience a certain lustful feeling in the penis itself. If this manner of sexual intercourse is quite pleasant to me, it is, perhaps, in part to be referred to the fact that in this kind of sexual indulgence the sex is quite indifferent, and I am, perhaps, anconsciously reminded of masculine embrace. But this memory is absolutely unconscious, and but obscurely felt; for I am not indebted to my imagination for my pleasure, but it is due immediately to kissing the woman's mouth. I feel that the charm which the brothel and prostitutes have for me also begins to fishe; but I am sure certain women will always be able to excite me by their kisses. Still, no woman is, or ever will be, so attractive as to induce me to overcome obstacles in winning her; but even the danger of discovery and disgrace could only with difficulty restrain me from sarking a man's embraces.

"Thus I lately allowed myself to be induced to buy a soldier at a prostitute's house. The lastful phenoure was very great, but the anhaquent feeling of satisfaction was especially very exhibitrating. The next may I felt similarly strengthened (capable of erection at any moment); and though I have not yet been able to meet the soldier again, the thought that I shall venture to purchase another gives me peace. But I could be perfectly satisfied only in finding one feeling like myself, of my own position and education.

"I have not yet mentioned that the female form (with the exception of the face) and genitals have no attraction for me (to touch the latter with my hand would be disgusting to me); but membrum virile me langure dum on meum on con osculatur, mile exoptatum case; indeed, to kin that of a very pleasing man would not be disgusting to me

Quantum, as has been said, would be quite impossible for me,"

Cate 111. Psychiani Hermophrodition.—Hetero-sexual feeling early interfered with by masturbation, but spisodically very intense. Hemosexual feeling shorigine perverse (sexual excitation by men's hoots).

Mr. X., of high social position, Russian, aged 28, came to me in September, 1887, in a despairing mood, to consult me on account of a percension of his vita sexualis, which made life seem almost unboarable to him, and which had repeatedly brought him near to sminde. The patient comes of a family in which neuroses and psychoses have been of frequent occurrence. In the father's family there had been consunguineous marriages for three generations. The father is said to have been a bealthy min, and to have lived morally in marriage. However, his father's preference for fine-looking servents became remarkable to the son. The mother's family is described as eccentric. The mother's grandfather and prestigrandfather died melancholic; her sister was insane; a daughter of the grandfather's brother was hysterical, and ind nymphonomis. Only three of the mather's twelve brothers and sisters married. Of these, one leather was homo-sexual, and always nervous as a result of excessive masturbation.

The patient's mother is said to be a bigot, and of small mental undownent, nervous, irritable, and inclined to melancholia. Patient has a sister and a brother. The brother is frequently melancholy, and, though mature, has never shown the alightest trace of sexual inclinations. The sister is an acknowledged beauty, and much sought by gentlemen. This lady is married, but staidless, as reported, owing to the impotence of for husband. She has always been indifferent to the attentions shown her by men, but is charmed by female beauty, and actinity in love with some of her female friends.

With respect of himself, the patient asserts that, when fest years old, he dreamed of handsome jockeys wearing shining hoots. Too, he terrer dreamed of women when he grow older. His nightly pollutions were always induced by " toot-dreams," From his fourth year he had a peculiar portiality for men, or, more correctly, for lackeys wearing abining bosts. At first they only excited his interest, but, with dend, opment of his sexual functions, the sight of them caused powerful erections and bestful pleasure. It was only servents' boots that affected him; the same kind of boots on persons of like social station were with out effect on him. In a homo-sexual sense, there was no sexual impulse connected with these situations. Even the thought of such a possibility was disgusting to him. At times, however, he had sensually-colored ideas, like being his servant's servant, and drawing off his boots; but the idea of being stepped on by him, or of having to blacken his boots, was most pleasing. The pride of the aristocrat rose up against such thoughts. In general, these notions about boots were disgusting and painful to him.

Sexual instinct was early and powerfully developed. It first found expression in indeligence in sensual thoughts about boots, and, after patenty, in drams accompanied by pollutions; otherwise, the mental and physical development was undisturbed. Patient was well endowed minitally,—learned easily, finished his studies, and became an officer. On account of his distinguished, manly appearance and his high position, is was much sought in society.

He characterizes himself as a clever, quiet, strong-willed, but superficial rans. He asserts that he is a possionate hunter and rider, and that he has never had any inclination for feminine pursuits. In the society of latios he has always been reserved; chaning always tired him. He had never had any interest in a hady of high social position. As for women, only the buxon peasant girls, such as are the models of pointers in Kome, had interested him. He had, however, never felt any sexual interest in such representatives of the female sex. In the theatre and circus only male performers had excited his interest; but, at the same time, they had consed him no sensual feelings. As for men, only their boots excited him, and, indeed, only when the weavers belonged to the servant class and were handsome men. Men of his own position, wearing never so fine boots, were absolutely indifferent to him.

With reference to his sexual inclinations, the patient is still executain whether he feels more inclination toward the opposite sex or toward his own sex. He is inclined to think that originally he had more inclination for women, but that this symmetry was, in any case, very weak. He states with certainty that the sight of a naked some made no impression on him, and that the sight of male genitals was even repagnent to him. In the case of women, this was not exactly the case, but he was not excited sexually even by the most beautiful feminine form. When a young officer, he was now and then compelled to accompany his comrades to brothels. He was the more easily personned to this, since he hoped by this means to be rid of his vile partiality for boots; but he was impotent. inless he brought the thought of boots to his aid. Under such circumstances, the act of cohabitation was normally performed, but without pleasurable feeling. Patient felt no impulse to intercourse with women. always requiring some external cause, -i.e., personation. Left to himself, his vita sexualis consisted in reveling in ideas about loots, and in correspending dreams with polletions. Since more and more there become connected with them the impulse to kiss his servant's boots, to draw them off, etc., the patient determined to use every means to rid himself of this disgusting desire, which deeply wounded his pride. At that time, being in his twentieth year, and in Paris, he recalled a very beautiful peasant girl, who lived in his distant home. He hoped, with her assistsuce, to free himself of his perverse sexual inclination. He went directly home, and tried to win the girl's favor. It seems that the patient was not naturally homo-sexual. He usserts that at that time he was actually in love with this person, and that her glance, or the touch of her dress, gave him sensual pleasure; and, when she once kinsed him, he had a powerful erection. After about a year and a half, the patient succeeded in gaining his desires with this person,

He was potent, but ejaculated tardily (ten to twenty minutes), and never lad a pleasurable feeling in the set.

After about a year and a half of sexual intercourse with this girl, his love for her grew cold, because he did not find her so "fine and pure" as he wished. From this time it was necessary for him to call upon ideas about boots for help, which had been latest, in order to be potent in sexual intercourse with her. In proportion as his power failed, these ideas arose spontaneously. Thereafter he had coits with other women. Now and then, especially when the women was in sympathy with him, the set took place without my assistance of imagination. It once happened that the patient committed a raps. It is remarkable that on this single occasion to had a pleasurable feeling in the (forced) set. Immediately after the deed he had a feeling of disgust. When, an hour after the forced indulgence, he had contast with the same woman, with her consent, he experienced no feeling of pleasure;

With decrease of virility,—i.e., when it was preserved only in connection with ideas about boots,—libido for the opposite sex decreased, The patient's slight libido and weak inclination for women are evidenced by the fact that, while he still sustained sexual relations with the personal gui, he began to impatible. He ideaned the vice from "Rousseau's Confessions," the book accidentally falling into his hands. The bootfancies immediately linked themselves with corresponding impulses. He then had violent creations, musturbated, and ejaculation affected him a lively feeling of pleasure, which was denied to him in coitm; and at first he felt himself fresher and brighter, as a result of the masturbation.

In time, however, symptoms of sexual, and, later, of general, neutrasticular, with spinal irritation, appeared. He then at first gave up masturbation, and songlit his first love; but she was now more than over indifferent to him. Since he finally became impotent, over when he called ideas of boots to his assistance, he gave up women sufficily, and again practiced masturbation; by which he felt himself protected from the impulse to him and blacken servants' boots. At the same time, he continued to feel that his sexual position was a painful one. He again occasionally attempted collins, and was successful in it as soon as he thought of blackened boots. Too, after continued shatinence from muturbation, he was sometimes successful in collus without any artificial aid.

The patient says that his sexual needs are intense. If he has not had an ejaculation in a long time, he becomes congestive and psychically much excited, and tormented by repugnant images of boots, so that he is forced to have colins, or, preferably, to maximisate.

For some time his moral position has been complicated most pamfully by the fact that, as the last of a wealthy line of high position, and at the importunate desire of his parents, he must marry. The bride is of rare beauty, and mentally in perfect sympathy with him; but, as a woman, she is as indifferent to him as any other. Æsthetically she satisfies him "as a work of art;" in his eyes, she is an ideal. To henor her in a platonic way would be happiness worth striving for; but to possess her as a wife is a painful thought. He is certain beforehand that with her be will be impotent, save with the help of ideas of bouts. To one such means, however, is in opposition to his respect and his moral and aesthetic feeling for the lady. Were he to sail her with such thoughts, she would lose, in his eyes, all her sethetic value; and then he would become impotent for her, and she would become repugnant to him. The patient considers his position one of despoir, and confesses that he has lately been repeatedly near suicide.

He is a man of much intelligence, and decidedly of mesculine appearance, with abundant growth of heard, deep voice, and normal genitals. The eye has a neuropathic expression. No signs of degeneration. Symptoms of spinal neurosthesis. It was possible to reassare the patient, and give him hope of his future.

The medical advice consisted in means for combating the nearesthenia, and the interdiction of maximization and indulgance of the farcy in images of boots, in the hope that, with the removal of the neurothenia, cohabitation without ideas of boots would become possible; and that, in time, the justions would become morally and physically capable of marriage. In the latter part of October, 1888, the patient wrote me that he had resolutely recisted quasturbation and his imagination. In the interval he had had but one dream about boots, and scarcely a polintion. He had been free from home-sexual inclinations, but, in spite of this, there was often considerable sexual exotement, without anything like adequate libido for women. In this deplocable alteration, he was compelled, by circumstances, to many in three months.

2. Hono-Sexual Individuals, or Urnings.—In distinction from the preceding group of psycho-sexual hermaphrodites, there are here, ob origine, sexual desires and inclinations for persons of the same sex exclusively; but, in contrast with the following group, the anomaly is limited to the vita sexualis, and does not more deeply and seriously affect the character and mental personality.

The vita sexualis of these urnings, nontotic controllis, is entirely like that in normal hetero-sexual love; but, since it is the exact opposite of the natural feeling, it becomes a caricature, and this the more, since these individuals, at the same time, as a rule, are subject to hyperarchiesia sexualis, and, therefore, their love for their own sex is emotional and passionate.

The uming loves and deifies the male object of his affections, just as a man idealizes the woman he loves. He is enpable of the greatest sacrifice for him, and experiences the pangs of unfortunate, often unrequited, love; suffers from the unfaithfulness of the beloved object, and is subject to jealousy, etc.

The attention of the male-loving man is given only to male dancers, actors, athletes, statues, etc. The sight of female rharms is indifferent to him, if not repulsive. A naked woman is disgusting to him, while the sight of male genitals, hips, etc., affords him infinite pleasure.

The bodily contact of a sympathetic man induces a thrill of delight; and, since such individuals are mostly sexually neurasthenic, congenitally or from quanism or enforced abstinence from sexual intercourse, under such circumstances ejaculation is very easily induced, which, in the most intimate intercourse with women, cannot be induced at all, or only by mechanical means. The sexual act with a man, in many instances, affords pleasure, and leaves behind a feeling of wellbeing. Should the arning be able to force himself to coitus, in which, as a rule, disgust has the effect of an inhibitory concept, and makes the act impossible, then his feeling is something like that of a man compelled to take disgusting food or drink. However, experience teaches that not infrequently umings falling in this group marry, either out of ethical or social considerations.

Such unfortunates are relatively potent, in that in murital intercourse they incite their imagination, and, instead of thinking of their wives, they call up the image of some loved male person. But for them coitus is a great sacrifice, and no pleasure; and it makes them, for days after, nervous and miserable. If such urnings, by means of powerful excitation of their imagination, or under the influence of alcoholic drinks, or by erections induced by an everfilled bladder, etc., are embled to overrome the inhibitory feelings and ideas, then they are still entirely impotent; while simply the touch of a man may induce powerful erection, and even ejaculation.

Dancing with a woman is unpleasant to an urning, but to dance with a man, especially one with an attractive form, seems to him the greatest of pleasares. The male urning, in so far as he possesses higher culture, is not opposed to non-sexual intercourse with women, when by mind and refinement they make conversation pleasant. It is only of woman in her sexual role that he has a borror. The homo-sexual woman offers the same manifestations, notatic sentondis. In this degree of sexual degeneration, character and occupation correspond with the sex which the individual represents. The sexual perversion remains isolated, but an anomaly of the mental being of the individual which deeply affects the social existence. In accordance with this, many of these individuals, in the sexual act, feel themselves in the role which would naturally belong to them in heterosexual intercourse.

However, transitions to group 3 occur, in as much as sometimes the passive role which corresponds with the home-sexual manner of feeling, is thought of or desired, or at least forms the subject of dreams. Moreover, inclinations for occupations and tendencies of taste are manifested, which do not correspond with the sex of the individual. In many cases, one gets the impression that such symptoms are artificial, the result of educational influences; in other cases, that they represent deeper acquired degenerations of the original anomaly, induced by the perverse sexual activity (musturbation), analogous to the signs of progressive degeneration observed in acquired inversion of the sexual instinct.

With regard to the manner of sexual satisfaction, it must te stated that with many male urnings simple embraces are sufficient to induce ejaculation, since they are subject to irritable weakness of the sexual apparatus. In case of sexual hyperesthesis, and where there is pariesthesis of the moral sense, great pleasure is afforded by intercourse with persons of the lowest condition. On the same basis, desires to commit pedentsty (active, of course) and other similar acts occur, though it is but seldom, and apparently only in cases of moral defect, and by reason of libido nimia in individuals especially passionate, that podemsty is indulged in. The sensual desire of mature arnings, in contradistinction from old and decrepit debanchers, who prefer boys (and include in poderasty by preference), seems never to be directed to immature mules. Only for want of better material, and in case of violent passion, does the urning become dangerous to boys. The manner of sexual satisfaction in female umings may be mutual and passive masturbation. To them colins is quite as disgusting, wearisome, and inadequate as it is to the male urning.

Case 112. The following is an extract from a very circumstantial autobiography which a physician affected with contrary sexual instinct, has put at my disposal:—

"I am now forty years old, of healthy family," and have always been healthy and considered a model of physical and mental strength and energy. I am of powerful build, but have only a moderate board, and, with the exception of hair in the skills and on the moss venera, * Later II became known that a read relative died insure, and, further, that eight of his parent's children had died of scute or chronic hydroxyphulus at agree ranging from one to falces.

my body is halriess. The penis, even soon after birth unusually large, measures, in statu crectionis, 24 centimetres long by 11 centimetres in circumference. I san a skillful rider, athlete, and swimmer, and have passed through two great campaigns as a military surgeos. I sever experienced any taste for female attire and vocation. Up to the time of puberty I was sky toward the female sex, and I am yet sky with new acquaintances.

"I have always laid a distante for dancing. In my eighth year as inclination for my own sex made its appearance. I next experienced pleasure in regarding my brother's genitals. I induced my brother to indulge with me in maximal foundling of the penitals, as a result of which I had an erection. Later, in busing with the school-children, his boys excited a lively interest in me; the girls, none at all. I had so little interest in them that, as late as my fiftcenth year, I believed that they also had a peaks. In company with boys like myself, I took pleasure is mutual monustupration. At eleven and a half years I was given a strict tutor, and thereafter could steal to my friends but seldom. I bearned very easily, but could not get along with my teacher; and when one day he made it too hard for me, I became furious and struck at him with a knife, and would invegladly stabled him, if he had not follen into my arms. In my thirteenth year, for a similar cause, I excaped from the teacher, and wandered about for six weeks in the neighboring country.

"I now entered the Gymmaium. At that time I was already sexually developed, and amused myself while hathing with my commutes in the way above mentioned, and later by imitatio coltus between the thighs. I was then thursen years old. I nook absolutely no pleasure with girls. Violent erections caused me to play with my genitals, and I came to take my penis in my mouth, which I succeeded in doing by bending over. This induced ejaculation. I thus learned masturbation. I was much frightened, looked upon myself as a criminal, and confessed to a companion of sixteen. He encouraged and quieted me, and entered into a love-bond with me. We were happy, and satisfied correctes by mutual cosmism. At the same time, I masturbated. After two years the bond was broken; but to this day, when we occasionally meet,—my friend is a high official,—the old fire lights up anew.

"That time with my fracid H, was a happy one, the return of which I would gially buy with my heart's blood. Then life was a pleasure, learning was more play, and I had a feeling for everything beautiful.

"During this time a physician, a friend of my father's, soluted me by caressing use and practicing masterbation on me on the occasion of a visit, and by explaining the sexual act to me. He advised me never to practice manustopeation, since it was injurious to health. He then practiced united ourseism with me, and explained that this was the only way in which he could perform the sexual function. He had a horser of women, and, therefore, had lived uninappity with his decreased wife. He gave me a pressing invitation to visit him as often as possible. The physician was a pompone man, and the father of two sons aged fourteen and fifteen respectively, with whom in the following year I entered into love-relations similar to those I had with my friend II.

"I was aslamed of my unfaithfulness to him, but at the same time continued my relations with the physician. He practiced mutual meaturbation with me, showed me our spersustozos under the microscope, and pamagraphic works and pictures, which, however, did not please me, because I had interest only for mule forms. On the occasion of later visits, he asked me to do him a favor which he had never yet enjoyed, and which he very much desired. Since I loved him, I acquiesced in everything. He dilated my anus with instruments, and practiced pederasty on me, and at the same time performed maximisation, so that I experienced pleasure and pain at once. After this discovery I went immediately to my friend H, with the thought that this beloved man would be able to give me still greater pleasure. We practiced pederasty on each other, but were both deceived, and did not repent it; for passively I had only your, and actively no pleasure, while metenl oranism gave as both the greatest colorment. Thereafter, out of gratitude, I was still frequently at the disposal of the physician only. Up to my liftcenth year I practiced passive or mutual consism with my friend. Now I was quite grown, and had all kinds of signs made to me by women and girls; but I fed from them as Joseph did from Potiphar's wife. At fifteen I came to the Capital. I had but infrequent opportunity for the satisfaction of my texial inclination. I reveled in the sight of pictures and statues of male forms, and could not keep from kissing the beloved statues. The Spleaves on the genitals were my principal sumy succ.

" At seventeen I went to the University. There, again, I lived two years with my friend H.

"When I was in my eighteenth year, while in a state of mild intoxication, I was set on to have coitus with a woman. I forced sayself to it, but immediately afterward I find the house, overcome with disgest. Just as after the first active manustrapeation. I had a feeling as if I had committed a crime. On the occasion of another attempt, while in a solar condition, in spite of every effort of a beautiful naked giri, I could not get an erection; though the mere sight of a boy or the touch of a man's hand on my thigh, would always throw my penis into violent erection. A short time before, my friend II, had had a similar experience. In vain we racked our lemins to discover the reason for it. New I let women slone, and found enjoyment with friends in passive and mutual pennism, among others with both the sous of the physician, who had used them for pederasty after my deporture.

"When minetoen years old, I made the nequalistance of two genities urnings :-

" A., aged 56, of effeminate appearance, beardless, of small endowment mentally, possessing a powerful sexual desire that had been manifested abnormally early, had included in urnings' love since his sixth year. Once a mouth he visited the Capital. I had to sleep with blin. He was insatiable in mutual counters, and made me take part in active and passive pederasty, which was an unpleasant part of the bereals. for me.!!

"B., a merchant, agol 36, of masculine appearance, was as passionate as I was. He knew how to make his manipulations on me such a stimulus that I had to scree him possively in polerasty. He was the only one with whom I ever had may pleasure in passive pederasty. He confessed to me that when he but know that I was near, he had the most painful erections; and that when I could not serve him, he was somewhet to satisfy himself by masturbation.

"While pursuing these love-affairs, I was chaired assistant in hispital, and was considered ambitious and skillful in my work. I maturally sought throughout literature for an explanation of my sexual peculiarity. I found it in part as a crime deserving punishment, while for myself I could only recognize in it the natural satisfaction of my sexual desire. I was aware that this was congenital with me. But feeling myself in opposition to the whole world, often near inscrity and suicide, I again sought to satisfy my powerful sexual desire with women. The result was always the same, either want of sufficient crection, or, when it became possible, to force myself to the act, disgust and horror of its reputition. As a military surgeon, I suffered terribly from the sight and touch of thousands of naked male forms. Fortunately, I formed a love-hond with a lieutenant affected similarly, and passed again a time of happiness. For love of him I consented to pederacty, for which he longed. We love! each other until he lost his life at Sedan. From that time I never gave myself to active or passive pederasty, although I had many low-affairs, and was a person much sought.

"At twenty-three I went to the country as a physician, and was sought and esteemed. I satisfied myself with boys over fourteen. I interested myself in political affairs, and made an enemy of the clergyman, and, being betrayed by one of my lovers, was denounced and compelled to fice. The legal investigation, fortunately, did me no harm. I was able to return, but I was greatly shaken; and I went to the war (1870) as a soldier, in the hope of meeting my death. I returned, however, with many distinctions, much matured; and I found still more pleasure in cornect work in my profession. I hoped that the extinction of my excessive sexual desire was near at hand, exhausted by the great lardships of the campaign.

"Scarcely had I recovered, when the old unbounded desire again appeared, and led to new unbridled estisfaction. Of course, I often thought of it; but my inclination, so revolting to the world, did not norm so to me.

"For a year, by means of the greatest exercise of my will, I abstained; then I went to the Capital to force myself to colabit with a woman. I, who at the sight of the dirtiest regamnific had pointal erections, could scarcely induce one with the most beautiful woman. Overcome, I returned home and obtained a young man acreant for my personal service and satisfaction.

"The solitode of life as a country physician, and the lenging for children, drove me to marriage; besides, I wished to make an end to gossip, and I hoped family to triumph over my fatal desire.

"I knew a young girl, of whose respect and love for me I was convinced. Through my exteem and honor for my wife, I was enabled to perform the conjugal duties, and bugat four boys. The boyish appearsize of my wife was of effectual necistance. I called for my 'Raphael.' I forced into my funcy images of boys, in order to induce erection. If my fancy ceased for a moment, the erection failed. I was mable to sleep with my wife. Within the last few years coits has become constantly more difficult to attain, and for two years we have given up all attempts. My wife knows my mental condition, and her esteem and love for me may become extranged.

"My sexual inclination for my own sex is unchanged, and, unforturately, too often forces me to become untrue to my wife. To this day, the night of a youth of sixteen puts me into violent sexual excitement with painful erections, so that occasionally I am compelled to help myself with manustrapration of him and onanism on myself.

"The sufferings I endure are indescrible. Facts de cricux, I have my wife practice manustrapration on me; but what my wife's hand accomplishes with great effort in half an hour is produced by the hand of a boy in a few accords. Thus I live, miscrable, a slave of the law and of my slaty to my wife! I never had pleasure in active or passive pederasty. If I over practiced or suffered it, it was only from gratitude or desire to please."

The physician to whom I owe the preceding autobiography assures me that he, up to this time, has had sexual intercourse with at least six hundred urnings. There were, indeed, many among them who to-day occupy high and respected positions. Only about ten per cent, of them came later to love women. Another portion did not avoid women, but were more inclined to their own sex; the remainder were exclusively and lastingly urnings.

This physician asserted that among the six hundred he never found abnormal formation of the genitals; but there were, however, frequent approaches to the female form, as well as inDevelopment of the mamme was not infrequent. He asserted that from his thirteenth to his fifteenth year he had milk in his mamme, which his friend H. sucked out. Only about ten per cent. of this number showed inclination for female occupations, etc. All his acquaintances were affected with a sexual desire that was abnormally powerful, and made its appearance abnormally early. The vast majority felt themselves as the man in their relations with the other, and satisfied themselves by mutual cosmism, or by manustupcation on the person of the lover, or by musturbation at his hands. The majority were inclined to active pedematy; but very frequently the law and asthetic feeling were reasons for the non-performance of the act. Those feeling themselves toward the others as women were few, and the inclination to passive pedematy was very infrequent.

In the beginning of 1887, this physician was arrested for lawing committed acts of indecency on the persons of two boys under fourteen years. The crime consisted in his having first rubbed mentulam propriam inter femora viri until ejaculatio, and the same percedure cum mentula propria inter femora pueri. At the examination it was recognized that an abnormal instinct was in play, though, at the same time, it was shown that the colprit was not mentally unsound, and not deprived of free will; at least, he had not acted in obedience to an uncontrollable impulse. Therefore, he was sentenced to prison for one year, the mildest possible punishment.

Case 133. Mr. X., Hungarian, merchant, consulted me on account of nearesthesia and sleeplessness, which had existed for years. The investigation of the cause of his tremble led the patient to confess that he had an absormal sexual instinct for his own sex, that he was very pasicente, and that his nervous tremble might well come from that. The following, taken from the history of this intelligent patient, possesses acceptific interest:—

"My absormal sexual instinct reaches back to my childhood. When three years old, I got hold of a journal of fashious. The beautiful pictures of the men I kissed until the paper was torn to tatters, but I paid no attention to the female figures. I did not like to play with boys. I preferred to play with girls, because they always had dolls. I especially liked to cut out dolls' clothes; and to-day, in spite of my thirty-three years, dolls still possess an interest for me. When a boy, for hours I would lork about available places, in order to get a sight of male generals. When I succeeded, a strange, dizzy feeling came over me.

manings. 263

Weak, matteredive men or boys made no impression on me. At thirteen I began to musturiete. From my thirteenth till my fifteenth year, I slept with a landsome young mus. That was happeness. Hours at a time at night, with erections, I would wait for his return. If in bed he classed to touch my genitals, it gave me delight. At fourteen I had a school-mate whose instincts were like my own. For hours at a time, during school-hours, we held each other's genitals. Ah, those were happy bours! As often as I could, I lingered in bath-houses. That was always a feast for me. The sight of male genitals induced violent erections. At sixteen I came to the metropolis. Seeing so many handsome men charmed me. In my eighteenth year I attempted coitus with a prostitute, but diagust and fear made it impossible. Other attempts were failures, smill my nineteenth year, when I tried again with success; but the not afforded me no pleasure, miter inducing a feeling of disgust. I compared myself, and was proud of my success at being a man, which I had gradually begun to doubt.

"Subsequent attempts were no longer successful. The discust was too great. When the woman was undressing, it became necessary, on account of my feeling of repognance, to put out the light. I now considered myself impotent, consulted physicians, and visited baths and sunitariums to cure my supposed impotence; for I still did not know what to think of it. I took pleasure in the society of ladies, perhaps out of conceit; for I impressed most ladies as being sympathetic and unlable; but I valued in them nothing more than mental and aesthetic qualities. I liked to dance with them; but if one pressed against me in dancing, I experienced a feeling of repugnance, and even disgust, and felt like striking her. If in joke I happened to dance with a gentleman, I always took the part of the lady. I would press and rub against him, and take a perfect delight in it. When I was eighteen, a gentleman who came into the office, said, 'That is a fine youth; in the East be would bring a pound sterling every time!! I puzzled my head over that. Another gentleman liked to joke with me, and steal kisses of me as he was going away, which I would have given him only too gladly. He afterward became my layer. These circumstances excited my attention. and I waited for an equorismity.

"When I was twenty-five years old, it happened that a man who was formerly a Capacine menk became attracted to me. For me he was like a Mephistopheles. Finally he spoke to me. To this day I can almost feel the beating of my heart that he caused me; I almost fainted. He used a rendezeous for that evening at a public house. I went, but at the threshold I turned back, afraid. On the next evening he met me again. He overcome my scraples, and took me to his room. I was scarcely able to walk for excitement. My sedaner made me sit on his sofa, and, smiling at me, he fixed his wonderful black eyes on me, and I lost consciousness. This delight, this ideal, divine sense of pleasure that filled my whole being,—I could write too much about it. I think only an innocest youth, over head and ears in love, who for the first time has his love's longing faidlied, could be as happy as I was that night. My refuses demanded my life, in joke; but I at first thought him in correct. I begged him to let me be happy for a time, and then, united to him I would end my life. It would have been entirely in accordance with the high-flown ideas I entertained at that time. For five years after that, I kept up a relation with the man, who is still so dear to me. Oh, how happy, and yet, often, how unhappy, I was during those years! If I but saw him speak to a handsome young man, I became wildly jealous.

"When twenty-seven, I became engaged to a young lidy. Her mind and aesthetic feeling, as well as financial considerations, induced me to think of marriage. At the same time, I am very food of children, and, whenever I meet even the commonest day-laborer and his wife and a pretty child, I eavy the man his good fortune. Thus I made a fool of myself. I mamaged to get through the time of courtship; when kissing my bride I felt more auxiety and fear than pleasure. On one or two occasions, however, after lexurious dimners, while kissing her passionstely, I had erections. How happy I was at that ! I saw myself already a father. I twice came near breaking off the organization. On my marriage-lay, when all the guests had assembled, I locked myself in a room, oried like a child, and felt that I could not proceed with the excesses that occurred to me, I allowed myself to be taken, in ordinary streetcostume, to the alter.

" As great good fortune would have it, at the time of the marriage, my wife was meneteniting. Oh, how thankful I was for this excuse! I am now convinced that this circumstance is all that made later columstation possible. How it later became possible for me to colubit with my wife, and have a lovely boy, I do not know. He is the confort of my rained life. I can only thank God for the lappiness of having a child. I was a cheat, so to speak, in the marriage-bed. My wife, whom I respect for her high qualities of character, less no suspicion of my condition, but she often complains of my collness. With her goodness of heart and simplicity, it was possible for me to make her think that the conjugal duty should be performed but once a mouth. Since she is in nowise sensord, and I can find excuse in my nervousness, I con successful in keeping up the swindle. Collabitation is the greatest sacrifice for me. By taking considerable wine, and by making use of the erections which occur in the morning, as the result of an overfilled bladder, it is possible for me to perform collar once a mouth; but it affords me no pleasurable feeling, and I am worried and experience an increase of my nervous difficulties all day long after it. The consciousness of having fulfilled my duty toward my wife, whom in all other respects I love, affords me moral conscintion and satisfaction. With a man, it is otherwise. With him I can perform the act several times in a night, always taking the sexual pile of a man. In this, I experience the greatest pleasure, the purest applicass. I feel myself refreshed and invigorated by it. Of late, my desire for men has somewhat decreased; in fact, I have cominge even to avoid a handsome young man that appreaches me. Will it last? I fear not. I am absolutely unable to do without male love; if I am compelled to forego it, I become depressed, feel weary and miserable, and have pain and pressure in my head. I have always regarded my pitishie peculiarity as something congenital, and I would feel happy if I had only not married. I pity my good wife. Often the fear seizes me that I cannot endure it with her longer; then thoughts about disorce, saicide, sad flight to America come to me."

No one seeing the patient to whom I owe this communication would exspect his condition. His outward appearance is, in all respects, musculine; he has a well-developed, full beard, strong and deep voice, and normal genitals. The cranium is normally formed; signs of degeneration are absolutely wanting, and only an exquisitely nervous eye makes one suspect a neurogathic condition. The veretative organs perform their functions normally. The palient presents the usual symptoms of a necessitionic, which may, in all essentials, be ascribed to sexual excesses with persons of his own sex, in a man abnormally passionate; and to the injurious influences of forced, though infrequent, coitus with the wife where horror femine exists.

The patient declares that he comes from healthy parents, and that he knows of no neuroses or mental disease in his ancestry. His elder bother was married three years. There was a separation, because the husband never had sexual intercourse with his wife. He married a second time. The second wife also complained of neglect on the part of the healand; but she had four children, concerning whose legitimacy no doubt was ever miscel. A sister is bysteroputhic.

The patient says that, when a young man, he suffered with momentary attacks of dizziness, during which it seemed to him as if he were about to die. He says that he has always been very excitable and evotional, and an enthusiast for the arts, especially poetry and music. He bimself designates his character as enigmatical, absormal, nervous, restless, extravagant, and undecided. He is often exalted without real reason, and then again depressed, even to thoughts of suicide. He may pass through quick and anoden changes,-" religious and frivolous, optimistic and cynical, cowardly and brave, creditions, amiable, and suspirious; inclined to do others harm, and sorrowful to tears over the misfortures of others; and with this generous to excess, and then again miserly & la Harpages." The patient is certainly a tainted individual. He seems to be very well endowed intellectually, and, as he says, to have learned easily, and been among the first at solved.

The marriage of this man was not lappy. Notwithstanding the fact that it was but very infrequently that he performed the inadequate and injurious sexual act with his wife, and that he sought and found a substitute in male lovers, he remained nearesthesie. His disease, at times, presents marked exacerbations, even manifesting itself in despuiring depression about his matrimonial, sexual, and mestal condition, which even extends to violent technic vitar.

His wife became hysteropathic and amenic, and the patient attributed this to sexual abstinence. Try as he would to force himself, of late years he has not been able to perform coitss, erection failing completely; while, in intercourse with male lovers, he is very potent.

The son of these unfortunate parents, who is now over nine years old, develops well. The patient adds that formerly, is coits with his wife, he was potent only when he thought of a beloved man. (From the author's " Lehrli, der Paychistrie.")

Case 114. Autobiography. "The writer of this is a congenital urning. If I have not consected with other urnings, nevertheless, I am fully informed of my condition; for it has been my lot to see almost all literature on the subject. A short time ugo, your work, 'Psychopathia Sexualis,' was sent to me. I saw in it that you were working and sindying without prejudice in the interest of science and humanity.

"If I cannot tell you much that is new, yet I will speak of a few things which I trust you will receive as one more stone to be used by you in your work; which, I am confident, will, in your hands, aid in saving us.

"When you presume that there is often an hereditary tainted condition, perhaps you are right. My father was subject to spinal disease before my hirth; later, he became mentally unround, and took his own life.

"Another point, which I am inclined to doubt, is the one mentioned by you in another place,—i.e., that ontains practiced from youth may lead to perverse instinct.

"I (merelson, owner of a small business, unmarried) am in the beginning of my thirtieth year. I am apparently healthy, and show scarcely a deviation from the normal measuring type. The first sexual impulses were immediately and exclusively directed to the male sex, and I experienced them from my tenth year. I have measurbated since my twiffin year. Since, in spite of all attempts, notices with women was always absolutely impossible for me; and since I have never had itempts have recover—on the contrary, rather aversion; and since my attempts have never resulted in the slightest orection, I have been compelled to satisfy myself by connism.

"If now I can to confess the manner of my sexual satisfaction, I may say that in my earlier years my fellow-pupils and companions excited me sexually. Now my impulse constata in a desire for boys of about ten, but mostly for rouths of from fifteen to twenty years.

" For a long time, strong and healthy cadets, of fine form, have had a particular charm for me; and by their implicant uniforms and fite presence they especially excite my desire. I have no opportunity to approach them, or even to enter into distant social intercourse with them; but I am compelled to entisfy myself with following them in the streets and squares; or in restaurants, horse-cars or mitmays, by sitting near them, and, when it is possible to do it unnoticed, under such of comestances, by practicing onemism. My most ardent wish has often been to become the friend, servant, or slave of such a young man.

"I have never even dreamed of direct pelerasty; my desire has always been bodily contact, embrace, manustrupration of my genitals by my lover, and, on my part, a kiss on his genitals or podex.

"I often have the desire, however, to represent Sacher-Masoch in his 'Venus in Furs.' There a man makes himself the voluntary slave of a woman, and feels an intense thrill of limitful pleasure, if he is only chastised and humiliated by her. But I naturally feel that I could, under no circumstances, become the slave of a woman, but only of a man; more correctly, of a young man; one, however, for whom I should have such an infinite love that I could give myself up entirely to his mercy or gracity.

"The lustful images that float before my mind in meaturisation are those of this or that young man that I have just seen. As a sad and incomplete substitute, I practice this onsaista sonstantly.

"I pass into a lustful dream in this way (and I my all here, because I wish to write only the truth and the whole truth): I choose a young man that pleases me by his form, and in imagination give myself up to involuntary obedience to him. I imagine that he wishes to humilinte me, and that he commands me, for example, to kins his feet; or compels me to smell his accks. For want of the desired actuality, I take my own socks, smell of them, take them into my month, rub them over my genitals, and immediately erection and ejacolation, with sensual pleasure, take place.

"Yes, I am so dominated by this mental imagery that I imagine that the young men is my confessor, and, in order to immiliate me, orders me to est of his excrement. Here again, in want of actuality, I est of my own excrement, but only in small quantity. Then, with an imperfect Seeling of disgust and violent pulpitation of the heart, excetion and ejaculation take place.

"However, I come to this vile, forerish imagery and the performnace of these acts, only when it has not been possible for me for a long time to satisfy myself by omnism in the immediate vicinity of a young man.

"This is for me more natural, because I then have more pleasure, and experience a more perfect physical and mental benefit, even though my ideal of actual and direct satisfaction in mutual understanding were never to be accorded use. "I almost believe that the above-mentioned disgusting imagery is only the ordi result of constant wars of normal satisfaction,—i.e., of my normal satisfaction as an urning; and that with a regular satisfaction, body to body, the imagery that becomes almost insune would be less intense, and certainly would not go to such extravagance. We it is the altimate result of an attempt at abstinence; for these idiotic, sensor images only come after a long period of it.

"I believe, indeed, that, under other social conditions, I should be capable of great and noble love and self-carrifice. My thoughts are in no way exclusively carried or discussed. How often, at the eight of a handsome young man, a deep feeling of impatience selies me, and I breaths at once the sweet words of Heine :-

"" Do blid wir eine Blame, so hold, so schön, so rein," etc."

"And once, when I was compelled to part with a young man who had honored and valued me as his friend and protector, though my law had remained unknown to him, those fine verses by Scheffel kept passing through my mind, especially the last,—unitaris materials:—

> "Gran, wie der Himmel, übent vor mie die Well, Doch wend' es sich num Guice oder Bharn, Du, lieber Freund, in Treuse deuk' inh Dein i Behür Dert Gefü T es wile' au schole gewenen, Behür Dich Gott, es hat nicht sollen setn i."

"I have never independently revealed my love to a young man, and have never spoiled or injured one morally; but I have, now and then, made the way easy for many. Under such circumstances, nothing is too much trouble, and I obtain victims as only I can.

"When I have an opportunity to have such a beloved friend about me, to educate, protect, and help, if my recognized love find a (natural, unsexual) return, then all my disgusting mental imagery grows less and less intense; then my love becomes almost phytonic and emobled, to sak again into the mire when this worthy satisfaction is removed.

As for the rest, and without over-enimating myself, I may my that I am not one of the worst of men. Brighter mentally than the average man, I take interest in all that moves humanity. I am aniable, and easily moved to pity, and am incapable of doing my animal, mach less a man, an injury; but, on the contrary, do good wherever I can

When I have nothing to represelt myself with in my own conscience, and must, at the same time, set myself in opposition to the t "Then art the any flower, so sweet, so heartiful, so pure," etc.

* Lowering like the beavers, frowns the world on an, Yet hier or carried will be the fall | more.
With treating heart, door friend, I think of thou!
God keep thee, don't it would have been her weet?
God keep thee, don't mak hispairon was not to be?

judgment of the world, I suffer very much. Indeed, I have dose no one harm, and I consider my love, in its mablest activity, to be quite as hely as that of a normal man; but, with the enhappy lot which impatience and ignorance cost upon us, I suffer even to the extent of terdium wites.

"No pen, no tongue can describe all the misory, all the uniappy situations, the constant four of having this peculiarity recognized, and of being cust from society. The one thought that, as soon as recognized, and a existence would be lost, and he would to east away from all, is us terrible as any thought our be. Then all the good that one had ever done would be forgotten; then, in the pride of his great morality, every normal man would be moved to scorn, even though he himself had been never so frivolous in his own love.

"Then what does our minery amount to? We may, carning man, and our unhappy lives. Truly, I often long for the quiet of an asylum. My life may end when it will, the quicker the better; I am ready.

"To refer to one more point: I also believe, like the others that have written to you, that our nerveusness is first acquired as a result of our unhappy, unspeakably misorable life among our fellow-creatures.

"And still another: You write, at the conclusion of your work, concerning the repeal of the legal casetments concerned. Indeed, hamanity would not be destroyed if they were repealed. In Italy there is no such law, as far as I know; and Italy is not a wilderness, but a cultivated nation.

"As for myself, compelled as I am to undermine my life by oranism, the law could not touch me; for I have never sinned against it in a letter. But, at the same time, I suffer under the accursed seem to which we are subjected. How can the ideas of society be changed, so long as there is a law which strengthens it in its immorality? The law most, of course, correspond with public opinion; but it should not be in larrachy with the erroneous opinion of ignorance, but only in second with the ideas of the best and most scientife thinkers,—not with the wish and projudice of the valgar. True thinking minds council larger be satisfied with the old idea.

"Parden me, Professor, if I close without a signature. Do not try to find me. I could tell you nothing more. I give you these lines in the interest of fature sufferers. Publish from them, in the interest of science, truth, and justice, what seems to you to be necessary."

Case 115. On a summer evening, at twilight, X. Y., a physician of a city in North Germany, was detected by a stateman while committing a misdemeanor with a countryman in a field. He was practicing masturfaction on him, and then mentalism allow in as summ immisst, X. escaped legal prosecution by flight. The authorities dismissed the complaint, because there had been no publicity, and because immissio membri in around ind not taken place. Among X.'s effects was found an extensive correspondence of a perverse sexual character, which showed that he had had perverse intercourse for years with all classes of people.

X. came of a neurotic family. His poternal grandfather died by smoode while insane. His father was a weak, possible man. One brother masterisated at the age of two. A cousin was sexually perverse, and practiced perverse acts, similar to those of X., while a youth; he because weak-minded, and died of spinal disease. A paternal great-male was an hermaphrodite. His mother's sister was insane. His mother is said to have been healthy. X.'s brother is nervous and trascible.

X., likewise, was nervous as a child. The mewing of a cut would create great fear in him; and if one but initated the voice of a cut, he would cry hitzerly, and run to others for protection. Slight physical disturbance caused violent fever. He was a quiet, dramp child, of suritable imagination, but of slight mental capabilities. He did not indulgs much in boyish games; he preferred feminine pursuits. It gave his especial pleasure to curl the hair of the home-maid or of his brother.

At thisteen X, went to an Institute. There he practiced mutual masturbation, seduced his committee, and, by his cynical condect, made them mammagenble; so that he had to be taken home. At that time the purents found love-letters with inscivious contents, showing perverse sexuality. From the age of seventeen he studied under the strict surveillance of a professor in a flyamesium. He made but and progress in learning. He had only a talent for music.

After finishing his studies, the patient entered the University, at the age of nineteen. There he attracted attention by his cruical sharedter and his association with young persons who were thought to be given to mascaline love. He began to be dandified; wore striking crurate, and shirts that were low cut; he forced his feet into narrow sloses, and surled his hair in a remarkable way. This peculiarity disappeared when he left the school, and had returned home.

At the age of twenty-four he was for a long time neuralibrair.

From that time until his twenty-ninth year, he was carried and skilful in his profession; but he avoided the society of the opposite sex, and constantly associated with men of doubtful sharacter.

The patient would not allow a personal examination. In writing, he made the excuse for this that it would be of no use, because his impulse to his own sex had existed from his sarliest childhood, and was congenital. He had always had herror femine, and had never been inclined to avail himself of the charms of women. Toward men be feithinself in the ride of a man. He recognized his impulse toward his own sex as absorbed, and excused his sexual indulgence as being the result of an abnormal anterest condition.

Since his flight X, lives out of Germany, in Southern Italy, sid, at I learned from a letter, now, as before, he indulges in perverse love. X, is an extract, stately man, of masculine features, well-grown band, and normally developed genitals. Dr. X. furnished me, a short time ago, with his autobiography, of which the following is weethy of mention:-

"When, at the age of seven, I entered the private school, I felt very uncomfortable, and found very little sympathy with my companions. Only toward use of them, who was a very landsome child, did I feel attracted, and I loved him wildly. In children games I always knew how to arrange it so that I could appear in feminine attire; and my greatest pleasure was to form intricate conflores for our servant-girls. I often regretted that I was not a girl.

" My sexual instinct awakened when I was thirteen, and from the moment of its appearance was directed toward youthful, strong men. At first I was not really certain that this was abnormal, but consciouspers of it came when I saw and heard how my companions were characterized sexually. I began to manufacte at the age of thirteen. At serventeen I left hame and went to the Gymnasium of a large Capital, where I was put to board with a married professor of the Gymnaisen, with whose son I afterward lad sexual relations. It was with him that I first land sexual satisfaction. Thereafter I made the acquaintance of a young artist, who very soon noticed that I was abnormal, and confessed to me that he was in the same condition. I burned from him that this sheoruality was very frequent; and this knowledge overcame the trouble that I had had in supposing that I was alone in my abnormality. This young man had an extensive nequalitance with persons in like condition, to which he introduced me. There I became the object of general attention, for on all sides I was declared to be very attractive paraleally, I soon became insumely loved by an old gentleman; but, not finding him to my taste, I endured him but a short time, and then gave our to a young and handsome officer who lay at my feet. He was really my first love.

"After passing my final examination, at the age of nineteen, free from the discipline of school, I made the acquaintance of a great number of people like myself, and among them Karl Ulrichs (Numa Numantinus).

"When, later, I took up the study of molicine, and associated with many normal youths, I was often in a position where I was compelled to visit public prostitutes. After having consorted to no purpose with various prostitutes, some of whom were very beautiful, the opinion was spread among my acquaintances that I was impotent, and I strengthered this by telling of previous sexual excesses. At that time I had numerous external relations with persons who prized my physical peculiarities, which were considered very beautiful. The result of this was, that I was exciting somebody all the time; and I received such a mass of love-letters that I was often in embarrossment. The same of this was reached later, when, as a physician. I lived in the bospital. There I moved about him a celebrated person, and the scenes of jealousy that took pince, on my account, almost led to the discovery of the whole thing. Shortly after this, I fell till with an inflammation of my shoulder-joint, from which I recovered after three months. During this tilmess I received subentaneous injections of morphine several times shilly, which were suddenly discontinued, and which I practiced thereafter secretly after my recovery. For the purpose of special study, I spent some months in Vienna, before entering into private practice, and there, by means of some recommendations. I gained entrance to various circles of people like myself. I there learned that the abnormality in question, in its various forms, is agreed through the lower classes as well as the higher, and that these who are approachable for money are not infrequently mot among the higher chases.

"When I established myself in the country, I hoped to cure myself of the morphine habit by means of excuine; and then I became a victim of eccaine, which, only after three reliques, I was able to rid myself of (about two years ago). In my position, it was impossible for me to find sexual satisfaction, and I noticed with pleasure that the use of exempe had overcome my desire. When, on the first occasion, at the urgent request of my aunt, I had emancipated myself from comine, I traveled for a few weeks, in order to improve my health, the perverse imprises were again awakened in their old strength, and, one evening, while out in the fields by the city amusing musclf with a man, I noticed that I had been detected by the authorities and advertised; but that the act of which I was accused was not punishable, in accordance with the opinion expressed by the highest court of the German kingdon. I had, therefore, to be exceful; for already the announcement of the crime had been becalled on all sides. I saw that, after this, I would be compelled to leave German, and find a new home where neither the law nor public epiaton would be opposed to that impulse, which, like all abnormal instincts, could not be evercome by the will. Since I was never deceived for a moment about the matter, in recognizing my impulses as opposed to social unges, I repeatedly attempted to become master of them; but by these efforts they were increased in power. This same observation has been communicated to me by nequalistances. Since I was exclusively drawn toward strong, youthful, and musculine individuals, and they were very selfon inclined to yield to my wishes, I was compelled to buy them. Since my dealer was limited to persons of the lower classes, I was always shie to find such as were purchasable with money. I hope that the following states ments will not awaken your repugnance. At first I intended to omit them; but, for the completeness of this communication, I may include them, since they serve to enrich the clinical material. I am compelled to perform the sexual act in the following way :-

* Pene juvenis in os recepto, ita ut commuvendo ore mos efferents, ut is quem cupio, semen ejaculaverit, sperma in perimeum exspuo, Semen comprimi Jubeo et penem menn néverous et intra femora compressa immitte. Dum hace funt, necesse est, ut juvenis me, quantum potest, susplectatur. Que prius me fecisse narravi, candem mihi afferunt voluptatem, acsi ipse ejaculo. Ejaculationem pene in anum immittendo vel manu terendo assequi, mihi nequaquam amonum est.

"Sed inveni, qui penem meum receperint atque en ficientes, que supra exposui, effectrint, ut libidines more plane ant saturata.

"Concerning my person, I must still mention the following: I am 146 centimetres tall, of musculine appearance, and, with the exception of abapernal irritability of the skin, healthy. My hair and heard are black and thick. My genitals are of medium size and normally formed. I am able, without any trace of fatigue, to perform the sexual set from four to six times in twenty-four hours. My life is very regular. I use alcohol and tobacco very sparingly. I play the plane quite well, and some of my unpertentions compositions have been much applauded. I have lately finished a novel, which, as my first work, has been very favorably criticised by my friends. The story has several problems taken from the life of armings in the subject-matter.

"Among the large number of fellow-sufferers that are personally known to me, I have naturally been in a position to make observations concerning the condition and the degrees of abnormality; and, perlays, the following communications may be of service to you :-

"The most abnormal thing that I am acquainted with, was the empalse of a gentleman who lived in Berlin. He preferred, above all others, young follows with unwashed feet, which he would lick pusion-stely. A gentleman in Leipzig was similar to him; who, where it was possible, would linguam in anim immitters, preferring the parts to be undensed. Several have assured me that the eight of riding-boots or of parts of military uniforms, induced such excitement in them that ejaculation resulted. A man in Paris compelled a friend of in or si mingut.

"With reference to the degree in which many feel themselves as women, which is with me not the case, two persons in Vienna are examples. They have feminine manes. One is a further who calls himself. French Laura'; the other was formerly a butcher, who calls himself. Sideher-Fanny.' Both of them never missed an opportunity, during the carnival time, to show themselves in very fantastic feminine masks. In Hamburg there is a person that many people believe to be a woman, because he always goes about the house in feminine attire, and only occasionally leaves the house, and always in such clothing. This man wished to stand as godinother at a christening, and, as a result of it, pave rise to great sesuial.

" Peminine timidity, frivolity, obstinacy, and weakness of character, are the rule in such individuals.

"Several cases of percens sexuality are known to see where spilepsy and psychoses are present. Hernins are remarkably frequent. In practice many persons come to use to be treated for discuss of the annubecause of recommendation by friends. I saw two syphilitic and one local chances, and several finances; and at present I am treating a pentiuman for condylemats of the same, which form a rounded tensor as large as a fist. One case of primary affection of the soft points I saw in Vienna, in a young man who was accustowed to frequent mask-balls dressed as a girl, and entice young men; he would then pretend that he was meastrunting, and thus induce the others to use him per os. The assertion was made that in this way he had deceived fourteen men in one evening. Since, in none of the publications concerning contrary sexuality that I have seen, I have found anything concerning the intercourse of pederasts among themselves, I venture to communicate something concerning it in conclusion:—

"As soon as individuals that are effected with contrary sexuality become acquainted, there is a detailed narration of their experiences, loves, said acduetions, as far as the social difference between them allows such entertainment. Only in very few cases is this amusement undomnou with new acquaintances. Among themselves, they call themselves 'anata'; in Vicana, 'alstera'; and two very masculine public prostitutes in Vicana, whom I accedentally became acquainted with, and who lived in a perverse sexual relation with each other, told me that for the corresponding condition in women the name 'nucle' was used. Since becoming conscious of my abnormal instinct, I have met thomsands of such individuals.

"Almost every large city has some meetingplace, as well as a so-called promensile. In smaller cities there are relatively few 'smits,' though in a small town of $100 inhabitants I found eight, and in one of $100 eighteen of whom I was absolutely sure,—to say nothing of those whom I suspected. In my own town of $30,000 inhabitants, I personally know about one hundred and twenty 'sunts'. The greater number of them, and I especially, possess the capability of Judging another immediately as to whether they are alike or not, which, in the language of the 'sunts,' is called 'reasonable' or 'unreasonable.' My nequalitances are often astonaded at the certainty of my judgment. Individuals that are apparently absolutely meaculine I recognize as 'sunts' at the first sight. On the other hand, I am able to behave myself in such a masculine way that, in circles to which I have been introduced by acquaintances, there is a doubt as to my genuineness. When I am in the mood, I can act exactly like a girl.

"Since the amjority of 'mants,' like myself, in no way regret their abnormality, but would be sorry if the condition were to be changed; and, moreover, since the congenital condition, according to my own and all other experience, cannot be influenced; therefore, all our hope rests upon the possibility of a change of the laws with reference to it, so that only rape or the commission of public offense, when this can be proved at the same time, shall be punishable."

Case 118. Contrary Sexual Instinct in a Monax.—S. J., aged 38, governous, came to me for advice about a nervous trouble. Her father was temperarily insans, and died of a brain disease. The petient is an only child, and oven when quite young she suffered with feelings of anxiety and painful ideas. She thought, for example, that she would awake in her coffin after it had been closed; that at confession also might forget semething, and make a sinful confession. She suffered much with headache. She was always very much excited and approbamive, but yet she had to see horrible things, like corpses, etc.

Even in her earliest childhood, the patient was excited sexually, and began to masturbate without any teaching. The menses began at fourteen, and were always accompanied by colicky pains, violent sexual excitement, migraine, and depression. After her eighteenth year she learned to repress her impulse to masturbate.

The patient has never felt any inclination toward persons of the opposite sex. If she thought of marriage, it was only because she sought in matrimony a means of being supported. On the other hand, she felt powerfully attracted by girls. At first she regarded this inclination as friendship; but in the depth of her attrachment to female friends, and in the longing she constantly felt for them, she recognized that the faciling was something more than friendship.

The patient cannot understand how a girl can love a man, but she can easily see how a man might love a girl. She always has a brely interest in beautiful women and girls, and is powerfully excited at sight of them. Her longing had always been to kiss and embrace such dear creatures. She had never dreamed of a man, but only of girls. Her shright had been to revel in the sight of those. Separation from such female friends had always made her desperate.

The intient, whose appearance is perfectly feminine and very respectable, states that she has sever felt herself in any porticular vide with her friends, not even in dreams. Female pelvis; herge mamma; no sign of heard.

Case 117, Mrs. R., Russian, aged 35, of high social position, was brought to me, in 1884, by her husband for advice.

Father was a physician, and very neuropathic. Paternal grandfather was healthy and normal, and marked the age of sinety-six. Facta concerning paternal grandmother are wanting. All the children of father's family are said to have been nervous. The patient's mother was nervous, and suffered with author. The mother's parents were healthy. One of the mother's sisters had melancholis.

From her tenth year patient has been subject to imbitual headache. With the exception of measies, she has laid no illness. She was capable, and enjoyed the best of training, having especial talent for music and languages. It became necessary for her to prepare herself for the work of a governess, and during her earlier years she was mentally overworked.

She passed through an attack of unianchelia sine delirio, of some months' duration, at seventeen. The patient asserts that she has always had sympathy only for her own sex, and found only an esthetic interest in men. She never had any taste for female work. As a little girl, she preferred to play with hops.

She says she remained well until her twenty-seventh year. Then, without external cause, she became depressed and considered herself a bad, simful person, had no pleasure in anything, and was skepless. During this time of illness she was also troubled with imperative conceptions: that she must think of the death of herself and her relatives. Recovery after about five months. She then became a governess, was overworked, but remained well, except for occasional neurasthesic symptoms and spinal irritation.

At twenty-eight she made the nequaintance of a lady five years younger than herself. She fell in love with her, and her love was returned. The love was very senseal, and satisfied by mutual mentionbation. "I loved her as a god; her's is a noble soul," she said, when she mentioned this love-boad. It instead four years, and was ended by the (unfortunate) marriage of her friend.

In 1885, after much emotional strain, the patient became ill with symptoms of hystero-neuraethenia (dyspepsia, spinal irritation, and tonic apanisolic attacks; attacks of hemiopia with migraine and transitory aphasia; provitus pudendi et ani). In February, 1886, these symptoms disappeared.

In March she became acquainted with her present husband, and married him without taking much time for reflection; for he was rich, much in love with her, and his character was in sympathy with her own.

On April 6th, she rend the sentence, "Death misses no one." Like a fash of lightning in a clear sky, the former importative conceptions of death returned. She was forced to mediate on the most horrible manner of death for herself and those about her, and constantly imagine death-scenes. She lost rost and sleep, and took no pleasure in anything. Her condition improved. Late in May, 1886, she was married, but was still troubled by painful thoughts at that time: that she would bring mis-fortune on her husband and those about her.

First coitus on June 6, 1886. She was deeply depressed morally by it. She had had no such conception of matrimony. The husband, was really loved his wife, did all he could to quiet her. He consulted physicians, who thought all would be well after programmy. The imband was unable to explain the peculiar behavior of his wife. She was friently toward him, and suffered his careeses. In coitus, which was actually carried out, she was entirely passive, and after the act she was tired, exhausted sill day long, nervous, and troubled with spinal irritation.

A bride tour brought about a mosting with her old friend, who had lived in an unbappy marriage for three years. The two ladies trembled with joy and excitement as they sank into each other's arms, and became inseparable. The husband saw that this friendly relation was a peculiar one, and hastened their departure. He had an opportunity to ascertain, through the correspondence of his wife with this friend, that the letters interchanged were like those of two lovers.

Mrs. B. became pregnant: During pregnancy the remains of depression and imperative ideas disappeared. In September, during about the math week of pregnancy, abortion took place. After that, renewed symptoms of hystero-neurasthesis. In addition to this, there were antefexio et latero-positio dextra uteri, anomia, and atonia centriculi.

At the consultation the patient gave the impression of a very nesropathic, tainled person. The neuropathic expression of the eyes cannot be described. Appearance entirely femining. With the exception of a very narrow, around palate, there was no skeletal abnormality. With difficulty the patient could be brought to give the details of her sexual almoratelity. She complained that she had married without knowing what marriage between men and women was. She loved her husband dearly for his mental qualities, but murital intercourse was a usin to her: she did it uswillingly, without ever finding any satisfaction in it. Post actum, all day long she was weary and exhausted. Since the abortion and the interdiction of sexual intercourse by the physicians, she lad boss better; but she thought of the future with horror. She extremed her husband, and loved him mentally; but she would do anything for him, if he would but avoid her sexually in the future. She hoped to line sensual feeling for him in time. When he played the violin, she seemed to feel the beginning of an inclination for him that was something more than friendship; but it was only transitory, and she could get no assurance for the future in it. Her greatest happiness was in conrespendence with her former lover. She felt that this was wrone, but the could not give it up; for to do so made her miserable.

It is remarkable that the anomaly may be long limited to mere perversion of the sexual instinct, and that the impulse to perverse indulgence may make its appearance after some acoidental cause,—e.g., seduction, or some neurosis. Such cases might easily be mistaken for acquired contrary sexual instinct (e. sepre), if, with reference to the sexual feeling, they should not be demonstrated by the history to be original and congenital.

Case 118. Mrs. C., aged $2, wife of an official, a large, not uncomely woman, feminine in appearance, comes of a neuropathic and emotional mother. A brother was psychopathic, and died of drink. Patient was always parmine, obstinate, silent, quick-tempered, and accountic. The brothers and sisters are excitable people. Polinosary phthisis has been frequest in her family. When only a girl of thirteen, with signs of great sexual excitement, she attracted attention by enthusiastic love for a female friend of her own age. Her education was strict, though the patient secretly read many novels, and wrote innonerable poems. She married at eighteen to free herself from emplement circumstances at home.

She says she has always been indifferent toward men. In fact, she avoided balls. Female statues pleased her. Her greatest happiness was to think of marriage with a beloved woman. She was not aware of her scaust pseudority until marriage, and the thing had remained inxplicable to her. Patient did her marital duty, and here three children, two of whom were subject to convulsions. She lived pleasantly with her leasand, but she externed him only for his moral qualities. She glidly avoided coitus. "I should have preferred intercourse with a woman."

Until 1878 she had been nearesthenic. On the occasion of a sojourn at a watering-place, she made the acquaintance of a female urning, whose history I have reported as Case 6, in the Irrent/resed, No. 1, 1884.

The patient came frame a changed person. Her hashand says: "Sha was no longer a woman, no longer had any love for me and the children, and would have no more of marital approaches. She was inflamed with passionate love for her female friend, and had taste for nothing clas." After the husband forbade her lover the house, there was interchange of letters with such expressions in them as "My dove! I live only for you,my soil." There were meetings and frightful excitement when an expected letter did not come. The relation was in nowise platonic. From certain indications it is presumable that mutual masturbation was the means of sensoral satisfaction. This relation basted until 1882, and made the patient decidedly neurosthenic.

She absolutely neglected the house, and her husband hired a woman of sixty years as a house-keeper, and also a governess for the children. The patient fell in love with both, who, at least, allowed curesses, and arofited insterially through the love of their mistress.

In the latter part of 1881, on account of developing pulmously tuberenicsis, she had to go south. There she became acquainted with a Russian lady of forty years, and fell passionately in love with her; but she did not meet with a return of love in her sense. One day issually became manifest. She thought the Russian lady a middlet; that she was suggestized by her; and she presented formal persentory deliminus. She fled, and was caught in an Italian city, and placed in a hospital, where she soon become quiet. Again she followed the lady with her love, felt herself very unhappy, and planned suicide.

When she returned home, she was greatly depressed because she did not have the lady, and was contrary toward her family. A delasire, cretic state of excitement came on about the end of May, 1884. She danced, shouted, and called herself a man; demanded her former lovers, and said she was of royal blood. She oscaped from the house in male attire, and was taken to the asylum in a state of eroto-manincal excitement. After a few days the exaltation disappeared. The patient became quiet, and made a despoiring attempt at suicide; and after it she was in great anguish of mind with tactium vitae. The percense sexual feeling grew loss and less noticeable, and the taberculosis progressed. The patient died of phthisis in the beginning of 1885.

The examination of the brain presented nothing unusual as far as architecture and arrangement of convolutions were concerned. Weight of train 1150 grammes. Skull slightly asymmetrical. No anatomical signs of degeneration. External and internal genitals without anomaly.

3. Effectination and Viraginity.—There are various transitions from the foregoing cases to those making up this category, characterized by the degree in which the psychical personality, especially in general manner of feeling and inclinations, is inflornced by the abnormal sexual feeling. In this group, fullydeveloped cases in men are females in feeling; in women, males. This abnormality of feeling and of development of the character is often apparent in childhood. The boy likes to spend his time with girls, play with dolls, and help his mother about the house; he likes to cook, sew, knit, and develops taste in female toilettes, so that he may even become the adviser of his sisters. As he grows older he eschews smoking, drinking, and manly sports, and, on the contrary, finds pleasure in adomment of person, art, belles-lettres, etc., even to the extent of giving himself entirely to the cultivation of the beautiful. Since women possess corresponding inclinations, he prefers to move in the society of women.

If he can assume the vôle of a female at a masquerade, it is his greatest delight. He seeks to please his lover, so to speak, by studiously trying to represent what pleases the femaleloving man in the opposite sex,—sweetness, sympathy, taste for asthetics, poetry, etc. Efforts to approach the female appearnnce in gait, attitude, and style of dress are frequently seen.

The female urning, even when a little girl, presents the reverse. Her favorite place is the play-ground of boys. She seeks to rival them in their games. The girl will have nothing to do with dolls; her passion is for playing horse, soldier, and robber. For female employments there is manifested not merely a lack of taste, but often unskillfulness in them. The soilets is neglected, and pleasure found in a coarse, boyish life. Instead of an inclination for the arts, there is manifested an inclination and taste for the sciences. Occasionally there may be attempts to smoke and drink. Perfumes and cosmetics are abhorred. The consciousness of being born a woman, and, therefore, of being compelled to renounce the University, with its gay life, and the army, induces painful reflections.

In the inclinations of the amazon for manly sports, the masculine soul in the female bosom manifests itself; and not less in the show of courage and manly feeling. The female urning loves to wear her hair and have her clothing in the fashion of men; and it is her greatest pleasure, when opportunity offers, to appear in male attire. Her ideals are historical and contemporary feminine personalities distinguished for mind and energy,

With reference to the sexual feeling and instinct of these urnings, so thoroughly permeated in all their mental being, the men, without exception, feel themselves to be females; the women feel themselves to be males. Thus they feel themselves to be antagonistic to persons of their own sex constituted like themselves; for, of course, they are like them in form. But, on the other hand, they are drawn toward these of their own sex that are homo-sexual or sexually normal. The same jestsusy which occurs in normal sexual life also occurs here, when rivalry is threatened; and, indeed, since they are, as a rule, hyperoesthetic sexually, this jealousy is often boundless.

In cases of completely-developed contrary sexuality, beterosexual love is looked upon as a thing absolutely incomprehensible; sexual intercourse with a person of the opposite sex is unthinkable, impossible. Such an attempt brings on the inhibitory concept of disgust or even horror, which makes erection impossible. Only two of my transitional cases to the third category were able, with the help of their imagination, by thinking of themselves us men with reference to the woman, to have colabitation; but the act, which was inadequate for them, was a great sacrifice, and afforded them no pleasure. In homo-sexual intercourse the man always feels himself, in the act, as a woman; the woman, as a man. The means of indulgence, in the case of a man, where there is irritable weakness of the ejaculation centre, are simply succubus, or passive coitus inter femora; in other cases, passive masturbation, or ejaculatio viri dilecti in ore proprio. Many have a desire for passive pederasty; occasionally a desire for active pederasty occurs. In one attempt of this kind, the man desisted because of the disgust which seized him when the act reminded him of coitus.

There was never inclination for immuture persons (boyloss). Not infrequently there were only platonic desires. The sexual satisfaction of the female probably consists of anor lesbicos, or active masturbation.

Case 119, Jusobiography. "I. Descrite I am now in my twenty shird year. I have chosen the study of the technical arts as an occupation, and am completely satisfied with it. I had but the mild discases of children, while the other children, who are now healthy, had to pass through severe illnesses. My parents are both living, and my father is an advocate. He, like my mother, is, as we say, nervously hyper-sensitive. In my father's family there were two other children, who died early.

"2. My person: As for my physical parallmities, I am of robust figure, without being of especially hundroms form; eyes, gray; bair, blonds; hair and beard correspond with my sex and years. The mammaand genitals are normally developed. My guit is firm and almost beavy; my bearing, careless. It is remarkable that the breadth of the pelvis is exactly equal to that of the shoulders.

"I am naturally well endowed mentally. In one of my certificates my talents are, in fact, called "excellent." Without any particular desire to excel in them, I passed my examinations with distinction. I have an interest in everything that concerns the well-being of humanity, and in science, art, and industry. With my energy it is comparatively easy to postpone for a time the satisfaction of my desires, which will be described hereafter. Intentionally and consciously, I curse the morality of to-day, which forces those who are abnormal sexually to break laws that are voluntarily established, and regards sexual congress of two persons of the same sex as a matter depending on the choice of the individual, and a matter in which law-makers have a right to interfere. From my studies I have found the most surned inventives to comstruct, on the lasts of the Darwinian theory, after Cameri's method, a system of morals, which, to be sure, does not harmonice with the prevailing system, but which seeks to devate and improve manking in accordance with natural law.

"I think that there are not many marks of hereditary taint in me.

There is a certain hyper-sensitiveness. A very intense dream-life is perhaps important. In general, it is corupied with indifferent matters, and never has so-called sensoral images as a subject; at most, in this direction, it is concerned only with female attire and potting it on, which for me is a instful thought. At the same time, until my sixteenth year, it often went to the extent of sommunicalism, or, very frequently, as is still often the case, to local talking in sleep.

"3. My inclinations: The above-mentioned abnormal prodictly is the fundamental factor in my sexual feeling. When I am dressed like a woman, I feel perfectly satisfied. A peopling feeling of peace and confort comes over me, which allows me to work mentally with greater man-My libido for indulgence in sexual intercourse is extremely slight. Too, I have much lave and taste for female handswork, and, without assistspec, I learned to expeliet and embroider, and I like to do these things in secret. I also like other female employments, like sewing, sto ; so that at home, where I keep my proclivity perfectly concealed, and grant against indulging it by involuntary activity, I have often won the praise of being as good as a servant-girl; which did not make me ashamed, but, on the contrary, filled me with secret pride. I can make nothing out of dancing with women; I liked to dance only with my school-fellows, for which the manner of our instruction in dancing gave opportunity. But in this it gave me pleasure only when I could dance as a hely. A multitude of other desires and dreams, which seem to have something typical about them, I pass over, because they seem exactly semilier to those described in 'Psychoputhia Sexualis.' . . . . In other respects my inclinations are not different from those of my sex. I smoke and drink moferately, love delicacies, and have no pleasure in physical exercises.

" I. Developments After this brief description of my personality. I may pass on to an analysis of the developmental history of my almormelity. As soon as I was able, to some extent, to think independently, and I understood the difference between the sexes, it was my secret and fixed desire to be a girl. In fact, I believed I was one. But when in the both I saw the same genitals on other boys, the impossibility of my thought become apparent. I reduced my wish, and hoped that I was at least an hermaphrodite. And, owing to the fact that I had a certain struess about looking closely at pictures or descriptions of the gentals, this loope was cutertained, notwithstanding the fact that I had abundant coportunity to read writings on the subject, until my studies compelled me to make a closer sequalntance with the matter. During this time I rend everything I could get short hermaphreditism, and longed to be in the place of the female who, as the newspapers often reported, had been raised as a male said been restored to her sax by accident. The recognation of my mosculinity made an end of this dreaming, and did not fill me with any especial delight. I tried to destroy my sexual giands by gradual pressure, but pain soon caused me to desist. My longing is still for the external characteristics of the female sex,—for a pretty confure, a rounded breast, a stim waist.

"At the age of twelve I first laid an opportunity to put on female attire; and I soon came to drape myself, by means of hed-clothes, bedlines, etc., with female pettiecests. When I grew older, it was my greatest delight to put on my stater's dresses secretly, even if it could be but for a few moments, and with constant danger of detection. Later, much to my delight, I had an opportunity to play a female rôle in a love-scene; and it is said that I was not at all had in the part. When I began to beal an independent life as a student, I immediately obtained female dresses and linen, which I kept in order myself. When at night, safe. from discovery, I can put on one article after another, from corset to apren and bracelet, I am perfectly satisfied, and devete myself to some quiet employment, inwardly lappy and fell of delight in doing it. While dressing, an creetion usually occurs, but it is never followed by as ejaculation, and soon disappears. I also try to approximate the female appearance in externals, by arranging my hair appropriately and removing the beard, which I should have preferred to tear out.

"B. Sexual inclinations: In passing to the description of my sexual proclivities, I desire, first, to note, in general, that patiently occurred normally, as I judge from the pollutions that occurred, the change of voice, etc. Pollutions still occur regularly once every three weeks, seldom more frequently. With them I never experience any instfal feeling. I have never practiced oranism; until lately I know nothing more of it thus its name, and I had to seek direct information about it, in order to understand it. Any touch on the erect page is disturbing and painful to me, and without hestful feeling.

"Previously I behaved very shyly toward women, but I now set quietly, and associate with them as with my kind. Direct excitation, in a sexual sense, by a woman, sometimes occurred; but when I try to small zo this, it seems to me that it was never ber person, but rather her attire slove, that was effectual. I fell in love with her dress, and the thought of wearing one like it was heavenly. Thus sexual excitation never took place, not even in brothels where I was led by friends, in spite of the sight of the greatest voluptuousness and beauty. But friendly feelings for the female sex were in my heart. I imagined how, dressed as a woman and unrecognized, I could stay with them, associate with them, and take pleasure with them. I prefer the impression made on me by girls whose breasts have not yet fully developed, particularly those wearing the hair short; for such girls are more nearly like me and my aspect. Once I was so fortunate as to find a girl who felt unhappy in her sex. We formed a arm head of friendship with one another, and we often took delight in the idea of exchanging places. Perhaps it is not inappropriate or unimportant for the claracterization, to record the following: Some months ago, when the story was running through the newspapers of an Hangarian countess who, dressed as a man, had married, and fall like a man, in all correstness, I thought of effering myself to her, in order to contract an inverted marriage,—she as husband, I as wife . . . I have never attempted cours, and have never felt my desire for it. But since I foresaw that the erection necessary with a seman would be wanting, I thought of putting on some of her clothing; and I think that then the expected result would occur.

"As for my behavior toward male persons, first of all, it is to be emplasized that I had the warmest friendships during my school-days. My heart was full of Impginess, if I could do some small service for the object of my devotion. I really worshiped him possionntsly. But, on the slightest occasion, I evinced terrible jealousy; and while my unger lasted I felt as if I could neither live nor die. When reconciliation on curred, for a short time I was the happlest of creatures. I also tried to make friends of boys, whom I brilled with sweetments, and whom I should gladly have kissed. Though my love always remained platonic yet it is abnormal. An expression that I unconsciously made at that time about an elder friend, whom I worshiped, shows that. I said I loved him so that I should have liked to marry him. And even now, when I indulys but little in intercourse, I am easily taken with a imposome man with a fine heard and refined features. Yet I have never met a being feeling like myself, when I could coulde in, and with whom I could live as a female friend. I never attempted to exercise my inclinations directly, and never committed any foolish act of this kind. Finally I consed to visit museums where undo male figures were displayed; for the erections, which were sure to occur, were exceedingly annoying. I had othen secretly wished to sleep with a man, and often found opportunity. I was asked by a rather anattractive elderly man to skep with him. Com so concubut, alle genitalia men tetigit; and though his person was unattractive to me, I was filled with an intense feeling of lust. I felt as if completely surroudered to him; in a word, I felt like a BESTS BUT.

"If I may be permitted to add a concluding word to what I have already said, I wish to state expressely that, though I am occasions of the absormality of my inclinations, I have no desire to charge them; I long only for a time when, more easily and with less sharger of discovery, I can give rein to my desires and experience a delight that will harm no one."

Case 120. Miss Z., aged 31, artist, comes for consultation on account of neurosthenic symptoms. She is remarkable for cease, macroline features, a deep voice, short hair, a masculine style of dress, macroline gait, and self-consciousness. In other respects she is feminine, with well-developed mamma: and a female pelvis, and without any indication of heard. Examination with reference to contrary sexual instinct gives a sessitive result ---

The patient states that even when a little girl she preferred to play with boys, and particularly "soldier," "merchant," and "robber." She was very wild and unrestrained in these games with boys, but never had any proflicity for dolls or female employment, of which she learned only the most ordinary things (knitting, sewing).

In school she made good progress, being especially interested in mathematics and chemistry. She early had a desire for semipture, and showed inlent for it. Her greatest ambition was to become a real artist. In Ler dreams of the future, she never thought of marriage. As an artist, she was interested in landsome men, but she was really attracted only by female forms; she saw mule forms only "in the distance," She could never endors "trumpery"; "manly dress" was all that pleased ber. The ordinary society of girls was repugnant to her, because their talk about forefers, ornaments, and love-affairs with men, seemed stale and tiresome to her. On the other land, since her childhood she had had enthasiantic friendships with certain girls; at the age of ten she was in love with a girl occupanion, and wrote her name averywhere. Since then she had had numerous female friends, with whom she had indeled in passionate kissing. She pleased the girls, as a rule, because of her manculture bearing. She wrote poems to her female friends, and could have done mything out of love for them. To her it was very remarkable that she was embarramed before girls, especially when they were friends. She could not undress before them. The more she loved a friend, the more modest she was before her

At the present time size has such a relation. She kisses and embraces her Laura, walks by her window, and suffers all the pangs of justicesy, particularly when she sees her conversing with men. Her only with it to live always with this female froud.

The patient states, however, that twice in her life men have made an impression on her. She thinks that if she had been really sought, there would have been a marriage; for she is very fond of family life and children. If a man wished to possess her, it would be necessary for him to win her; she herself would prefer to win a female friend. She thinks woman is more beautiful and ideal than man. In her infrequent crotic dreams, the milject had always been a female. She had never dreamed of men. She does not think that she could now love a man; for men are false, and she herself is nervous and assemic.

She considers herself a woman in all respects, but regrets that she is not a man. Even at the age of four it had been her greatest pleasure to put on boya' clothes. She certainly had a massuline character, and, too, had never wept. Her greatest passion was for riding, gymnastics, feating, and driving. She suffered much because no one about her understood her. It seemed allly to her to talk about feminine things.

Many of her acquaintances had thought that she should really have been a man.

The patient says that she was never sensual. In embracing female friends, she had often experienced a peculiar lustful feeling. Embracing and kissing had been her only manner of expressing her friendship.

The patient states that she comes of a nervous father, and an iname mother who, as a young girl, had been passionately in love with her own brother, and had tried to induce him to fee with her to America. The patient's brother is a very eccentric, peculiar man.

The patient presents no external degenerative signs; head regular. She says the menses began at fourteen, and that they have been regular, but always pointful.

Case 121. "In order to designate at once my unhappy diseased condition with its correct name, I will state at the beginning that it bears all the marks of what, in your work, "Psychopoticia Sexualis," you have named effections.

"I am now thirty-eight years old, and, thanks to my abnormality,
I look back on a life that has been full of indescribable suffering; so that I am often astonished to think what impacity for suffering a man bus.
Of late consciousness of the suffering I have endured has become the source of a kind of self-respect, which, in itself, makes my life, in a measure, and makes.

"But I shall now codenvor to describe my condition with all truth. I am physically healthy, and, as far as I can remember, have never ladany severe illness. I come of a healthy family. But my purents are both of a very excitable nature, my father being of the so-called choleric, and my mother of the sanguine, temperament; she has a strong tendency to mild melancholia. She is a lively woman, leved for her good-beartedness and active benevolence; but she is still very dependent and deficient in self-confidence. All these peculiarities were murked in her fidher. I mention this fact, because I um told that I resemble them both; and as far as the last two peculiarities are concerned, I can myself acknowledge the resemblance. But when I made attempts, by means of my inner strength and by thinking of my own power, to rend the bond that, with resgic force, draws me to men, there was always a residuum left that I could not conflicate. As for as I can remember, I have always had this elementary longing for a male lover. To be sure, its first expressions were of a soarse, sensual nature. I do not know whether I was yet let. tears old, when, while lying in bed in the day-time, I auddenly discovered how, by pressure on my genitals, I induced a new and intextenting Seeling, while foreging that a man of my acquaintance performed sensual manipciations on me. It was only many years afterward that I fearned that this was omnism. At first I was so frightened and so depressed by the inexplicableness of my longing, that I then made my first attempt at sairide. If I had only put it into execution! For since then there has been such frequent violent sgitation of mind and body that my heart has been bound as with a classe, and made cold. I may say at once that, up to the present time, countism has not loosened me from its clutches; in has overcome all attempts and efforts to escape, and my desire to resist it is almost destroyed. Three or four times I have given it up for a month at a time, usually under the influence of mental excitement.

"When about thirtees, I had my first love. To-day it seems as if my greatest wish then was to kiss my school-fellow's fresh, rosy lips. It was a passion full of committee dreams. At the age of fifteen or sixteen a became more violent, when I first experienced the insane pangs of a judiciary which is more terrible than that of natural love can be. This second period of my life lasted for years, though I spent but a few days with the object of my passion; and then we did not see each other for affects years. Gradually my feeling cooled, and I then fell passionately in love several times with other men, who, with the exception of one, were about my own age.

"My love-if you will kindly allow this expression for a feeling condenned by the unjority of mankind-has never been returned; I have never had intercourse with a man in any way that would not bear the light of day; merer has any one shown even extraordinary interest in me, though one of my friends discovered my secret longing; and yet I have had a burning desire for masculine love. In this longing my feelings seem to me to be entirely those of a loving woman; and I notice, with horror, that my seasonal ideas grow more and more like those of a woman. During the periods when I am free from any particular love, my longing degenerates so that, in my oranistic manipulations, I conjure up only coarse, seasonal ideas. But I am still finally able to overcome these. My efforts to repress the love, however, are absolutely value. At the present time I am again suffering with such an exaggerated state of feeling that has existed for months; and I have pondered so much over its peculiarities that I think I can describe my fislings truthfully. In this way I have reade the peculiar observation that I have never loved a bearded man. From this it might easily be presumed that I am given to so-called boylors; but that is not the case. For, to the westerl charm, on closer association, a mental interest is added. With this begins the mental pain. I am seized with such a passionate longing that I am willing to sacrifice myself, in a way. I excite confidence in myself; and from this mutual feeling a heart-felt friendship might be sugendered, if deep down in my soul were not sleeping the demon which impels me to the closest of relationships, which is allowed only between human beings of opposits sex. My whole being, every fibre of my body, longs for it, and I am consumed by a bot, glowing possion I wonder that here I can again describe in underling words the feelings that coursed through my whole being. Of course, by the struggle of years, I have been forced to learn to conceal my inclination, and smile when torn by pain. For, in never having my love returned, I have learned to know all the sufferings of love. Jealousy—insane, blinding jealousy—of any and every hody who easts but a friendly glance at the object of my secret love!

"I have emphasized the mental element, in order to show how deeply rooted my almormal impulse is. I have never felt the slightest touch of sensual love for the opposite sex. The idea of being feered to associate sensually with women is repugnant to me. At times I have suffered enough on being assured of the love of young girls. Like every young man, I have ind abundant opportunity to enjoy the modern social pleasures, dancing among them. I like to dance; but if I could dance with men, as a girl, I should be really happy.

"I wish once more to remark that my love is entirely sensual. How could I otherwise explain the fact that the pressure of my lover's hand, often merely his glance, causes polyitation and erection? I have done everything to oradicate this love from my—let in any 'heart.' I have tried to still it by means of onanism; to drag it in the mire, is order to raise myself above it. (About ten years ago, during such a time of love, I avaided onanism, and felt that my feeling of love elevated me.) I still entertain the delesion that if the object of my love were to tell me be loved me, that he loved me, and only me, I should willingly give up sensual gratification to repose in faithful arms. But that is certainly a self-deception.

"Honored sir, I have a responsible occupation, and I think I can give the assurance that my absorand inclination has never, even in a hair's breadth, caused me to deviate from the duty imposed on me. Aside from this abnormality, I am not insane, and I might altimately become contented; but I have, particularly of late years, suffered too much not to look on the future with painful feeling. For the future will certainly not bring fulfillment of the desire which constantly glows under the sales,... the desire to possess a lover who understands and returns my love. Such a relation would make me traly happy. I have thought much about the origin of my abnormality, particularly because I think I am forced to assume that it was not inherited. I believe that outgrien less changed the labora feeling into a barning passion. I might long ago have jut so end to my misery, since I have no fear of death, and since in religion-which, strange to say, has not departed from my impire heart-I find no warning against suicide. But the consciousness that I am not alone responsible, and that a worm has nipped my whole life in the bod,-a certain comfort that has spring up of late out of indescribable suffering .- lends me to see whether comparative happiness in life cannot be obtained on an entirely new base; something which fills the whole heart. I think I could be happy under the influence of unlet family life. But I dare not conceal from you the fact that the thought of married life with a wife is terrible to me, and that I make the attempt of a change of life with a blooding heart; for thus I absolutely absolute to the hope that is always awake; namely, the delusion that fate may yet bring me the desired happiness

"This delision is so deeply moted in me that I think nothing but hypnotic suggestion could help me. If you could obvise me, you would make me unspendably happy. Of course, your strictest injunction would be to abundon number. How gladly I would follow it! But if I were not to have direct physical, some mechanical, means at hand to help me, I should certainly be smalle to free myself from this vice; and this the more, because I fear that, by long years of habit, my minus has become accustomed to it. Of course, I have not escaped the effects of it, oren though they are not so terrible as they are often pictured. I suffer with mild nervenances, an, indeed, weakened, and interperiodical disturbance of digestion; but I can still endure hard work, not take a certain pleasure in it, when it is not too great. I am depressed, but I can be happy, and, fortunately, I take pleasure in my calling, and an interested in various things, particularly music, art, and belies-letters. I have never indulged in female pursuits.

"As may be seen from the foregoing, I like to associate with men, especially with those who are handsome; but I have never had intimate relations with them. A wide gulf separates me from them!

"Postscript: I forced that in the foregoing I had not described my sexual life with sufficient exectness. It consists only in outnine; but in it I abandon myself to almost all the repugnant acts that are compre-

Lended under coitus inter femora, ejaculatio in ore, etc.

"My edle is passive. When I am seized by a passion, the ideas change, and become entirely a desire to be impregnated. The struggle against such a passion is so terrible, because my mind is also implicated. I long for the closest, the most complete union that can be conveived as existing between two men,—always together, common interests, unlimited confidence, sexual union. I think that natural love is different from this only in its degree of warmth; it does not reach the beilling-point of our passion. Just now I am lighting the battle over again; with force I stifle the insure passion that has so long enthralled me. All night long I walk about, followed by the image of him I love; for love of whom I would give up all I possess. How and it is that the noblest feeling given to man—friendship—is sullied by common senseal feeling!

"I wish once more to state that I cannot come to the determination to transform my sexual life by means of sexual intercourse with the opposite sex. The thought of such intercourse fills me with repugnance and disgust."

Case 122. "I write, as well as I can, the history of my suffering, actuated only by the desire, by this autolography, to clear up to some extent the misunderstanding and errors concerning 'contrary sexual matinet' which are still so widely prevalent.

"I am thirty-even years old, and come of healthy parents, both of whom were very nervous. I only mention this, because I have often had the thought that my contrary sexual instinct came by way of inheritance; but this is nothing more than vague. Of my grandparents, whom I did not know, the only remarkable thing I can mention is, that my insternal grandfather was known as a great Don Juan.

"I was rather a weak child, and during my first two years suffered severely with fits, as a result of which my understanding and memory may have suffered; for I learn but storely things which do not particularly interest me, and easily forget them. I may also mention that, during the time before I was born, my mother was subject to violent mental archtement, and was often frightened. From my third year I have been perfectly well, and have escaped severe illness. Only when a boy, from the age of twelve to sixteen, I had parallar, indescribable nervous sensations, which made themselves felt in my head and fingertips, and in which it seemed to me as if my whole being were about to cease. For many years, however, these attacks have coused to occur. I am rather a powerful man, with abundant growth of hair, and in all respects masculine.

"Even when a boy of six years, I came independently to masterlate, and, until my nineteenth year, I practiced the vice quite persistently; and even now, fonte de mienz, I quite frequently resert to it, notwithstanding the fact that I understand the vileness of the pession, and always feel somewhat weakened after it. But sexual intercourse with a man does not affect me in the least; on the contrary, it gives me a feeling of being strengthened. I began school at the age of seven, and soon experienced an interso feeling of sympathy for my companions, which, however, made no other impression on me. In the Grmmslum, at the age of fourteen, my companions explained to me the sexual life of man, which, up to that time, was absolutely unknown to me; but I was not much interested in the matter. At this time I also practical mutual ossaism with two or three friends who had solured me into it; and it had an extraordinary charm for me. I was still perfectly unconscious of the perversity of my sexual instinct, and considered my rices as sins of youth, like those committed by all boys of the same age. Interest in the female sex I thought would come in time. became nineteen years old. During the following years I fell innately in love three times, once with a very hundsome actor, then with a back employe, and with one of my friends, the last two being men who were nothing less then beautiful, and calculated to excite sensual feeling. But this love was merely platonic, and opposionally found expression in glowing postry. It was, perhaps, the most perfect period of my life; for I regarded everything with pure, innocent eyes. In my twenty-first year

I gradually began to notice that I was not constituted exactly like my commutes; for I found no pleasure in mescaline pursuits. I had but little liking for smoking, drinking, and eard-playing, and I was frightened to death by a brothel. I have never been in one; I was always able to avoid visiting one on some pretext or other. But I now began to think about myself; I often feit terribly tosesome, misseable, and unhappy, and longed for a friend constituted like masself, without, however, ever thinking that there could be other men like me. At twenty-two I made the acquaintance of a young man who finally explained to me contrary sexual instinct and the individuals affected with it. He, being also an uming, was in love with me. It was as if scales had fallen from my open; and I bless the day this explanation came to me. From that time I saw the world with different eyes; I saw that many others were given the same fate; and I began to learn to content rayself with this lot as well as I could. Unfortunately, I did not succeed very well, and I am still often seized with hitterness and a deep latral of the modern ideas which treat us poor araings with such terrible harshness. For what is our fate? In most raises we are not understood, and are derided and despised; and even when all goes well, and we are understood, we are still pitied like avalids of the issesse, and pity was always sickening to sie. I now began to play a port, in order to deceive my fellow-men as to my state of mind; and it always gave me great satisfaction to succeed in this. I made the acquaintance of several men like myself, with whom I established relations, which, however, never lasted long; for I was very fearful and cautions; but, at the same time, I was very particular and easily wearied.

"I have always absolutely despised pederasty as something unworthy a man, and I only wish that all those like me would do the same; but, unfortunately, with many this is not the case. If all like me thought as I do, then the contempt and scotling of men that feel differently would be a still greater injustice to us thun it now is.

"Toward the man I love I feel completely like a woman, and, therefore, in the sexual art I am quite passive. In general, my whole sensibility and feeling are feminize. I am vain, coquettisk, food of ornament, and like to please others. I love to dress myself beautifully, and, in cases where I wish to please. I even make use of the arts of the toilet, in which I am quite skilled.

"While I have but little interest in politics, I am passionalsly fond of music and an inspired follower of Richard Wagner. I have noticed this preference in the majority of us; I find that this music is perfectly is secord with our nature.

"I play the violin quite well; I like rending, and read much, but I have little interest in saything else. Everything else in life is quite indifferent to me, owing to the deep resignation that more and more takes presented of me. "Even though I should have reason to be satisfied with my fate, in that I have an assured position in a technical employment in a large city of Germany, still I take no pleasure in my calling. I should be best swited if, independent and free, I could travel about with a handsome lover, and live for music and literature, particularly for the theatre, which seems to me to be one of the greatest pleasures. A connection with a court theatre I think of as being very acceptable.

"The only position or calling that seems really desirable to use in that of a great artist,—singer, actor, painter, or sculptor; and it seems to use that it would be even finer to be been to the throne of a king,—a wish that is in harmony with my pronounced desire for power. (If there is really such a thing as transmigration of souls, a subject I have studied much, and which seems to me to clear up much, I must have fixed at one time as an emperor, or rules of some kind.) But a man must be been to all this; and since I am not, I am without ambition for so-called social honors and distinctions.

"As to my tastes, I must mention a painful dissension there is in them. Handsome, intellectual young men of at least twenty years, who must be of my own social station, seem to me to be smited rather for platonic love; but with them I satisfy myself completely with a simirtiforward, though ideal, friendship, which seldem goes beyond a few kisses. But I can be excited sensially only by coarse, powerful men that are at least of my own age, and mentally and socially beneath me. The reason for this strange phenomenon may be that my pronounced feeling of share and my imute apprehensiveness, with my cartious disposition, have the effect of an inhibitory idea with men of my own social position; ea that with them it is with difficulty and saldom that I can induce sexual excitement in myself. Tint this diversity is painful to me is owing to the fact that I am always afmid to discover myself to these simple men, below me in station, who may often be bought with morey. But I care not imagine anything worse than a scandal, which would at uncedirive acto spicide. For I can think of nothing more terrible thus, through some slight act of carelessams or the eamity of any man, suddenly to be henceful before the world, and to be powerless to avert it. But what is it that we do that is so different from what normally constituted mes can do, at least, quite as frequently without embarrassment, and without sharte? That we do not feel as the growd feels is not our finalt, but a ernel trick of Nature.

"Innumerable times I have puzzled my brain to know whether science, or any of her free and unperjudiced devotees, could think of any way in which to give us step-children of Nature a more endurable position before the law and mankind. But I have always reached the same self-conclusion, that when one enters the lists in behalf of snything, he suest first know thoroughly, and be able to explain, that for which he contends. And who is to-day able to perfectly explain and define contrary sexual instinct? Yet there must be some correct explanation of it; there must be some way in which the muse of mankind can be brought to a milder and more seasonable judgment of it; and, first of all, there must be some way to show that contrary sexual instinct should not be regarded as meaning the same as polerasty, as the majority of men—I may say all—regard it. By such an act a non might erect for himself as immortal monument in the gratitude of thousands of men of present and future generations; for there have been, are, and will over be, urnings, and in greater number than perhaps has been enspected.

"In Wilbrand's work, ' Fridolin's Secret Marriage,' I find a very plausible theory given in explanation of this matter; for I myself have repeatedly had opportunity to observe that all urnings do not love men with the same intensity, but that there are innumerable sub-varieties .from the most feminine man to the man of centrary sexuality who is equally sensitive to female charms. This may also account for the socalled difference between congenital and acquired contrary sexual instinct, which in my inadequate opinion, does not exist. Yet, in all the fifty-five individuals I have become acquainted with in the three years since I come to inderstand this matter, I have met the same peculiarities of temperament, disposition, and character. Almost all of them are more or less idealists; they smoke but little, or not at all; they are higoted, vain, desirous of admiration, and superstitious; and, unfortunately, I must confess that they combine more the defects and the reverse sides of both sexes than their good qualities. For woman in a sexual role I experence a feeling of true horror, which I could never overcome, even with the bein of my extremely lively inagination. I have never attempted it, because I am thoroughly convinced of the fruitlessness of such an attempt, that seems to me nunatural and sinful.

"In purely social and friendly relations, I like to associate with ladies and girls, and I am gizely welcomed in ladies' society; for I am much interested in the fashious for ladies, and know how to talk of such things with great skill. When I wish to, I can be very gay and amiable; but my fashity for conversation is, for the most part, only assumed, and it always tires me. I have always laid great skill in female work, and shown interest in it. As a child, and up to my thirteenth year, I was passionately fond of playing with dolls, whose clothes I made myself; and it still affords me much pleasure to work at beautiful embroidery, which, unfortunately, I can do only in secret. I have the same preference for knick-knacks, photographs, flowers, sweetnesse, tollet-articles, and such feminine things; and my room, which I arranged and decorated myself, is like the over-crowded bundels of a lady.

"An particularly researcable, I wisk still to mention that I have never suffered with pollutions. I dream very much, and intensely, almost every night; occasionally I have bacterious dreams, which have only men as subjects, but I always wake out of them before it comes to ejuculation. In reality I am not very passionate nexually, and I have periods lasting from four to six weeks, in which I have almost no sexual desire. Unfortunately, these periods are infrequent, and they are usually followed by an awakening of my intense sexual desire that is only the more violent; which, when it is unsatisfied, course intense physical and mental suffering. I then become mucely, depressed, sensitive, irretable, and retiring; peculiarities, however, which, with the first opportunity I have for sexual gratification, again disappear. I must mention, also, that often, on the slightest occasion, my mood may change several times during the day; it is like April weather.

" I dence well, and like to; but I love dancing only for its rhythmical movement, and because of my partiality for munic,

" In conclusion, I wish to speak of something that always arouse repognance in me. We are usually considered diseased, and that is absolutely incorrect. For in every disease there is a means of sure or amelioration; but no power in the world can take from an urning his perverse natural constitution. Even suggestion, which has been used with so much apparent success, cannot induce any cudaring change in the mental life of an urning. In us, effect is mistaken for cause. We are considered diseased, because in time the majority of us really become ill. I am almost convinced that two-thirds of us, in later life, when we really live so long, have a mental defect of one kind or another; and this is only too easily explained. For, what strength of will and nerves is required for one to constantly dissimulate, lie, and play the hypocrite all his life! How often in the accepty of normal men, when the conversation turns to contrary sexual instinct, must one agree with the words of abuse and contempt, while every one of them wounds the heart. On the other hand, there are always the tiresome and indepent Jakes and talk about women, etc., that must be heard; and which to-lay, in so-called 'good society,' are popular and to show interest and give attention to them! Daily and hourly to see so many handsome men to whom one cannot reveal himself; to be compelled to go without a friend, intercourse with whom we desire so much; and besides, constantly the fearful anxiety of betraying one's self before the eyes of the world, and then standing covered with ignominy and shame! It is really no wonder that the majority of us are inrapable of real work; for we need all our strength of will and power of endamace for the struggle with our own fate. How injurious it is to our nerves constantly to be compelled to abut up all these thoughts and feelings in our hearts; where our lively fancy, feeding on it all, plays all the more intensely, so that we go about with a burning fire within us that only too often threatens to consume us! Happy are those of us that are never desied the strength to lead such a life; but those, too, are happy that have passed beyond it."

Case 123. distolography. "In what follows, you will find the description of the character, as well as the mental and sexual disposition, of an arring,—i.e., of an individual was, in spite of his mascaline form, feels as a woman, whose senses women do not excite, and whose sexual desires are constantly directed toward men.

"Convinced that the origins of our existence can be solved, or, at least, illuminated, only by the unprejudiced thought of scientific men, I describe my life only with the aim of perimps clearing up this cruel error of Nature, and possibly doing a kindness to people like me to come in later generations; for there will be urnings as long as men are form, just as it is a fact that they have existed in every age. With the progress of science in our epoch, men will see in me and those like me not objects of intred, but objects of pity, which deserve not the edium, but the composition, of their more fortunate brothers. I shall be as letter as possible in my communication, and also objective; and, with reference to my emistic, often cynical, style, I may note that, above all, I shall be housed, and, therefore, not avoid strong expressions; for they are most happily arised to the subject in hand.

"I am in my thirty-dith year; a merchant, with a fair income; somewhat above average height, slim, weak of anuscie, with full beard, and quite ordinary face, and, at first night, in nowine different from ordinary men. On the other hand, my guit is feminine, and particularly mineing in fast walking; the movements are awkward and displeasing, indicative of a want of musty feeling. The voice is neither feminine nor shrill, but rather a luritone.

"This is my external appearance.

"I do not smoke or drink, and can neither whistle, ride, do gynmatic feats, fence, nor shoot. I have absolutely no interest in horses or dogs, and have never had a gun or sword in my hand. In inner feeling and sexual desire. I am completely a women. Without thorough education,—I passed through but few classes in the Gynmasiam,—I am yet intelligent, like to read well-written, improving books, and have good judgment; but I allow myself to be carried away by the feelings of the moment, and I am easily influenced by any one who knows my weakness and how to make use of it. Constantly making resolves, I have never the energy to carry them out; like a women, I am moody and nervous, often irritated without reason, and sometimes mean. Toward persons that do not please me, I am arrogant, mjust, and often shamefully insulting.

"In all my conduct I am superficial, and often frivolous, and I have no deep moral feeling. I have little consideration for purents and lepthers and sisters. I am not egotistic, but, on occasion, self-earli-ficing. I cannot withstand tears, and can—like a woman—be won by amiability and entreaty.

"In my carriest years I avoided playing soldier, gymmatics, or the rough games of my manly contrades, and ran about with lattle girls, with whom I was much more in sympathy than with boys. I was retiring, hashful, and often blashing. When no more than twelve or thirteen years old, the close-fitting uniform of a handsome soblier gave me the most peculiar feeling; and while, during the next few years, my commutes were always talking about girls, and even engaged in tove-affairs, I could, for hours at a time, run after a well-built man with well-rounded hips, and least my eyes on the night.

"Without thinking much of these impressors, so different from the feelings of my committee, I began to masturbate, always during the act thinking of a heroic, bandsome form; and this continued until my arrenteenth year, when I learned from a companion constituted like myself a true explanation of my condition. Since that time I have been with girls eight or test times; but, in order to have an overtion, it was always necessary to think of a handsome man of my acquaintance. And I am thoroughly convinced that to-day, even with the help of imagination, I should be analyte to inve intercourse with a girl.

"Shortly after my discovery I perferred to associate with mature, powerful urnings: for at this time I had neither mind nor opportunity to associate with real men. Since this iny taste has changed entirely, and men, real men, of iwenty-five or thirty-five years, with supple, powerful forms, are the only ones that ravish my senses, and charm me as if I were a woman. Commistances have allowed me, during those years, to make about a dozen male acquaintabous that would serve my purpose for s guiden se two a visit. If I am alone in a room with a hardsome youth, my greatest pleasure is membrum eins vel maxime si magnum atque crasson est, manitus espere et apprehendere et premere, targestes nates femoraque langere alque totam corpus manibus contrectare et. si concollitar, or fariera stone totam corpus, immovero nates, anisatilma osculis obtegere. Quodsi membrum magnum purumque est, dominimque cjus mihi phoot, ardente litéline mentuhm ejas in és meun receptam complures horas segere possum, neque natem delector, si semes in or meum elaculatur, cum maxima comm qui "urninga" nominantur para har pence mode delectator, sed clim senses nonnungara deveest.

"The most intense delight, however, is experienced whos I find a real man, qui membran mean in as recepit et crectionem in ore suo conredit.

"Improbable as it sounds, I am yet able to find some course follows who will allow themselves to be used for this purpose. They learn the thing while in military service, for urnings know that under such riccumstances they can be under to do the most for money; and when the fellows are some trained, circumstances often compel them, in spite of their passion for the opposite sex, to continue the practice.

"With certain exceptions, uralings make no impression on me, become everything feminion is repregnent to me. At the same time, there are some that know how to give me the most intense pleasure, just as a real man carry and I project to consort with them, for the reason that sametimes they return my passionate careases. In this dails with such a person, I throw all check from my excited senses, and give my animal passions free prin, osculor, premo, amplector com, linguam meno in os cins immitto : ere oupiditate tremoute ejus labrum superius sugo, faciem meam ad ejus nates adpono et odore voluptari e natitus enamento voluptate obstupescor. Real men, in close-fitting uniform, make the despest impression on me; and if I have an opportunity to embrace and kiss such a ravishing fellow, ejaculation takes place at core, a weakness which I attribute to my frequent musturbation. In my ourlier years I seneticed it very frequently, almost every time I saw a man pleasing to me, whose image I kept before my eye during the act. For this my taste is in newise difficall to please-like that a servant-girl might have in finding bee ideal in a dragoon guard. A handscene flere is a pleasant supplement, influsing my sensual desire, but in no respect an essential. The regulate reasins: tir infetions corporis parte rebusta et bese fermosa, turgidis femoribus durings natibus, while the upper portion of the body may be slim. Corpalence disguets ms. A sensual month with pretty treth affects me more intensely, and if the person has also a membrum pulchrum magnum et squaliter formation, all my demands-the most far-reaching-are felfilled.

"When I was younger, with men that pleased use and excited my passions intensely, epochation took place from five to eight times in a night, and now it occurs from four to six times; for I am unusually strong sensually, and, as an example, even the clinking of a hossar's sword may excite me. At the same time, I have a very lively finey, and speal most of my leisure bours thinking of handsoms men with strong limbs; and I would be delighted to look on when a powerful follow, using force, magna mentula practitus me presente puchlam fatuat; mild persuasum sex, force at hos aspectu sensus nel velomentiasima perturbations afferiamms et dans futuat corpus adolescentis pulchri tangum et, si licear, accudam in cam dam cam puchla concumbit stage idem cam so faciam et membrum meum in ejas mans immittam. The accomplishment of these cynical idems—with which my mind is often filled—is hindered only by my limited means; otherwise, I should long ago have leaf the reality.

"Soldiers have the greatest charm for me, but I have also a weakasse for butchers, fakirs, drivers, circus-riders, and boxt-exptains; and all these must be supple and powerfully built. Urnings I hate in intimate relation, and for the majority of them I have an inexplicable and unjust aversion. I have never had but one urning for an intimate friend. On the other hand, the most affectionate and enduring ties bind me to men of my own age, in whose eccupany I delight, but with whom I have no sexual relations, and who have no idea of my condition.

"Talk on politics and economies, like every other earnest subject, I late; though I goesip with considerable sense and peculiar pleasure about the theatre. At operas I see myself on the stage, feel myself applicated by the public, and would prefer to sing as a passive heroins, or in the dramatic role of a woman.

"The most interesting subject of conversation for me, and these like me, is, however, always—men; for us this is inexhaustible. Their secret charms are described in the most minute details, manuals sestimantur, quanta sint magnitudine, quanta, crossitudine; de forms carum stque rigiditute conferimus, alter ab altero cognoscit cujus sessen celerius, cujus tardina speculatur. I may add that, of my four teathers, one gave himself to the service of urnings, without himself being one; and all four are ladies' men, and indulgs in sexual excesses. The genitals of the men of our family are, without exception, unusually developed.

"In conclusion, I repeat the words with which I began these lines. I could not choose my expressions, because my object in the foregoing has been to afford material for the study of the unning's existence, and absolute truth was essential. I beg the numerous cyules to keep this circumstance in mind."

In October, 1870, the writer of the foregoing lines presented himself to me. In all essentials his appearance corresponded with his description. Genitals large, with abundant growth of hair. His parents had been well nervously. One brother had shot himself on account of nervous trouble; three others were intensely nervous. The patient came to me in a state of despair. He could not endure such a life any longer; for he had been admonished about interpourse with men that could be bought; and with his extreme sensual nature he was anable to abstain. Too, he could not understand how he could be made to love women, and enjoy the nobler joys of life. He had had love for men since his thirteenth year.

He felt in all respects like a woman, and longed to be won by mm that were not armings. When he was with an urning, it was just as if two girls were together. He would prefer being sexless to living longer as he was. Would not exstration help him?

An attempt at hypnosis with the highly excited patient induced only a very slight degree of lethargy.

Case 124. B., waiter, aged 42, single, was sent to me by his physician, with whom he was in love, as one who was suffering from contrary sexual feeling. B. very willingly, and in a decent manner, gave a history of his past life, especially of his sexual life, and was glad at least to have an authoritative opinion concerning his sexual condition, which had always appeared to him abnormal.

B, knew nothing to report of his grandparents. His father had been a passionate, excitable man, a drinker, and always very sensual.

After he had begotten twenty-four children by one wife, he was divorced from her; and after that his handhely became three times pregnant by him. His mother was healthy.

Of the twenty-three children, but six were living; several were nervous, but not sexually abnormal, with the exception of one sister, who always sought men.

B. asserts that from childhood he was sickly. At eight his sexual life began. He masturbated, and became possessed of the idea penenallorum pearcrum in or arrigers, which gave him the greatest pleasure. At twelve he began to fall in love with men, usually with those between thirty and forty, with moustaines. Even at that time his sexual desire was greatly developed, and he had erections and pollutions. From that time, indeed, he musturbated daily, and during the net thought of a beloved man. Yet his greatest delight had been popen viri in os arrigore. During the act he had ejsculation, with an intense feeling of pleasure. Only about twelve times had be had this pleasure. He had never felt disgust with the penis of another sympothetic man; quite the contrary. He had pover accepted proffers of pederasty; actively or passively, it was very disgusting to him. In the perverse sexual not be had always thought of himself in the rife of a woman. His possion for mon in sympathy with him had been unbounded. He would have done everything for a lover; even at the sight of him he would tremble with excitement and joy.

At nineteen he often allowed himself to be taken by his commides to homes of prostitution. He never had picasure in coltus, and only in the moment of ejeculation fell satisfaction. In order to get an erection with a woman, it was always necessary, in the set, for him to think of a beloved man. He would always have preferred to have the woman allow immissio peuts in so, which, however, was always denied him. Fouls de useus, he had practiced coltus, and, indeed, twice became a father. The last child, a girl of eight, had already begun to practice mustarbation and mutual omnism, which troubled him very much as a father. He wished to know whether there was any remedy for it.

The patient asserted that he always felt himself toward men in a feminine rôle (also in sexual intercourse). He had always thought that his sexual perversion but resulted from his father's wishing to beget a girl when he beget him. His brothers and sisters had always joked him on account of his feminine manners. Sweeping and house-cleaning had always been pleasant occupations for him. His activities in this direction had often been wondered at, and be was considered more skillful than a girl. Whenever he could, he dressed like a women. At the carnival he appeared at the dances masked as a female. He was very successful at coquetry on such occasions, because he had a feminine nature.

He had never had real pleasure in drinking, smoking, or in masculine occupations or pleasures; but, on the other fined, he leved to sew, and as a child had often been soulded for his playing with dolls. His interest at the circus or theatre was confined to men. Frequently be could not overcome the impulse to hang around water-closets, in order to get sight of male genitals. Feminine clarums had never pleased him. Coits had been possible only when he thought of a beloved man. Necturnal pollutions were always induced by hastivious dreams of men.

In space of much accumi excess, B. had never suffered from neurosthenia sexualis, and, besides, there was not a symptom of neurosthenia discoverable in him.

Patient is delicate, and his whiskers and moustrabe, which made their appearance is his twenty-eighth year, are then. Externally, with the exception of a weaving goat, he presents nothing which would point to his femisine enture. He asserts that he has often been joked about his femisine galt. His conduct is in all respects decent. His genitals are large, well developed, and normal in all respects, and the growth of genital limit is absorbed; the polvis is masculine. The bend is rachitic, somewhat hydroexplanic, with prominence of the parietal boars. The face is remarkably small. The patient says that he is irritable and easily angered.

Case 125. On May 1, 1888, G., Ph.D., and a writer, was brought to the clinic for mental discusses, at Grax, by the public authorities. While on his return from Italy, G. found a soldier in Grax who gave timed of up to him for him, but attimately denomined G. to the police, because G. Indi openly confessed his love for men. The authorities considered his mental condition doubtful, and sent him to attends for examination. To the physicians G. related, with cyulcal openness, that years before, in M., to had had yest such an affair with the police, and was in prison fourteen days. In the South there was an danger from such people; it was only in Germany and Austria that the thing was regarded as an evil.

G. is fifty years old, tall, powerful, and has a humerom expression, and a cynical, coquettish manner; the eye has a neuropathic, swimming expression; the teeth of the under jaw stand far back from those of the apper jaw. The remains is normal, the voice mascaline, and the beard abundant. The generals are well formed, though the testicles are somewhat small. With the exception of slight emphyseum of the lungs and external fishals in ano, there are no remarkable anomalies of the vegetative organs. G.'s father was subject to periodical insunity. His mother was a high-strong person, and she had an insune sister. Of the children, four died in childhood.

With the exception of seredious, 6, asserts that he was healthy. He obtained the degree of Domor of Philosophy; at twenty-live, he had hemophysis, and went to Italy, where he has since lived, with slight interruption, by writing and by giving private lessons. G. says that he often has congestions, and also some spiral irritation,—i.e., pain in his back,—but otherwise he has a genial disposition; only he is not much of a financier; and at the same time, like all oid prostitutes, he has a very good appetite. Further, he states, with great satisfaction and remarkable expicion, that he has congenital contrary sexual instinct. When only five years old, it was his greatest pleasure to get eight of a peaks, and be heng about appropriate places, in order to enjoy that pleasure. Even before polerty he practiced masturbation. At the time of pulerty he naticed an inward feeling for framils. An obscure impulse pointed out to him the way his love would take. He was actually impelled to kiss young men, and now and then to carees their generals. When twentysix years old, he first began to have sexual intercourse with men, toward whose he felt like a woman. Even as a child, it was his greatest delight to get on female attire. He was often clustified by his father because, in the effort to satisfy this impulse, he put on his sister's clothing. If he happened to see a bullet, only the male dancers interested him. Since he could remember, he had laid a horror funion. If he happened to visit a brothel, it was only to see young men. He was, indeed, a rival of prostitutes. If he saw a young man, he just looked at his eyes; in case these pleased him, then came the month-whether it was well formed for kissing; then he would look at the genitals-whether they were well developed. G. pointed, with great fieling of self-satisfaction, to his poetical works, and tried to make it appear that persons with natures like his were poetically endowed. He gave as examples Voltaire, Frederick the Great, Eugene of Savoy, and Plato, as well as numerous distinguished men of the present, who, according to his opinion, were urnings. His greatest pleasure was to have a sympathetic young mon read his verses to him. During the last summer he had had such a lover. When he had to part with him, he was quite undone, and he did not eat or sizen until gradually he had regained his former condition. He said that the love of armings was a passionate, inner firs. According to his statement, in Naples the effendacin lived in a quarter together, just as in Paris the genetics live with their lovers. They sacrifier themselves for their lovers, and care for the bouschold, just as the gracettes do. On the other hand, an urning repels an urning, "just as one prostitute does mother-that is tive outroo."

The need of intercourse with males occurs about once a week with G. He is happy in his peculiar sexuality, which he, it is true, considers peculiar, but which he will not regard as abnormal or wrong. He thinks that nothing remains for him and those like him but to raise what is monatural in themselves to the supernatural. He looks upon the love of uraings as the higher, the ideal, as godlike, an abstract love. When shown that such a love is far from the purpose of Nature and the preservation of the race, he expresses the pessimistic thought that the world should die out, and the earth turn result its axis without men, who were on it only for trouble. As reason and explanation of his minutural sexual feeling, G. refers to Plato, "who certainly was no beast." Plate expressed allegorically the idea that men were originally halls. The gods had divided these into two benispheres. For the most part, man is suited to woman, but sometimes man to man. In the latter case, the impulse to union is quite as powerful as in the former, and they strengthen each other in the same way. G. further relates that his dreams, when they were crotic, never had women, but only men, for their subjects. Mahe-love was the only kind that could satisfy him. He considered it disgusting for one human being to be prodding about in the abdomen of mother with his penis, since he had bound that in this disgusting fashion ceitus was usually carried out. He had never had the curiosity to inform himself concurring the female genitals; the subject was disgusting to him. The includence of his sexual appetite he did not consider a vice, but the result of a natural impulse which compelled him to it. It conduced to self-preservation. Onesiam was a poor substitute, and, moreover, injurious, while nating-love was morally elevating and conducive to physical well-heing.

With moral indignation, which in contrast with his cynicism in other directions appeared ridiculous, he protested against the classification of urnings with those who included in pederasty. He tooked on the polex with disgust, as it was a secreting organ. The intercourse of urnings always took place in front, and was combined consists.

This was the extent of G.'s disclosures, whose mental condition was certainly congenitally abnormal. As proof of this, may be cited his cynicism; his incredible frivolity in his application of his view to religiou, in which direction we cannot follow him without overstapping the bounds set by scientific impairy; his perverse philosophical ideas with reference to his sexual perversion; his perverse number of looking at the world; his ethical defect in all directions; his engalemdage; and his perverse mind and exterior. G. makes the impression of an original purmoise. (Personal case. Zeitschrift für Psychiatrie.)

Case 126. Taylor had occasion to examine a certain Eliza Edwards, aged 24. It was discovered that she was of masculine sex. E, but worn founds clothing from her fourteenth year, and also been an actress. The hair was worn long after the manner of females, and parted in the middle. The form of the face was feminine, but otherwise the body was masculine. The beard was enrefully pulled out. The masculine, well-developed gentrals were fixed in an upward position by an artful bandage. The condition of the annu indicated passive poternsty.

Case 127. An edicial of middle age, who for some years had been happy in family life, and was married to a virtuous woman, presented a peculiar manifestation of contrary sexual feeling.

One day, through the indiscretion of a prostitute, the following scandal became public: About once a week X, would appear in a house of prostitution, and there dress himself up as a woman always requiring, as a part of his costume, a softime. When his toilet was completed, he would be down on the bod, and have the prostitute perform manustappation. But he very much preferred to have a male person (a servant of the heaver). This man's father was hereditarily tainted, had been insone several times, and was afflicted with hypersesthesis and parasithesis severalis:

Case 125, C. E., maid-serrant, aged 26, suffered from the time of her development with original paramete and hysteria. As a result of her delesions, her life had been somewhat remarkle, and in 1884, in Switzerhad, where she had gone as a result of delusions of persecution, she came under the observation of the nuthorities. On this occasion, it was ascertained that E. was affected with contrary sexual instinct.

Concerning her persuas and relatives there is no information at land. R. asserted that, with the exception of an information of the tones at the age of sixteen, she had never been severely iii.

First menatruation at fifteen, without any difficulties; thereafter it was very often irregular and abnormally excessive. The patient declared that she sever had had melinations toward the opposite sex, and had never allowed the approach of a man. She never could understand how her friends could describe the beauty and anishbity of men. But it was charming and inspiring for her to imprint a kins on the tips of a beloved femals friend. She had a love for girls that was incomprehensible to her. Sto had passionately loved and kinsed some of her female friends, and she would have given up her life for them. Her greatest delight would have been to have constantly lived with each a friend and absolutely passessed late.

In this she felt toward the beloved girl like a man. Even as a little child, she had an inclination only for the play of boys, and she level to hear shooting and military music, was always much excited by them, and world gladly have gone as a soldier. The chase and war have been her ideals. In the theatre only feminine performers interested her. She knew very well that the whole of this inclination was unwomanly, but she could not belp it. It had always been a great pleasure for her to go about in male clothing, and in the same way she had always preferred maculine work, and had shown unusual skill in it; while with reference to feminine occupations, especially handlwork, she had to say the contrary. The patient had also a weakness for smeking and spirits. On account of persecutory delusions, in order to rid herself of her persecutions, the patient had often gone about in male attire, and played the part of a man. She did this with such (congenital) skill that, as a rule, she was able to deceive people concerning her sea.

It is authoritatively established that in 1884, for a long time, the patient went about in male attire, now in the garments of a civilian now in the uniform of a lieutessau; and in August of the same year, dressed as a male servant, she field to Switzerland as a result of delusions of persecution. There she found service in a merchant's family, and fell in love with the daughter of the house, "the beautiful Aum," who, on her side, not recognizing the sex of B., fell in love with the bandsoire young man.

Concerning this episods the patient makes the following characteristic statement: "I was modly in love with Anna. I don't know how it came about, and I cannot put myself right concerning this impulse. In this fatal love lies the remon why I played the rôle of a man so long. I have never yet felt any love for a man, and I believe that my love is for the female and not the male sex. I can in nowise understand my condition."

From Switzerland R, wrote letters home to her friend, Amelia, which were preduced at the examination. They are letters showing passionate love, which goes beyond the bounds of friendship. She apostrophases her friend, "My flower, sun of my heart, longing of my soul." She was her greatest happiness on earth; her heart was here. And is her letters to her friend's parents she wrote: "You, too, should watch your flower, for, if she should die, you also would be mable to endure life."

For the purpose of investigating her mental condition, R. remained for some time in an asylum. On one occasion, when Arms was allowed to pay B. a visit, there was no end of passionate embraces and kines. The visitor acknowledged freely that they had before secretly embraced and kinsed in the same way.

R. is a tall, slim, stately person, of feminine form in all respects, but with masentime features. Cranium regular; no snatomical signs of degeneration. Genitals normal and indicative of virginity. All the circumstances indicate that she has only indelged in platonic lave. Giance and appearance are indicative of a neuropathic person. Severa hysteria, occasional entaleptoid attacks, with visionary and definious states. The patient is very enerly brought into a state of semanthelism by hypositic influence, and in this condition is susceptible to all possible suggestions. (Personal case. Friedresch's Bittiler, 1886, Heff L.)

4. Androgyng and Gynzadry.—Forming direct transitions from the foregoing groups are those individuals of contrary sexuality in whom not only the character and all the feelings are in accord with the abnormal sexual instinct, but also the skeletal form, the features, voice, etc.; so that the individual approaches the opposite sex anthropologically, and in more than a psychical and psycho-sexual way. This anthropological form of the cerebral anomaly apparently represents a very high degree of degeneration; but that this variation is based on an entirely different ground than the teratological manifestation of hermaphroditism, in an anatomical sense, is clearly shown by the fact that thus fir, in the domain of contrary sexuality, no transitions to hermaphroditic malformation of the genitals have been observed. The genitals of these persons always prove to be fully differentiated sexually, though not infrequently there are present anatomical signs of degeneration (epispadiasis, etc.), in the sense of arrests of development in organs that are otherwise well differentiated.

There is yet wanting a sufficient record of cases belonging to this interesting group of women in masculine attire with masculine genitals, and men in feminine dress with the sexual organs of the female. Every experienced observer of his fellow-men remembers masculine persons that were very remarkable for their womanish character and type (wide hips, form rounded by abundant development of adipose tissue, absence or insufficient development of beard, feminine features, delicate complexion, falsetto voice, etc.); and, on the other hand, women that, by reason of build, pelvis, gait, attitude, heavy and decidedly masculine features, rough and deep voice, etc., had little to remind one of femininity.

We have already met some indications of such an anthropological transformation in foregoing groups, as in Case 106, where the woman had the feet of a man; and in Case 112, where there was development of mammae and production of milk during puberty.

In persons belonging to the fourth group, and in certain ones in the third, forming transitions to the fourth, there some to be a feeling of shame (sexual) toward persons of the same sex, and not toward those of the opposite sex.

Case 129. Androppiny. Mr. v. II., aged 30, single; of neuropathic nother. Nervous and mental diseases are said not to have occurred in the patient's family, and his only brother is said to be mentally and physically completely normal. The patient developed tartilly physically, and, therefore, spent much of his time at the seasobore and climatic resorts. From childhood he was of neuropathic constitution and according to the statements of his relatives, unlike other boys. His disinclination for massuline pursuits and his preference for feminine ammatus were easily remarked. Thus he avoided all borish games and gymnastic exercises, while doll-play and feminine computious were particularly pleasing to him. Thereafter be developed well physically, and except severe illnesses, but he remained mentally almoranal, incapable of an entract aim in hife, and decidedly feminine in thought and feeling.

In his seventeenth year pollutions occurred, became more frequent, and finally took place during the day; so that the pallent grew week, and manifested various nervous disturbances. Symptoms of neurathesis apinalis made their appearance, and have lasted up to the last few years, but they have become milder with the decrease in the number of pollutions. On anism is denied, but is very probable. An indefent, effeminate, dreamy habit of thought has become more and more noticeable aver since patienty. All efforts to induce the patient to take up an carnest pursuit in life were win. His intellectual functions, though formally quite undisturbed, were never equal to the motive of an independent character, and the higher ideals of life. He remained dependent, an overgrown child; and nothing more clearly indicated his original abnormal condition than an actual incapability to take care of money, and his own confession that he had no ability to use money reasonably; that we seen as he had money he wasted it for curios, tollet-articles, and the like.

Incapable as he was of a reasonable use of money, the patient was no more capable of leading a social existence; indeed, he was incapable of galeing an insight into its significance and value.

He learned very poorly, spending his time in tollettes and artistic nothings, particularly in painting, for which he evinced a certain especiality; but in this direction he accomplished nothing, since he was wanting in perseverance. He could not be brought to take up any entrest thought; he had a mind only for externals, was always distracted, and serious things quickly wearied him. Preposterous acts, senseless journeys, waste of money, and debts repeatedly occur throughout the course of his later life; and even for these positive faults in his life he was wanting in understanding. He was self-willed and intractable, and never did well as soon as an attempt was made to put him on his feet and point out to him his own interests.

With these manifestations of an original abnormal and defective mind, there were notable indications of perverse sexual feeling, which were also indicated in the somatic habitus of the patient. Sexually, the patient felt like a woman toward men, and had inclinations toward people of his own sex, with indifference, if not actual disinglination, for females.

In his twesty second your it is assested that he had sexual intercourse with women, and was able to perform the set of colmbitation normally; but, partly on account of increase of nearesthenic symptoms which was occasional after coites, and partly on account of fear of infection,—but really by reason of a want of satisfaction,—be soon conset to include in such intercourse. Concerning his abnormal sexual condition, be is not quite clear; he is conscious of an inclination toward the male sex, but confesses, only in a shame-fixed way, that he has certain pleasurable fedings of friendship for masculine individuals, which, however, are not accompanied by any sensual fedings. The female sex he does not exactly ablor; he could even being himself to marry a woman who could have an attraction for him, by means of similarity in artistic tastes, if he could but be fixed from conjugal duties, which were unpleasant to him, and the performance of which made him thred and weak. He denied having had sexual intercourse with mea, but his binshing and embarrassment, and, still more, an occurrence in N., where the patient, some time before, provoked a soundal by attempting to have sexual intercourse with rouths, gave him the lie.

Too, his external appearance, habitus, form, gestures, manners, and dress are remarkable, and decidedly recall the feminine form and starneteristics. The intient, however, is over middle height, but thomy and pelvis are decidedly of feminine form. The body is righ in fat; the shin is well cared for, delicate, and soft. This impression of a woman in mascuthe dress is farther increased by a thin growth of heir on the face, which is sharen, with the exception of a small moustache; by the minting gait; the sky, effectionte manner; the feminise features; the awimming, neuropathic expression of the eyes; the traces of powder and mint; the curtailed eat of the clothing, with the bosom-like prominence of the upper garments; the fringed, feminine cravat; and the last breshed down smoothly from the brow to the temples. The physical examination makes unloabted the feminine form of the body. The external genitals are well developed, though the left testicle has remained in the canal; the growth of hair on the mons veneris is thin, and the latter is unneasily rich in fat and prominent. The voice is high, and without mesculine timber-

Too, the occupation and manner of thought of v. H. are decidedly feminine. He has a bouldoir and a well-supplied tellst-table, with which he spends many hours in all kinds of arts for beautifying himself. He abiters the chase, practice with arms, and such masculine pursuits, and calls himself an author; speaks with preference of his paintings and attempts at poetry. He is interested in feminine occupations, which—e.y., embreidery—he engages in, and calls his greatest pleasure. He could spend his life in an artistic and aesthetic circle of laties and gentlemen, in conversation, music, and aesthetics. His conversation is preferably about feminine things,—fishious, needlework, cooking, and household work.

The patient is well nonrished, but ansenic. He is of neuropathor constitution, and presents symptoms of neurosthenia, which are maintained by a bad manner of life, lying abed, living in-doors, and effectivationers. He complains of occasional pure and pressure in the head, and habitual obstipation. He is easily frightened; complains of occasional lassitude and fittigue, and drawing pairs in the extremities, in the direction of the lumboubdominal nerves. After pollutions, and regularly after eating, he feels thred and relaxed; he is sensitive to pressure over the spinous processes of the docal vertebra, as also to pressure along accessible nerves. He feels peculiar sympathics and antipathies for centain persons, and, when he meets people for whom he has an antipathy, he falls into a condition of pseuliar fear and confusion. His pollutions, though now they occur but seldom, are pathological, in that they occur by day, and are unaccompanied by any sensual excitement.

Opinion / 1. Mr. v. H., according to all observations and reports, is mentally an absorbed and defective person, and that, in fact, of origins. His contrary sexual instinct represents a part of his abnormal physical and mental condition.

2. This condition, in that it is congenital, is incurable. There exists defective organization of the highest cerebral centres, which renders him incupable of leading an independent life, and of obtaining a position in life. His perverse sexual instinct prevents him from exercising normal sexual functions; and this is attended by all the social consequences of such an anomaly, and the danger of satisfaction of perverse impulses arising out of his abnormal organization, with consequent social and legal conflicts. Fear of the latter, however, cannot be great, since the (perverse) sexual impulse of the putient is weak.

3. Mr. v. H., in the legal sense of the word, is not irresponsible, and neither fit for, or in need of, treatment in a hospital for the lussue. It is possible for him—though but an overgrown child, and incapable of personal independence—to live in society, though under the care and guidance of avenal individuals. Too, to a certain extent, it is possible for him to respect the laws and restrictions of society, and to judge his own acts; but, with respect of possible sexual errors and conflicts with criminal laws, it must be ampliasized that his sexual instinct is abnormal, having its origin in organic pathelogical conditions; and this circumstance should eventually be used in his favor. On account of his notorious lack of independence, he cannot be discharged from parental care or guardianship, incomuch as otherwise he would be ruined financially.

4. Mr. v. H. is also physically iii. He presents signs of slight anximia and of neurasthesia spinalis. A rational regulation of his manner of life and a tonic regimen, and, if possible, hydro-thempositic treatment, seem necessary. The suspicion that this trouble has its origin in sarry masturbation should be entertained, and the possibility of the existence of spermatorshum, that is of importance etiologically and thempositically, lies near. (Personal case, Zeitechr. f. Psychiatric.)

Case 130. Miss X., aged 38, consulted me, late in the fall of 1881, on account of severe spinal irritation and obstitute sleeplessness, in combating which she had become addicted to morphise and chloral. Her mother and sister were nervous sufferers, but the rest of the family were healthy. The trouble dated from a fall on her back in 1872, at which time the patient was terribly frightened, though, when a girl, she had been subject to muscular cramps and hysterical symptoms. Following this shork, a negrostation and hysterical neurosis developed, with predominating spinal irritation and sleeplessness. Episodically, hysterical paraplegationing as long as eight menths, and hysterical hallucinatory delirium with contrasive attacks, occurred. In the course of this, symptoms of noorphiness were added. A stay of some months in the hospital relieved the latter, and considerably improved the neuroschemic neurosis, in the treatment of which general faradization exerted a remarkably favorable influence.

Even at the first meeting, the patient produced a remarkable impression by reason of her attire, Sutures, and conduct. She wore a gentleman's hat, her hair closely cut, eye-glasses, a gentleman's cravat, a cont-like outer garment of masculine out that reached well down over her gown, and boots with high heels. She had coarse, somewhat musculing features; a harsh, deep voice; and made rather the impression of a man in female attire than that of a lady, if one but overlooked the boson and the decidedly feminine form of the pelvis. During the long time that she was observed, there were mover signs of crotocism. When questioned rencerning her attire, she would only respond that the style she chose seited her better. Gendually it was ascertained from her that, even when she was a small girl, she had had a preference for horses and musculine pursuits, and never any interest in feminine occupations. Later she developed a particular pleasure in reading, and prepared heredf to be a teacher. Dancing had never pleased her; it had always seemed silly to her. Too, the ballet had never interested her. Her greatest pleasure had always been in the circus. Until her sickness, in 1874, she had mitter had inclination for persons of the opposite nor for those of her own sex. From that time she had, what was remarkable to herself, a peculiar friendship for fermion particularly for young ladies; and she had a desire, and satisfied it, to wear late and costs of masculine style, Since 1869, besides, she had worn her hair short, and parted it on the side, as men do. She asserts that she was never sensually excited in the company of men, but that her friendship and self-sacrifice for sympathetic ladies was unbounded; while from that time she also experiesced repugnance for gentlemen and their society.

Her relatives report that, before 1872, the patient had a proposal of marriage, which she refused; and that when she returned from a sojourn at a watering-place, in 1874, she was sexually changed, and occasionally showed that she did not repare horself as a female.

Since that time she would associate only with helies, and has had a kind of love-relation with one or another, and made remarks which indicated that she looked upon herself as a near. This predilection for women was decidedly more than mere friendship, since it expressed itself in tears, jealousy, etc.

When, in 1874, she was stopping at a watering-place, a young lady, who took her for a min in disguise, fell in love with her. When this lady married, later, the patient was for a long time depressed, and spoke of unfaithfulness. Moreover, since her nickness, her relatives were struck by her desire for masculine attire, her musculine conduct, and disnelination for feminine pursuits; while previously, at least sexually, she had presented nothing musual.

Further investigations showed that the patient had a love relation, which was not purely platonic, with the laily described in Case 118; and that she wrote her affectionate letters like those of a lover to his beloved. In 1881 I again saw the patient in a sonitarism, where she had been placed on account of hystero-opticptic attacks, spinal irritation, and morphinism. The contrary sexual feeling existed anchanged, and only by the most careful watching was the judient kept from improper advances toward by fellow-patients.

Her condition remained quite unchanged until 1889. Then the patient began to field, and she died of "exhaustion." in August, 1849. The autopsy showed, in the regulative organs, anyloid degeneration of the kidneys, fibroun of the aterus, and eyet of the left overy. The frontal bone was much thickened, eneves on the inner surface, with numerous exostoses; dura adherent to realt of creation. Long dismeter of skall, 125 millimeters; internl diameter, 148 millimeters; weight of the celemators, but not alrephied, brain, 1115 grammes. The meninges deficate, easily removed. Cortex pale. Convolutions broad, not numerous, regularly arranged. Nothing abnormal in cerebrillum and great gauglia.

Case 131. Gyanndry.! History: On November 4, 1889, the stepfather of a certain Count Sandor V. complained that the latter had swindled him out of 8005, under the pretense of requiring a bond as suretary of a stock company. It was assertained that Sandor had entered into matrimonial contracts and occuped from the augitals in the spring of 1889; and, more than this, that this estensible Count Sandor was no man at all, but a woman in mule attire,—Sarolta (Charlotte), Countess V.

S, was arrested, and, on account of deception and forgery of public documents, brought to examination. At the first bearing S, confessed that she was born on Sept. 6, 1866; that she was a female, Catholic, single, and worked as an authoress under the name of Count Sandor V.

From the satobiography of this man-woman I have gleaned the following resurriable facts that have been independently confirmed:-

S, comes of an ancient, noble, and highly-respected family of Hangary, in which there have been occuntricity and family positization. A sister of the maternal grandmother was hysterical, a somnombulist, and lay seventeen years in bed, on account of funcial paralysis. A second great-ount spent seven years in bed, on account of a funcial fatal illness, and at the same time gave balls. A third had the whim that a certain table in her softes was bewitched. If anything were laid on this table, she would become greatly excited and cry, "Bewitched! bewitched!" and run with the object into a room which she called the "Black Chamber," and the key of which she never let out of her hands. After the death of this lady, there were found in this chamber a number of shawls, ormanents, lank-notes, etc. A fourth great-sund, during two years, did not leave her room, and neither washed herself nor combed her hair; then she again made her appearance. All those ladies were, nevertheless, intellectual, fixely educated, and amiable.

&lt;sup>3</sup> Comp. the expect modical opinion of this year, by Dr. Brobacher, in Prindreid, a Builter f. gar, Med., 5001, H. L.

S's mother was nervous, and could not bear the light of the moon.

From her father's family at its said she had a trace two much. One line of the family gave itself up almost entirely to spiritualism. Two blood-relations on the father's side shot themselves. The majority of her male relatives are unusually talented; the females are decidedly narrow and demostic. S,'s father had a high position, which, however, on account of his eccentricity and extravagance (he wasted over a million and a half).

Among many foolish things that her father encouraged in her was the fact that he brought her up as a boy, called her Samtor, allowed her to ride, drive, and hunt, admiring her measurable energy.

On the other hand, this foolish father allowed his second son to go about in female attire, and had him brought up as a girl. This faree ceased in his differenth year, when the son was sent to a higher school.

Sarolts-Sandor remained under her father's influence till her twelfth year, and then came under the care of her eccentric maternal grand-mother, in Dresden, by whom, when the masculine play became too obvious, she was placed in an Institute, and made to wear female attiry.

At thirteen she had a love-relation with an English girl, to whom she represented berself as a boy, and ran away with her.

Sarolta returned to her mother, who, however, could do nothing, and was compelled to allow her daughter to again become Samlor, wear male clothes, and, at least once a year, to fall in love with persons of her own sex.

At the same time, S. received a merful education, and made long journeys with her father,—of course, always as a young gentleman. She early became independent, and visited co/és, even those of doubtful character, and, indeed, boasted one day that in a brothel she had had a girl sitting on each knee. S. was often intoxicated, had a passion for masculine sports, and was a very skillful fencer.

She felt herself drawn particularly toward actresses, or others of similar position, and, if possible, toward those who were not very young. She asserts that she never had any inclination for a young man, and that she has felt, from year to year, an increasing distinct for young men.

"I preferred to go into the society of ladies with ugly, til-favored men, so that none of them could put me in the shade. If I noticed that any of the men awakened the sympathies of the ladies, I felt jenious. I preferred ladies who were bright and pretty; I could not endure them if they were fat or much inclined toward men. It delighted me if the passion of a lady was disclosed under a poetic veil. All immodesty in a woman was disgusting to me. I had an indescribable aversion for female attire, indeed, for everything feminine, but only in as far as it concerned ms; for, on the other hand, I was all cuthonissm for the beantiful sex.".

During the last ten years S, and lived almost constantly away from her relatives, in the guise of a man. She had but many finisons with lattice, traveled much, spent much, and made debts.

At the same time, she carried on literary work, and was a valued collaborator on two sound journals of the Capital.

Her position for latter was very changeable; constancy in love was entirely wanting.

Only once did such a limited last three years. It was years before that S., at Castle G., unde the sequeintence of Estim E., who was ten years older than herself. She fell in love with her, made a marriagecontract with her, and they lived together, as man and wife, for three years at the Capital.

A new love, which S regarded as a fate, caused her to sever her instrumously relations with E. The latter would not have it so. Only with the greatest escribes was S, able to purchase her freedom from E., who, it is reported, still lacks upon herself as a divorced wife, and regards herself as the Countess V.1. That S, also had the power to excite passion in other women is shown by the fact that when she (before her matriage with E.) had grown tired of a Miss D., after having spent thousands of guidens on her, she was threatened with shooting by D, if she should become untrue.

It was in the assumer of 1887, while at a watering-place, that S. inside the acquaintance of a distinguished official's fimily. Immediately she fell in love with the daughter, Marie, and her love was returned.

Her nother and consin tried in value to break up this affair. During the winter, the lovers corresponded zealously. In April, 1888, Count S, paid her a visit, and in May, 1889, attained her wish; in that Marie who, in the maintime, had given up a position as teacher—became her bride in the presence of a friend of her lover, the ceremony being performed in an arbor, by a false priest, in Hungary. S., with her friend, forgod the marriage-certificate. The pair lived happily, and, without the interference of the step-father, this false marriage, probably, would have instead much longer. It is remarkable that, during the comparatively long existence of the relation, S. was able to decrive completely the family of her bride with regard to her true sex.

S, was a passionate smoker, and in all respects her fastes and passions were manufase. Her letters and even legal documents reached her under the midress of "Count S." Site often spoke of having to first. From remarks of the father in-law, it seems that S. (and the afterward confessed it) know how to initiate a scrottom with handkerchiefs or glores staffed in the trouvers. The father in-law also, on one occasion, noticed something like an erected member on his future son-in-law (probably a pringure). Sue also occasionally remarked that the was obliged to wear a suspensory handage while riding. The fact is, S. wore a bandage around the body, possibly as a means of retaining a pringus.

Though S, often had herself shaved pro forms, the servants in the hotel where she lived were convinced that she was a woman, because the charalternable found traces of menstrual blood on her linen (which S, explained, however, as homorrhoidal); and, on the occasion of a both which S, was accustomed to take, they elabored to have convinced themselves of her real sex by looking through the key-hole.

The family of Marie make it seem probable that she for a long time was deceived with regard to the true sex of her false bridegroom. The following passage in a letter from Marie to 8., August 26, 1889, speaks in two of the incredible simplicity and innocence of this unfortunate girl. "I don't like children any more, but if I had a little Bezeri or Patsaberi by my Sandi.—ah, what happiness, Sandi mine!"

A large number of manuscripts allow conclusions to be drawn concerning S.'s mental individuality. The chiregraphy possesses the character of firmness and certainty. The characters are genuinely muscuine. The same peculiarities repent themselves everywhere in their centents,—wild, unbridled passion; intred and resistance to all that opposes the heart thirsting for love; postical love, which is not married by one ignoble blot; enthusiasm for the bountiful and noble; appreciation of science and the arts.

Her writings betray a wonderfully wide range of realing in classics of all languages, in citations from poets and prose writers of all lands. The evidence of those qualified to judgo literary work shows that &'s postical and literary ability is by no means small. The letters and writings concerning the relation with Marie are psychologically worthy of notice.

S. speaks of the happiness there was for her when by M.'s side, and expresses boundless longing to see her beloved if only for a moment. After such a happiness, she could have but one wish,—to exchange her cell for the grave. The hitterest thing was the knowledge that sow Marie, too, lasted her. Hot tears, enough to drown herself in, she had shed over her lost happiness. Whole quires of paper are given up to the apothessis of this love, and reminiscences of the time of the first love and sequaintance.

S. complained of her heart, that would allow no reason to direct it; also expressed emotions which were such as only could be felt,—not simulated. Then, again, there were outbreaks of most sully possion, with the declaration that she could not live without Marie. "Thy dear, sweet voice; the voice whose tone perchance would raise me from the dead; that has been for me like the warm breath of Paradise! Thy pressure along were enough to alleviate my mental and moral anguish. It was a magnetic stream; it was a peculiar power your being exercised over mine, which I cannot quite define; and, therefore, I cling to that evertrue definition: I love you because I love you. In the night of scrrow-I had but one star,—the star of Marie's love. That star has lost its light; now there remains but its shimmer,—the sweet, and memory which even lights with its soft ray the deepening night of death,—a ray of hope."

This writing ends with the apostrophe: "Gentlemen, you learned in the law, psychologists and pathologists, do me justice! Love led us to take the step I took; all my deeds were conditioned by it. God put it in my heart.

"If He created me so, and not otherwise, sm I then guilty; or is it the eternal, incomprehensible way of fate? I relied on God, that one day my smanripation would come; for my thought was only love itself, which is the foundation, the guiding principle, of His teaching and His kingdom.

"O God, Thou All-pitying, Almighty One! Then seest my distress; Then knowest how I suffer. Incline Thyself to me; extend Thyhelping hand to me, deserted by all the world. Only God is just. How twentifully does Victor Hugo describe this in his. Legendes du Sibels! How said do Mendelssohn's words sound to me; 'Nightly in dreams I see thee.'!"

Though 8, know that none of her writings reached her lover, she did not grow tired writing of her pain and delight in love, in page after page of deification of Marie. And to induce one mgre pure flood of tears, on one still, clear summer evening, when the lake was aglow with the setting sun like molten gold, and the bells of 8t. Anna and Maria-Worth, blending in harmonious melancholy, gave tidings of rest and peace, she wrote: "For that poor soul, for this poor heart that beat for thee till the last bruth."

Personal Examination: The first meeting which the experts had with S. was, in a measure, a time of embarrassment to both sides; for them, because perhaps S.'s somewhat dazzling and forced masculine carriage impressed them; for her, because she thought she was to be marked with the stigms of moral insanity. She had a pleasant and intelligent face, which, in spite of a certain delicacy of features and diminutiveness of all its parts, gave a decidedly masculine impression, had it not been for the absence of a moustache. It was even difficult for the experts to realize that they were concerned with a woman, despite the fact of female attire and constant association; while, on the other hand intercourse with the man Sandor was much more free, natural, and apparently correct. The calprit also felt this. She immediately became more open, more communicative, more free, as soon as she was treated like a man.

In spite of her inclination for the female sex, which had been present from her earliest years, she asserts that in her thirteenth year she first felt a trace of sexual feeling, which expressed itself in kisses, embraces, and careason, with sensual pleasure, and this on the occasion of her elopement with the red-haired English girl from the Dresden Institute. At that time feminine forms exclusively appeared to her in dream-pictures, and over since, in sensual dreams, she has felt herself in the situation of a man, and occasionally, also, at such times, experienced ciaculation.

She knows nothing of solitary or mutual counters. Such a thing seemed very disgusting to her, and not conducive to manliness. She had, also, never allowed herself to be touched ad genitalia by others, because it would have revealed her great secret. The menses began at seventeen, but were always scenaty, and without pain. It was plain to be seen that 8, land a horsor of speaking of menotraction; that it was a thing repugnant to her mescaline consciousness and feeling. She recognized the abusemality of her sexual inclinations, but had no desire to have them changed, since in this perverse feeling she felt both well and happy. The lifes of sexual intercourse with men disgusted her, and she also thought it would be impossible.

Her modesty was so great that she would prefer to sleep among men rather than among women. Thus, when it was necessary for her to answer the calls of nature or to change her lines, it was necessary for her to ask her companion in the cell to turn her face to the window, that she might not see her.

When occasionally & came in contact with this companion,-a woman from the lower walks of life, she experienced a sexual excitement that made her blush. Indeed, without being asked, S. related that she was overcome with actual fear when, in her cell, she was compelled to force herself into the unusual female attire. Her only comfort was, that she was at least sllowed to keep a shirt. Remarkable, and What also speaks for the significance of olfactory sensations in her vita sexualis, is her statement that, on the occasions of Marie's absence, she hul sought those places on which Marie's head was accustomed to repose, and smelled of them, in order to experience the delight of ininiing the odor of her lair. Among women, those who are beautiful, or voluptuous, or quite young do not particularly interest her. The physical simms of women she makes subsediente. As by magnetic attraction, she feels herself drawn to those between twenty-four and thirty. She found her sexual satisfaction exclusively in corpora femine (never in her own person), in the form of manustrurstion of the beloved woman, or cumilingus. Occasionally she availed herself of a stocking stuffed with cakum as a printus. These admissions were made only unwillingly by S., and with apparent shame; just as in her writings, immediaty or symicism are never found.

She is religious, has a lively interest in all that is noble and benetiful,—men excepted,—and is very sensitive to the opinion others may satertain of her morality. She deeply regrets that in her passion she made Marie unhappy, and regards her sexual feelings as perverse, and such a love of one woman for another, among normal individuals, as morally reprehensible. She has great literary talent and an extraordinary namony. Her only weakness is her great frirolity and her incapability to manage money and property reasonably. But she is conscious of this weakness, and does not care to talk about it.

She is 153 centimetres tall, of delicate skeleton, thin, but remarkably muscular on the breast and thighs. Her got in female attire is awkward. Her movements are powerful, not impleasing, though they are somewhat musculine, and lacking in grace. She greets one with a firm pressure of the hand. Her whole carriage is decided, firm, and somewhat self-conscious. Her glame is intelligent; misn somewhat diffident. Feet and hands remarkably small, having remained in an infinitile stage of development. Extensor surfaces of the extremities remarkably well covered with hair, while there is not the slightest trace of heard, in spite of all shaving experiments. The hips do not correspond in any way with those of a female. Waist is wanting. The polyis is so slim, and so little prominent, that a line drawn from the sxills to the corresponding knee is straight, -not curved inward by a waist, or outward by the polyis. The skull is slightly oxycephalic, and in all its measurements falls below the average of the female skull by at least one continuetre.

The circumference of the bend is 52 continuetres; the occipital halfcircumference, 24 centinetres; the line from ear to ear, over the vertex, 25 continutres; the autorior inifeiremeleners, 28.5 centimetres; the line from glabella to occupat, 20 centimetres; the exactin line, 26.5 continuetres; long diameter, 17 continuetres; greatest lateral diameter, L3 continetres; diameter at anditory meatl, 12 centimetres; avgonatio diameter, $1.2 centimetres. The upper jaw projects strikingly, its alveolar process projecting beyond the under jaw shout 0.5 centimetre. The position of the teeth is not fully normal; the right upper esnine has not daysloped. Mouth remarkably small. Ears prominent; lobes not differentiated, passing over into the skin of the check. Hard points marrow and high; voice rough and deep; measure fairly developed, soft, and without secretion. Mous veneris covered with thick, dark hair. Genitals completely feminine, without trace of hermaphroditic appearance, but at the stage of development of those of a ten-yenr-old girl. The labia resjors touch each other shoot completely; labin minors have a cock'scombilike form, and project under the labin majorn. The clitoris is small, and very sensitive. Fremalum delicate; perineum very narrow; introltus vaging enrow; mocous membrans normal. Hymen wanting (probably congenitally); likewise, the carmoule myrtiformes. Vagina so narrow that the insertion of a membran virils would be impossible, and it is also very sensitive; certainly coitus had not taken place. Uterus is felt, through the rectum, to be about the size of a walnut, immovable, and surreflected.

The privir appears generally narrowed (dwarf-privir), and of decidodly masculine type. The distance between anterior superior spines is 22.5 centimetres (instead of 26.3 centimetres). Distance between the cross of the ilii, 26.5 centimetres (instead of 29.3 centimetres); between the trochanters, 27.7 centimetres (31); the external conjugate diameter, 17.2 centimetres (19 to 20); therefore, presumably, the internal conjugate would be 7.7 centimetres (10.8). On account of narrowness of the privir, the direction of the thighs is not convergent, as in a woman, but straight.

The opinion given showed that in S. there was a congenitally abnormal inversion of the sexual instinct, which, indeed, expressed itself, arthropologically, in anomalies of development of the body, depending upon great hereditary taint; further, that the criminal acts of S. had their foundation in her abnormal and irresistible sexuality.

8.'s characteristic expressions—" God put love in my heart. If He created me so, and not otherwise, am 1, then, guilty; or is it the eternal, incomprehensible way of fate?"—are really justified.

The court granted purdon. The "countess in male attire," as she was called in the newspapers, returned to her home, and again gave berself out as Count Sandor. Her only distress is her lost happiness with her beloved Murie.

A married woman, in Brandon, Wisconsin, whose case is reported by Dr. Kiernan ( The Medical Standard, 1888, November and December), was more fortunate. She eloped, in 1883, with a young girl, married her, and lived with her as husband undisturbed.

An interesting "historical" example of androgyny is a case reported by Spitaka (Chicayo Medical Review, August 20, 1881). It was that of Lord Combury, Governor of New York, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne. He was apparently affected with moral instairty; was terribly licentious, and, in spite of his high position, could not keep himself from going about in the streets in female attire, coquetting with all the allurements of a prostitute.

In a picture of him that has been preserved, his narrow brow, asymmetrical face, fermine features, and sensoral mouth at once attract attention. It is certain that he never actually regarded himself as a woman.

Moreover, in individuals afflicted with contrary sexual instinct, in themselves, the perverse sexual feeling and inclination may be complicated with other perverse manifestations. Thus here, with reference to the activity of the instinct, there may be acts quite analogous to acts indulged in by individuals in perverse satisfaction of the instinct, but who, at the same time, have a natural inclination toward persons of the opposite sex.

Owing to the circumstance that abnormally increased sexuality is almost a regular accompaniment of contrary sexual feeling, acts of lustful cruelty in the satisfaction of libido are easily possible. A remarkable example of this is the case of Zastrow (Casper-Liman, 7. Auflage, Bd. i, p. 190; ii, p. 487), who bit one of his victims (a boy), tore his prepuce, slit the anus, and strangled the child.

Z. came of a psychopathic grandfather and melancholic mother. His brother included in abnormal sexual pleasures, and committed spicids.

Z. was a congenital urning, and in habitus and occupation maseraline. There was phimosis. Mentally, he was a weak, perverse, unsocial man. He had horror femine, and, in his dreams, he felt himself like a woman toward a mm. He was painfully conscious of his want of normal sexual feeling and his perverse instinct, and sought satisfaction in mutual onanism, with frequent desire for pedemety.

Similar sadistic feelings of this kind, in those afflicted with contrary sexual instinct, are found in some of the foregoing historics (comp. Cases 107 and 108 of this edition, and Case 96 of the sixth edition). But masochism also occurs (comp. Case 43, sixth edition; Cases 111 and 114 of this edition; and Case 3, in the first edition of "Neue Forschungen").

As examples of perverse sexual satisfaction dependent on contrary sexual instinct, may be mentioned the Greek, who, as Athenius reports, was in love with a statue of Cupid, and defibed it, in the temple of Delphi; and besides the monstrous mass reported by Tardieu ("Attentata," p. 272), the terrible one reported by Lombroso ("L'nomo delinquente," p. 200), of a certain Artusso, who wounded a boy in the abdomes, and abused him sexually by means of the increases.

Cases 56, 110, and 111, also, show that fetichism may also occur with contrary sexual instinct.

DIAGNOSIS, PROGNOSIS, AND THERAPY OF CONTRARY SEXUAL INSTINCT.

While up to this time contrary sexual instinct has had but an anthropological, clinical, and forensic interest for science, now, as a result of the latest investigations, there is some thought of therapy in this incurable condition, which so heavily burdens its victims, socially, morally, and mentally.

A preparatory step for the application of therapeutic measures is the exact differentiation of the acquired from the congenital cases; and among the latter, again, the assignment of the concrete case to its proper position in the categories that have been established empirically.

The diagnostic differentiation of the acquired from the congenital condition is made without difficulty in the early stages of the anomaly.

If sexual inversion has already taken place, then the history of the development of the case will throw light upon it.

The important decision, prognostically, as to whether the contrary sexual instinct is congenital or acquired, can only be made in such cases by means of the most minute details of the history.

The establishment of the fact that contrary sexual instinct existed before indulgence in masturbation is of great importance with reference to deciding whether the anomaly is congenital or not. In this, however, a difficulty arises, owing to the possibility of imperfect localization of past events (illusions of memory).

For the presumption of acquired contrary sexual instinct, it is important to prove the existence of betero-sexual instinct before the beginning of solitary or mutual onanism.

In general, the acquired cases are characterized in that:-

1. The homo-sexual instinct appears secondarily, and always may be referred to influences (masturbatic neurasthenia, mental) which disturbed normal sexual satisfaction. It is, however, probable that here, in spite of powerful sensual libido, the feeling and inclination for the opposite sex are weak ob origine, especially in a spiritual and aesthetic sense.

- The homo-sexual instinct, as long as inversio sexualis has not taken place, is looked upon, by the individual affected, as vicious and abnormal, and yielded to only faute de mieux.
- The hetero-sexual instinct long remains predominant, and the impossibility of its satisfaction gives pain. It weakens in proportion as the home-sexual feeling gains in strength.

On the other hand, in congenital cases (a) the homo-sexual instinct is the one that occurs primarily, and becomes dominant in the vita sexualis. It appears as the natural manner of satisfaction, and also dominates the dream-life of the individual. (b) The hetero-sexual instinct fails completely, or, if it should make its appearance during the life of the individual (psychosexual hermaphroditism), it is still but an episodical phenomenon which has no root in the mental constitution of the individual, and is essentially but a means of satisfaction of sexual desire.

The differentiation of the above groups of congenital contrary sexuality from one another, and from the cases in which the anomaly is acquired, will, after the foregoing, present no difficulties.

The prognosis of the cases of acquired contrary sexual instinct is, at all events, much more favorable than that of the congenital cases. In the former, the occurrence of effemination—the mental inversion of the individual, in the sense of perverse sexual feeling—is the limit beyond which there is no longer hope of benefit from therapy. In the congenital cases, the various categories established in this book form as many stages of psycho-sexual taint, and benefit is probable only within the category of the psychical hermsphrodites, though possible (vide the case of Schrenk-Notzing) in that of the urnings.

The prophylaxis of these conditions becomes thus the more important,—for the congenital cases, prohibition of the reproduction of such unfortunates; for the acquired cases, protection from the injurious influences which experience teaches may lead to the fatal inversion of the sexual instinct.

Numerous predisposed individuals meet this sad fate, because parents and teachers have no suspicion of the danger which musturbation brings in its train to such children. In many schools and neademies musturbation and vice are actually cultivated. At present much too little attention is given to the mental and moral peculiarities of the pupils. If only the tasks are done, nothing more is asked. That many pupils are thus ruined in body and soul is never considered. In obedience to affected prudery, the vita sexualis is veiled from the developing youth, and not the slightest attention given to the excitations of his sexual instinct. How sew family physicians are ever called in, during the years of development of children, to give advice to their patients that are often so greatly predisposed!

It is thought that all must be left to Nature; in the meantime, Nature rises in her power, and leads the helpless, unprotected innocent into dangerous by-paths.

A more detailed treatment of this prophylactic side of the subject is impossible here.<sup>3</sup>

To parents and teachers, the experiences detailed in this work, and numerous scientific works on masturbation, give suggestions.

The lines of treatment, when contrary sexual instinct exists, are the following:-

- Prevention of onanism, and removal of other influences injurious to the vita sexualis.
- Cure of the neurosis (neurosthenia sexualis and universalis) arising out of the unhygienic conditions of the vita sexualis.
- Mental treatment, in the sense of combating homosexual, and encouraging hetero-sexual, feelings and impulses.

The most important part of the treatment lies in fulfilling the third indication, particularly with reference to onanism.

Only in very few cases, where acquired contrary sexual

<sup>4</sup> With enforcer to prophylaris, the faithwing words, which were critten to me by the subject of Case 80 of the sixth edicine, are noteworthy. "If it were only possible that ent as among the Sportane, where the weaktings were allowed to perish for the sole of period scientise, in accordance with the Derwinian block-one contrary sexual instincts might be recognized early in youth; and if it were only possible that, at this time of life, the west of all diseases could be more that suggestion; Probably pure could be more easily effected to possible that later."

instinct has not progressed far, can the fulfillment of 1 and 2 be sufficient, as the following case, fully reported by the author in the Irrenfreued, 1884, No. 1, proves:—

Case 132. Count Z., aged 51, of psychopathic mother, was early wat to a military school, and there was taught omnism. He developed well, and had normal sexual feelings, but, as a result of masturbation, he became somewhat neumathenic in his seventeenth year. He enjoyed intercourse with women, was married at twenty-five, but after a year more became nearestheric, and absolutely lost his inclination for women. In its place came contrary sexual instinct. Involved in an accessition for high treason, he was sent to prison for two years, and then to Sileris for five years. In these seven years, under the influence of continued inasturbation, nearesthenia and contrary sexual instinct constantly increased. With his freedom restored at the age of thirty-live, the patient began to visit all kinds of health-resorts on account of his great neurasthenia; and this has since been his occupation. In all these years his abnormal sexual fieling has not charged in any way. For the most part, he lived away from his wife, whom, it is true, he esteemed for her mental qualities; though he avoided her, as he did every other woman. His contrary sexual feeling is parely platonic. "Friendship," sweet embraces, and kisses sufficed him. Pollutions, which occasionally occurred, were induced by inscivious dreams which had for subject persons of his own sox. Also, during the day, the most beautiful woman had no charm for him, while simply the sight of handsome men induced erection and ejaculation. Only athletes and male dancers in the circus and failer interested him. At times of greater excitability, even mosculine statues gave him erections. Now and again he resumed his old vice of masturbation. This man of asthetic culture had a horror of pederaty,

He felt, always, that his perverse sexual feeling was something abnormal, without, however, in his apparently much weakened libido and virility, feeling unhappy.

The examination gave the usual fludings of neurasthenia. Development, manner, and attire presented nothing remarkable. Electrical massage was unusually successful. After a few sittings the patient was mentally and physically much better. After twenty sittings libido was again awakened, not in the same way, but normally, as the patient had felt until his twenty-fifth year. Lascivious dreams were concerned only with women; and one that he patient joyfully gave the information that he had had coitus, and that he had had the same natural feeling in it that he had had twenty-six years before. He then began to live with his wife again, and hoped that he was lastingly fixed from neurasthenia and contrary sexual instinct. His hope was fulfilled for the six years during which I was able to keep the patient under observation.

As a rule, physical treatment, even though it be re-inforced morally by good advice with reference to the avoidance of masturbation, the repression of homo-sexual feelings and impulses, and the encouragement of hetero-sexual desires, will not prove sufficient, even in cases of acquired contrary sexual instinct.

Here a method of mental treatment—hypnotic suggestion—is all that can bring benefit.

The following case is interesting; and it is an example of successful auto-suggestion that gives encouragement for the milder forms of the anomaly:—

Case 183. Autobiography of a Psychical Hermophrodite. Successful Struggle optimit Homo-sexual Inclinations usede by the Patient himself.

—" My father once had a stroke, but has recovered save for paralysis of the face. My mother was very animic and melancholic. Both suffered severely with hamorrhoids, and my father ascribed to this trouble the landar pain with which he suffered from time to time after his marriage.

"I am, if I may so expense myself, a possive character. When a child, I indulged in all kinds of funcies, religious as well as others. I suffered with incontinence of crine, and it is said that in sleep I handled my genitals, so that my father fustened my hands to the bed! (I was then a mere child, and had not masturbated.) I was always very sby and embarrassed in social intercourse. When about fourteen or fifteen years old, I was seduced into countism. The impulse and desire for somen, occurring in connection with the awakening sexual feeling, were, in reality, only of a platonic nature; I was also without the society of holies. When about eighteen, I attempted to satisfy my sexual desire in the natural way, more in obedience to a feeling of curiosity than from inner longing. Since that time, without having experienced any real inclination for women, as often as possible I have estisted my desire by means of sexual intercourse.

"Boos after puberty I became very amenic, and appeared much older than I really was. Then come inclanciable and peculiar ideas. It was a delight to me to fancy myself humiliated in the extreme. It may be of interest to add that, at that time, I was troubled with religious doubts, and only later found the courage to rise above religions. I fell in love with young men. At first I opposed these ideas; later they became so powerful that I became a genuine urning. Women seemed to me to be human beings of the second class. I was in a state of despair. My acknowled soul was filled with technic vitic and thoughts infinitel to humanity. One day I read: "What will it come to?" And ere I know it, it was a sprintist; but on ideal one. Life again had value for me, for I had an ideal,—the joyons struggle for the social elevation of the proletariat. This caused a powerful revolution in me. As in my best years (from the age of sixteen to seventeen), I took interest in art, particularly in desmatic art. I am, at the present time, writing a play and a story, and I am occupied with the grandest thoughts. I read a remark of Schlegel's concerning Sophoetes, who was indebted to his physical exercise for his energy and creative power, and to music for his artistic proportions. In another place I read | 'The demmatist must, above all things, be mentally intact.' This depressed me; for my contrary sexual feelings could not arise in a perfectly normal mind.

"I thought of having myself treated hypocically; but shame held me back. Then I said to myself that I was a weakling, indeed, to have so little confidence in myself, and began in earnest to combat my abnormal desires. At the same time, I struggled against my nervousness by leading the proper kind of a life. I rowed, fenced, and was much in the open air; and I was delighted when, at last, I awoke and seemed to be an entirely different man. When I thought of the time from my twentieth to my twenty-sixth year, it seemed to me that, during those years, a strange and depressive being had been dwelling within me.

"I was astonished that the handsomest rider or the trimmest waiter excited in my almost no interest; even the muscular masons had no effect on me. I was disgusted when I thought that, at one time, such men had seemed handsome to me. My self-respect increased; I ms good-matured, but my character is totirely netive. Since my twentieth year my appearance has stendily improved. My appearance now corresponds purfectly with my years. There were recurrences of my abnormal inclinations, to be sure; but I struggled against them energetically. I satisfy my libide only by means of natural intercourse, and I hope that, by continuing to lead a proper life, my pleasure in natural coltus will increase."

As a rule, only suggestion coming from a second person, and that by means of hypnosis, promises any success. In such cases, the object of post-hypnotic suggestion is to remove the impulse to masturisation and homo-sexual feelings and impulses, and to encourage hetero-sexual feelings with a sense of virility. A prerequisite is, of course, the possibility to induce hypnosis of sufficient intensity. It is, unfortunately, in these very cases of neurasthenia that this is impossible, since they are often excited, embarrassed, and in no condition to concentrate their thoughts.

Thus, in a case reported by me in the International. Centralblatt für die Physiologie und Puthologie der Harn- und Sexualorgone, Bd. i, Heft 2, p. 58, it was impossible for me to induce hypnosis, though the patient desired it, and did everything to make it successful. By reason of the great benefit that can be given to such unfortunates, and with Ladame's case in view (v. infra), in the future, in all such cases, everything should be done to bring about hypnosis,—the only means of salvation. The result, in the three following cases, was satisfactory:—

Case 13t. Contrary Sexual Isstinct Acquired through Mustarbation.—Mr. X., merdiant, aged 29. Father's parents healthy. Nothing nervous in father's family. Father was an irritable, pserish old man. One brother of the father was a mon-about-town, and died unmarried. Mother died in third confinement, when the patient was six years old; she had a deep, rough, mascaline voice, and coarse appearance. Of the children, one brother is irritable, "melancholic," and indifferent to women.

When a child patient had searlet fever with delirium. Until his fourteenth year he was light-hearted and social, but, after that, quiet, solitary, and "metaneholic." The first trace of sexual feeling appeared in his teach or eleventh year, and at that time he learned masturbation from other keys, and practiced metanl cosmism with them. At the age of thirteen or fourteen, ejeculation for the first time. Patient has felt no evil results of onneism until the last three months.

In school he learned easily, but was troubled with hendsches. After the age of twenty, pollutions, in spite of daily practice of coanism. With pollutions, "procreative" dreams, as man and wife might perform the art, occurred. In his seventeenth year he was seduced into mutual onanism by a man having a love for men. He found satisfaction in this, instructs as he was always very possionate sexually. It was a long time before the patient again sought new apportunities for intercourse with males. He did it simply to rid himself of series. He felt no friendship or love for the person with whom he had intercourse. He felt satisfaction only when he played the prasive rife,-when manustripration was practiced on him. When the art was once completed, he had no respect for the individual. If it happened that, later, he came to respect the man, then he reased to include in the act with him. Later it become indifferent to him whether he masturbated or had masturbation practiced on him. When he himself practiced countem, he always thought of pleasing men poseticing counism on him during the act. He preferred a hard, rough hand.

The patient thought that, had be not been led astray, he would have arrived at a natural mode of satisfaction of his sexual desires. He never felt love for his own sex, though he had pleased binself with the thought of loving men. At first he had had sensual inclinations toward the opposite sex. He had taken pleasure in dancing, and he had been pleased with women, but he had taken more pleasure in the figure time the face. You, he had had erections at the eight of women that pleased him. He had never attempted costus, for fear of infection; whether he was potent or not with women, he did not know. He thought he could he so no longer, because his feeling for women had grown cold, especially during late years.

While previously, in his sensent dreams, he had had ideas of both men and women, of late years he had dreamed only of approaches to men; he could not remember that he had dreamed, in late years, of sensual relations with a woman. At the theatre, as well as in the circus and halfet, the feminine figure had always interested him. In museums masculine and feminine statues had affected him equally.

Patient is a great smoker, a beer-drinker, loves male society, and is a gymnast and skater. Anything dandified was repugnant to him, and he had nover felt any desire to pieuse men; he would even have preferred to please women.

He now felt his position to be painful, because counts m had obtained the upper hand. Musturbation, that had previously been practiced without evil effects, now began to disclose its feed results.

Since July, 1889, he had suffered with neurolgie of the testicles. The pain occurred particularly at night; and at night there was also trembling (increased reflex excitability).

Sleep was not refreshing, and he would wake up with pain in the testicles. He was inclined, now, to indulge more frequently in coanism. He was afmid of the consequences of the labit. He hoped that his sexual life might still be turned into normal channels. Now, he thought of the future; he had a relation with a girl, who was attractive to him, and the thought to possess her as a wife was pleasing.

For five days he had abstained from manism, but he could scarrely believe that he would be able, with his own strength, to overcome the habit. Of late he had been very much depressed, having lost all desire for work, and become tired of life.

Patient is tall, powerful, well nourished, and has a thick growth of heard. Skull and skeleton normal. Knoe-jarks very prompt; deep reflexes in upper extremities much increased. Pupils dilated, equal, and act promptly. Carotide of equal calibre; hyperasthesia prethre; confe and testicles not sensitive; genitals normal.

The patient was calmed, and given hope for the fature, provided that he give up counten and attempt to transfer his sexual desires from persons of his own sex to females.

Hip-baths (24° to 20° R.); ext. seed, count agree, 0.5; autiporin, 1.0 (pro-die); pot. brom., 4.0 (evenings), were ordered.

December 13th. To-day the patient came, in a disturbed condition of mind, complaining that, unaded, he was unable to resist the impulse to masturbate, and to asked for help.

A trial of by prosis induced a condition of deep lethorgy in the patient.

He was given the following suggestions:-

t. I can not, must not, and will not mustachate again.

2. I abbor the love for my own sex, and shall never again think men introleome.

 I shall and will become well again, fall in love with a virtuous women, he happy, and make her happy.

December 14th. While out walking to-day, petient saw a handsome use, and felt himself powerfully drawn toward him.

From this time there were hypnotic sittings every second day, with the above suggestions.

December 18th (fourth sitting), sounsimbelism occurred; the im-

December 18th (fourth sitting), sommanhulism occurred; the impulse to cranism and interest in men disappear.

At the eighth sitting "complete virility " was added to the above suggestions. The patient feels himself morally elevated and physically strengthened. The neuralgia of the testicies has disappeared. He now found that he was without sexual feeling.

He now believed himself free from musturbation and contrary sexual inclination.

After the eleventh sitting he thought that further help was unnecessary. He wished to go home, and marry. He felt well and potent. Early in January, 1890, treatment censed.

In March, 1830, the patient wrote: "I have since had several occasions on which it has been necessary for me to use all my moral strength in order to overcome my habit, and, thank God, I have been successful in freeing myself from this vice. Several times I have had opportunity for sexual intercourse, and I have found pleasure in it. I look calmly on my happy future."

Case 135. Acquired Contrary Sexual Instinct. Marked Improvement under Hypnotic Treatment.—Mr. P., born in 1863, official in a manufactory. He comes of a highly respected patrician family of Middle Germany, in which nervousness and insunity have been of frequent occurrence.

His great-grandfather on the father's side and his sister died insone; the grandmother died of apoplexy; father's brother died income, and a daughter of the latter died of cerebral tuberculosis. The maternal grandmother was melanchelic for years; maternal grandfather, income, A maternal nucle took his life in an attack of insanity. The patient's father is very nervous. An elder brother is very neurasthetic, and has anomalies of the vita sexualis; another is the subject of Case 155; a third is executive in conduct, and is said to be subject to fixed ideas. A sister suffers with convolutous, and another med of them when a little child. The patient is constitutionally predisposed; for he was early very peculiar, irritable, inscible, and impressed those around him as being absormal.

His vita sexualis appeared very early and in great intensity, and was satisfied, without any seductions, in counism. From his sixteenth year the prematurely developed boy visited brothels of the Capital, using his permissions to go out on Sundays and holidays for that purpose. He took playsure in coitus, but during the weak he satisfied himself with countiess. After his twentieth year, when he became independent, the patient indulged with prostitutes excessively, and fell ill with neurrathenia sexualis, becoming relatively impotent and unsatisfied in coltus, owing to weakpess of creetion and promature ejaculation. His sexual libids became more powerful than ever, and was satisfied in onanism. Early in 1888 the patient made the acquaintance of a young man. " By his pleasing face, his attractive manner, and his beautiful form, he conquered me entirely. I wished to speak to him, and was happy at mere sight of him. I was completely in love with him. With this, my love for women was extinguished. Any man could excite me to such an extent that, for some moments. I would feel my memory full, and I would stammer.

"Soon after this I made the acquaintance of a gentlemm who was likewise very attractive, and who had a decided influence on my fitture life. He was male-loving. I confessed to him that I no longer felt anything but aversion for the female sex, and that I was attracted to men.

"When I once asked my companion how he brought it about that soldiers would surrender themselves to him, he answered that the principal thing was skill; almost any of them could be brought to it. Late in 1888, thinking of these words, I was attracted by an officer's servant, and was intensely excited by him, but ejeculation never occurred. Since I saw that the soldier would surrender himself without trouble, I approached him. Aligns quondam militem in cabinalum affectum regard at veste exists mecani in lectum concumberet. Rogalus ferit que volui et alter alterius penem trivit.

"Though after this success I misused many persons, I was never really in laws, so to speak, with but one. He was a very handsome young fellow of seventeen. His voice was so attractive to me, and his manner was so delicately proper, that I cannot forget him. In my dreams I thought only of handsome young men, and often for whole nights I could not skep, owing to sensual feeling."

liarly in 1889 the potient's conflict swakened a suspicion of malelove. A threatening communication frightened him, and plunged him in deep depression, so that he contemplated suicide. At the advice of the family physician, he come to the Capital. Since the patient was analyse to avercome his liabitual desires by his own will, hypnotic treatment was undertaken. It induced but mild lethargy, and, in opposition to the seduction of former lovers, it had but little effect. At that time the patient was vanting in earnest desire. There was some improvement in matters, in the face of the disgrace to relatives and the prospect of a legal examination that was actually threatening. The patient determined to attempt a cure with the nutber.

I found him to be a delicate, pale, very neurosthenic man, much depressed, and despairing about the future. He was without degenerative signs. He realized his perverted situation, and seemed to be willing to do anything is order to become again a decent, moral man.

He regretted exceedingly his sexual perversion, which he regarded as absorbed, but also as having been required. He made no attempt to concerl the fact that he could not control himself with young men, and likewise he would not say that he could abstain from connism, to which, finite de minur, he was driven. Only a powerful, imperious will could keep him from it.

Thus far his mule-love had consisted exclusively of matural countsm. Erections occurred only when touching men he loved; ejaculation semited early, but simple embrace was not sufficient. He had never felt himself in any particular sexual rôle toward a man. Genitals and regetative organs normal.

In addition to treatment directed to his necresthenia, on April 8, 1899, hypnotic suggestion was begun. Hypnosis was easily induced by simply looking at him, with verbal suggestion. After a half-minute the patient passed into deep lethargy, with a cataleptiform state of the musicles. The awakening was brought about by suggesting it at counting three. Post-hypnotic suggestions were always successful. The intro-hypnotic suggestions were:

- I. The intendiction of ounsists.
- The command that male-love should be felt to be diagrapsful and despleable, and that it should be impossible.
- The command to regard only women as beautiful; to approach them, to dream of them, and to have libido and erection at sight of them.

The sittings occurred daily. On April 14th, the patient asnounced, with thankfeiness and a kind of moral satisfaction, that he had had plensure in seitus, and had ejaculated tardily. On April 16th, he felt five from inclination to maximitate, alterated to women, and perfectly indifferent to men. He dreamed of female charms and costs with women. May let, the patient seemed and felt himself to be normal sexually. He has become a different man mentally, fall of courage and self-confidence. He has costas with complete satisfaction, and thinks that he is insured against relapse.

In a later letter Mr. P. writes: "As was only to be expected, I find myself lastingly freed from my errors. All that remains to remind me of my unlasppy time are the dreams, which, though they are infrequent, come from my past, which I have no power to busish, and which sometimes, indeed, pleasantly occupy my thoughts. But by my own will I yet hope soon to succeed in freeing myself absolutely from them. Should I ever become weak again, the ideas you have impressed on me would, I am sure, make an energetic resistance, and I should not succemb."

On October 26, 1890, P. wrote me: "I am completely oured of onomism, and I have no pleasure in male-love. Yet complete virility does not seem to have been re-established, notwithstanding the fact that I lead a virtuous life. Nevertheless, I feet satisfied."

Case 136. Acquired Contrary Seasal Instinct,-Mr. Z., sged 32, divorced. He comes of a hysteropathic mother. Maternal grandmother suffered with hysteria, and her brothers and sisters were negrotic. One brother is an arming. Z. was but poorly endowed mentally, and did not learn easily. No sickness besides scarlation. When thirteen, he was taught to musturbate by companions in a school. Sexually, he was hyperesthetic, and, at seventeen, began to indulge in coitus, with full pleasure and power. For reasons of position and money, he married at twenty-six. The marriage was very uninappy. After a year Mrs. Z. became incapable of coltus, by reason of aterine disease. Z. satisfied his itendinate desires with other women, faute de mirar, by masturlution. Besides, he gave himself up to play, led an absolutely dissolute life, became exceedingly neurasthenic, and sought to strengthen his weakened serves by drinking great quantities of wine and brandy. To his essential cerebral authoria were added peripheral alcoholic cramps and globus, and he became very emotional. His libido nimia continued unabated. On account of his disgust of prostitutes and fear of infertion. satisfaction by coitus was exceptional. For the most part, the patient helped himself with coanism.

Four years ago he noticed weakening of crection and decrease of libide for women. He began to feel himself drawn toward men, and his Inscisions dreams were no longer concerned with women, but with men.

Three years ago, while being rubbed by a bath-attendant, he became powerfully excited sexually (the attendant also laid an erection, to patient's surprise). He could not keep from embracing and kissing the attendant, and allowing him to perform maximilation on him, the attendant doing it most willingly. From this time this mode of sexual indulgence was all that he cared for. Women became a matter of entire indifference to him; he devoted himself exclusively to men. With them he practiced mutual maximilation, and had a longing to sleep with them. He abhorred pederasty. He was entirely satisfied satii (August, 1850) an anonymous letter, warning him to be careful, brought him to his senses. He was much frightened, had hysterical attacks, and became much depressed. He was enhanced before men, seemed like a parish in society, contemplated suicide, and finally confessed to a priest, who comforted him. He now fell into a religious state (equivalent), and, out of remove and to cure himself of his abnormal sexual inclinations, wished to go into a cloister. While in this state, my "Psychopathia Sexualis" fell into his hands. He was frightened and filled with shame, but found a confect in it, inasmuch as he concluded that he must have some malady. His first thought was to rehabilitate himself sexually in his own eyes. He overcome all disinclination, and visited a brothel. At first be was not seccessful, on account of great excitement, but he finally accorded.

Since, however, his contrary sexual inclinations were not overcome, in spite of all his efforts to put them down, he finally came to me, asking for assistance. He felt himself to be terribly unfortunate, and very near to despair and smiride. He saw destruction before him, and would be saved at any price.

His confession was interrupted by numerous hysterical attacks. Comforting and encouraging words about his future had a calming influence.

Physically, patient presented a slightly retreating brow, with no other material signs of degeneration. Spinal irritation, exaggerated thep reflexes, and a sense of pressure in the head pointed to a neurosthesic condition. No genital anomalies, though there was hypermathesia methra. Mica distressed; attitude relaxed; mind distracted and vacillating.

Hip-baths, massage, ergot with antipyris and pot brom, ordered, with interdiction of countism, intercourse with new, and lascivious thoughts of them.

After a few days the patient came complaining that he was not equal to the task. He said his will was too weak. In this precurious situation, it seemed that nothing but hypnotic treatment could bring improvement.

September 11, 1889. First sitting. Bernheim's method used, in order to induce lethargy as quickly as possible.

Suggestions:-

- 1. I abbor coanism, and will not masturbate again,
- I regard the inclination for men disgreting,—horrible; and I shall never think men handsome and enticing.
- Women alone I find entiring. Once a week I shall robabit, with full pleasure and power.

The patient received these suggestions, and repeated them in a drawling tone.

The sittings took pince every second day. After the lifteenth, it was possible to induce the someombulic stage of hypnosis with any postby protic suggestions desired.

The patient improved morally and mentally, but symptoms of corebral neurosthesia troubled him still, and, now and then, dreams of men occurred; and there were, also, in the waking state, inclinations toward men, which depressed him exceedingly. Treatment until September 24th, Result, Free from oranism; no longer excitable to men, through impremionable to women. Normal coltus once in eight days. Hysterical symptoms absent; neurosthenic symptoms much ameliorated.

On October 6th the patient reported by letter that he was feeling well, and expressed his gratitude for his salvation; he felt as if given a new life.

December 5, 1839, patient again came for treatment. Of late he had lead lastivious dreams of men twice, but had experienced no inclination toward men in the waking state. He lead also resisted the impulse to musturbate, though, while living above in the country, he had had no opportunity for coitse. He had inclinations only for the opposite sex, and, as a rule, dreamed only of females. Beturned to the city, he had inclinated in coitse with pleasure. The patient felt himself morally reliabilitated, being almost free from neurosthesic symptoms; and, after three more hypnotic settings, he declared himself perfectly well, and confident that he would not relapse. Such a relapse occurred, however, in September, 1839, when, after over-exertion on an excursion into the mountains, and emotional atmin with want of opportunity for coitse, he had again become neurosthesic.

Again he had dresses of men, and feit drawn toward attractive usale forms; he masterioted using times, and, after returning to the city, found no real pleasure in coltus. By means of anti-neuranthenic trestment and hypnosis, it was possible soon to restore the previous condition.

In the course of the years 1890 and 1891 the patient now and then had contrary sexual feelings and dreams, but only when, as a result of emotional strain or excesses, his neurosis re-appeared. At such times satisfaction in coitus was wanting. He would then find it necessary to undergo a few hypnotic sittings, in order to sestore his equilibrium always with success.

At the end of 1891 the patient pointed with satisfaction to the fact that, since treatment, he had been able to avoid measurbation and male-intercourse, and had regained his self-confidence and self-respect.

The foregoing details of the successful results of hypnotic suggestion, in cases of acquired contrary sexual feeling, make it seem possible that those unfortunates that are afflicted with the congenital perversion may be helped in some degree by the same means.

To be sure, here the condition is entirely different, since a congenital condition must be combated, an abnormal psychosexual life annihilated, and a new one created. A priori this task seems impossible; at least, in the perfect urning. That the apparently impossible is artificially possible may be seen from the case of Schrenk-Notzing, which follows below. It far surpasses the case reported by me (e. infra), in which at least the homo-sexual feelings and impulses were removed by means of hypnotic suggestion.

The case of Ladame (v. infra) is an analogous one. The conditions are more favorable in psycho-sexual hermaphrodites, where at least there are rudiments of hetero-sexual feelings that may be strengthened and made operative by suggestion.

Case 137. "I was been in 1858, out of wedlock. It was only late that I was able to trace my obscure origin, and obtain knowledge of my parents; and this knowledge is, unfortunately, very obscure and imperfect. My father and mother were cousins. My father died three years ago. He had later married, and, as far as I know, had several healthy children.

"I do not think that my father had contrary sexual feelings. Without knowing him us my father, I often saw him when I was a child. He was a powerful, numeralise man. As fee the rest, it is said that, at the time of my birth, or before, he was sexually ill.

"I have often seen my mother on the street, but I did not then know that she was my mother. At the time of my birth she may have been about twenty-four years old. She was tell, and quick and energetic of movement, and her character was decided. At the time of my birth she is reported to have gone about much in male attire, to have ween short bair, to have smoked a long pape, and in general to have been remarkable for her eccentric character. She was exceedingly well educated, and is said to have been beautiful in her youth. She left a for-tene,—considerable even when measured by our present ideas,—but she died unmarried.

"In any case, all this would point to home-sexual inclinations, or, at least, to abnormalities. On the other hand, several years before my firth, my mother took care of a little girl. This step-sister, whom I never knew, married young, but early in her married life, for reasons unknown to me, she poisoned herself.

"I am 1.7 metres tall, measure 92 centimetres around the walst, and 103 centimetres around hips, and, therefore, I think my pulse is somewhat over-developed. The substituteness fat has always been abundant. Skeletal form is strong. The muscular system is well formed, but, from lack of exercise, perhaps owing to the influence of early, long-continued, and frequent indulgence in consists, it is not well developed; so that I appear stronger than I really am. Hair of head and face is normal; genital hair, somewhat thin. The upper portion of the body is as good as without hair. In all other ways my appearance is fully masculine. Guit, attitude, and voice are those of a fully developed man, and other unnings have often told me that they would never have suspected my passion. I served in the army, and always found pleasure in all knightly exercises,—riding, forcing, swimming, etc.

"My early training was under a priest. I had but few real playmates. The family life of my foster-parents was faultless. In October, 1861, I entered the Institute. Here I indulged in my first perverse sets, which I shall describe more fully when I come to the development of my sex mil life.

"I finished the Gymnasium, served my voluntary years in the army, and then studied forestry, being now a director of satates. During my early years my mental development was very slow. I first learned to speak in my third year, and thus the supposition that I had hydrocephalms was strengthened. From the time of beginning school, my mental development was abnormal; indeed, I learned easily, but I have never been able to concentrate my activity on any particular subject. I have a great interest in art and asithetics, but almost none in music. In early years my character was the worst possible. Without being able to give any reason for it, during the hat twelve years there has been an entire transformation. Now, there is nothing I hate more than a He, and I never speak untruth even in jest. In financial matters, without being avaritions, I have become an economical manager.

"It is esough that, with a deep feeling of shame, I look back on my post; and, if I could be freed from my unlargey sexual perversion, or perversity, I should justly regard myself as a true gentleman. I am kind, and always ready to be charitable to the extent of my means, I am gay-spirited, and regarded with favor socially. I have no truce of that nervous invitability which is so often noticeable in others like me. Too, I am not wanting in personal courage. There is nothing in the early period of my development that points to abnormality. To be sure, as a shild, I liked to lie in bed on my abdomen, and, of a morning, I often took delight is rolling about on my abdomes, much to the amassment of my faster-parents; but I connet recall that, at such times, I over had seasond feeling. I never sought much to play with girls, and I never played with dolls. I sarly beard talk about sexual matters; but I never thought anything about it. In my dresses, too, at that time, there was nothing sexual; and, in my association with flow of my own age, there was nothing of that kind. I think I may say that my vite sexualis was really first awakened after I had been seduced into mutual ansturbation in my thirteenth year, by a more-unite at the Institute. At that time ejaculation did not take place, but first about a year later. Nevertheless, I gave myself up to the vice of susmism possionately. At this time, however, the first signs of home-sexual inclination were monifested. Youthful, powerful men, market-beipers, workmen, and soldiers took possession of my dreams, and played un important rôle in my facey while masterbating. At this time was also first shown the tendency to pedersaty, especially possive. Up to my fourteenth year I frequently made motual attempts at pedematy with my seducer, but neither of us were successful in bringing about immissio. At the same time, there was also a weak inclimation for the female sex. About a year after the first indulgence in omnism, I was once with a pacifa publica, but I laid nother ejaculation nor any especial feeling of sensual pleasure. Thereafter, and up to my nineteenth year, I performed coitus in public houses about six times. Erection and spaculation occurred promptly, bet without marked sensual pleasure. At least counism, particularly mutual munism, I liked quite as much. I have never lad any lave for athletes. About ten years ago, while at H., a watering-place, I thought I was in love with a beautiful lady of a highly respectable family : I was happy in her presence, and thought myself happy in indiing my love returned. For a time this affair hept me from masturbuting; I was only afraid that, weakened by onanism that had been practiced for years, I should be incapable of performing my marital daty. When we became widely separated, my feeling quickly cooled; I found that I had deceived myself; and, after about two years, without jealousy, I was able to hear that the body hall married. My inclination for women-if, in reality, I have ever had any-grew colder and colder. Two and a half years ago, when I visited a public house with very virile friends, I last performed coltra. There was erection, but no ejaculation. Women have become indifferent to me. A prostitute who acts cornely excites my repugnance. With intellectual women, particularly when they are elderly. I like to converse, but in their society I am often unskillful and awkward, often devoid of tact. I have never been able to fird any charm in woman's physical form.

"But, to return to the perverse inclinations. When, at the age of fourteen, I went to H., I lost eight of my lover and seducer. He was some years object than I, and was an official; and, in this especity, when I was nineteen, I again met him once on the railway. We immediately not the journey short, and lodged together, altempting motual pederasty; but, on account of pain, immissio was not successful. We amused ourselves in mutual onanism. In H. I had sexual intercourse with two follow-students, but this intercourse was confined to frequent mutual smalam, owing to the fact that they were not inclined to pederasty. During the last year of my stay (when I was nineteen), I had intercourse with another person, which likewise consisted of ournism; but our intercourse was more intimate, and we always retired, and practiced mutual ossuism in bed. From Easter, 1849, until July, 1870, I had no lover. I practiced onanism above. When the war broke out, I offered myself as a refunctor, but was not accepted. At the same time a former school-mate offered himself. He had developed into a cemarkably handsome man. I had to spend one night with him in an over-crowded hotel. Though as students we had never associated sexually, he was not averse to my desire, and attempted pederasty. In this instance juin prerented success; but, in the attempt, ejaculatio auto assum menu occurred. Even now I can recall the pleasurable feeling I had in it,-a feeling previously unknown. After the war I frequently met this friend, but our lutercourse was later limited to ossaism. During the following eighteen yours I lead but two opportunities for home-sexual intercourse. The first was to the winter of 1819, on the occasion of meeting a handsome knessr in a railway carriage. I induced him to sleep with me at an hotel. Later he confessed to me that he had previously practiced matual masturbation with the son of a landed proprietor of his town. I could not bring him to pedemety. On the other hand, I induced ejamilation in him by receptio penis ejus in as meum. This enused me no satisfaction, but rather disgust. I have never tried it again; and, too, I have never allowed receptio penis mei in as alterias. In 1887, likewise on the milway, I made the acquaintance of a sailor, and induced him to stay with me at an hotel. He said he had never practiced pederacty, but he was ready for it. He was appearently seasonally excited; he laid an erection immediately, and performed the act with evident passion. It was the first time that pederasty was successfully performed. I had terrible pain, but also indescribable pleasure.

"With my sojourn here, my vita sexualis has undergone a complete change. I have learned how easy it is to find persons who, partly for money and partly from desire, yield to our inclinations. I have also not been spared annoying experiences with cheats. Until the end of the fast year (since then, owing to fear of venereal infection, I have not gone beyond metual masterisation), I enjoyed male-love to the full extent, particularly in possive pederasty. I have never practiced active pedernety, because I have found no one able to enther the pain.

"Generally, I seek my lovers among cavalrymon and sailors, and, eventually, among workmen, especially butchers and smiths. Robust forms, with healthy facial complexious, attract no especially. Leathers riding-trousers have a particular charm for ms. I have no partiality for kissing and the like. I also love large, bord, and callouned hands.

"I do not wish to leave immentioned that, under certain circumstances, I have great control of myself.

"As director of an estate, I lived in a large house. My personal servent was a very handsome young man who had served in the hussars. After once having spoken with him, in general terms, on the subject, and found that he could not be approached, for years I lived in close intimacy with him, and enjoyed his beauty, but never touched him. I think that, to this day, he knows nothing of my passion. Likewise, two and a half years ago, in C., I made the acquaintance of a sailor, who is still regarded by me and my acquaintances as one of the handsomest men we know. After an absence of more than two years, on invitation, he visited me a few weeks ago. I knew how to arrange matters so that we stept in the same room, and I burned with desire to be numer to him. As a preliminary, however, I sounded him in confidential talk; and, when I found that he despised everything connected with unleslove, I had not the heart to approach him more closely. For weeks we slept in the same seemily excited, in fact); I buthed with him, is the Roman minuter, in order to see his beautiful form subcd,—but he acver learned anything of my passion. I still have an ideal, platonic relation with this young man, who, for one of his position, has an unusual education and time talent for poetry.

"Until my thirty-eighth year I had not a clear understanding of my condition. I always thought that, by early and frequent master-basion, I had become averse to women, and hoped always that, when the right women came, I should be able to abandon onunism and find pleasure in her. Here it was that I first came to fully understand my condition, after making the acquaintance of others suffering and feeling like myself. At first I was frightened, later I came to look upon my fate as something not dependent on myself. Too, I made no further offert to resist temptation.

"Two or three weeks ago 'Psychopathia Sexualia' fell into my insula. The work has made an anexpectedly deep impression on me. At first I read the work with an interest that was indombtedly havivious. The description of the cultivation of majoradas, for example, excited me uncommonly. The thought of a young, powerful man being emaculated in this minner, in order, later, to be used for pederasty by a whole tribe of wild, powerful, and sensoral Indians, so excited use that I masturbated five times during the next two days, fancying myself such a presumptive majorade. The farther I read in the book, however, the more I are its moral caracteriess; the more I felt disgust with my condition; and the more I saw that I must do everything, if it were possible, to bring about a change in my condition. When I had finished the book, I was determined to seek assistance from its nathor.

"The reading of this work had an undoubted effect. Since then I have musturbated only twice, and have practiced counts a with cavalry-turn only twice. In every instance I have had really less pleasure and satisfaction than before, and I always have the feeling: "Ah, if I could only be free from it!" Nevertheless, I confess that, even now, in the society of handsome sobliers, I immediately have erection.

"In conclusion, I may add that, in spite of, or, perhaps, on account of, ominion, I have never laid pollutions. The ejaculation of semen, which neually consists of only a few drops, and it has always been so, takes place only after prolonged friction. If, for any reseas, I have not meeturbated for a long time, the ejeculation takes place quickly, and is more abundant. About twelve years ago Ranson tried in vain to hypnotize me."

In the spring of 1891 the writer of the foregoing autobiography visited me, with the declaration that he could live us longer in his condition; that he looked to hypnotic treatment as the only hope of salvation, for he had not strength enough to resist his impulse to masturing tion and satisfaction with persons of his own sex. He felt like a parial; like an uncertaint man; like one outside the laws of nature and society, and in danger of criminal prescrution. He felt moral represents when he performed the net with a man, but yet the sight of any handsome soldier actually electrified him. For yours he had not had the slightest sympathy with women, not oven mentally.

The patient looked to be exactly the person, physically and mentally, described by himself in his autobiography. His head was exquisitely by drocephalic, and also plagiosephalic. At first attempts at hypansis seet with difficulties. Only by Braid's method, with the help of a little chleroform, was deep lethurgy attained at the third suring. From that time simply looking at a shining object was sufficient. The suggestions consisted of the command to avoid musturbation, the removal of honosexual feelings, and the assumance that the patient would have inclination for some and be visile, and have pleasure only in hetero-sexual intercourse. Musturbation was indulged in but once; after the eighth sitting the notices dreamed of a woman.

When, after the fourteenth sitting, the potient had to return, on account of pressing business, he declared that he was quite free from any inclination to maxturbate or to include in mule-love, but that he was by no means absolutely free from his partiality for men. He felt a returning interest in the female sex, and hoped to be freed finally from his unledger condition by continuance of the treatment.

Case 138. Psychical Hermophrodition.—Mr. von P., aged 25, single, comes of a neuropathic family. As a child he had convenient. He recovered, but remained weak, emotional, and invitable. No severe illnesses. Before his tenth year sexuality was manifested. His earliest remembrance concerning it was that of lastivious feelings in company with the servants of the house. When older, he had sensed dramas which were of intercourse with men. In circuses the mule performers alone interested him.

Youthful, powerful men were most enticing to him. Often, he could scarcely resist the lenging to full on their necks and kins them. Of late simply the touching of such persons had become sufficient to give him pleasure and induce ejaculation. The impulse to engage in "affairs" with men be last, thus fur, fortunately resisted. The patient is a psychical becamplarable, in so far as he is not insensitive to the charms of women, and finds men more pleasing than women. In fact, feminine nudity had never pleased him, and he can remember only to have dreamed once of coltas with a woman.

On account of his great sexual desire, and because he was ashamed to give himself up to mon, after his twentieth year he began to have sexual intercourse with women. Since then, he has very seldom indulged in manual counties, but often in mental manufaction, during which the forms of handsome men float through his fancy.

He had coites with success, but without pleasure or sensual feeling. On account of circumstances, he was formed to abstract from his twenty-account until his twenty-fourth year. This abstractice was painful, and he relieved himself, now and then, by moutal connism.

When, a year ago, he had opportunity again for collins, he noticed feilure of libido for women, imperfect erection, and premoture ejaculation. Pinally he gave up collins; then libido for men was manifested.

In the condition of irritable weskness of the ejaculatory centre, seen touching of sympathetic men was sufficient to induce ejaculation.

Patient is an only child. The circumstances of his family demand that he marry. He justly hostates to do this, thinks he is mentally impotent, and asks for advice and help.

He points out that his feeling for men must be endicated in order to help him.

Patient's appearance is, in all respects, missculine. His head is slightly hydrocephalic and missible. Abundant growth of beard. Genitals normal; cremisteric reflex cannot be excited. No manifestations of semistance. Neuropathic eyes. Pollations infrequent. Erections occur only as a result of contact with uses.

July 16, 1889, hypnotic suggestion, after Bernheim's method, was begun. It was first at the third sitting that deep lethargy was induced.

Suggestions: "You have no longer my desire for men. Only woman is beautiful and desirable. You will love a woman, many, be happy, and make her happy. You are fully potent; you feel that already."

In daily hypnosis, which never goes beyond letharpy, the patient accepts the suggestions. On July 24th, he amounces that he has had pleasure in coitus; and the male servants no longer interest him. At the same time, he still finds men more beautiful than women. On August 1, 1889, it was necessary to discontinue treatment. Besuit: Completely potent; entire indifference for men, but also for women.

The same treatment met with decided success in a case of psycho-sexual hermaphreditism, reported by me in vol. i of the Internat. Centralblatt fur die Physiol. v. Path. der Harn- und Sexualorgine. Case 139. Mr. von X., aged 25, landed proprietor. He comes of a seuropathic, passeomic father. Father is said to have been normal sexually. His mother was nervous, as were her two sisters. Maternal grandhother was nervous, and his maternal grandhatter was a roue, much given to venery. Patient is like his mother, and an only child. From birth he was weak, suffered much with migratur, and was nervous. He possed through several illnesses. At fifteen he began masturbation, without having been taught in.

Until his seventeenth year he says he never had Seeling for seen, or, in fact, any sexual inclination; but at this time desire for men arose. He fell in love with a commite. His friend returned his love. They entired and kissed and indulged in mutual omnism. Occasionally patient practiced coits interfemora viri. He abborred potentary. Lesourious dresses were concerned only with men. In the circus and theatre males alone interested him. The inclination was for those of about twenty years. Handsome, tall forms were entiring to him. Given these conditions, he was quite indifferent to other characteristics of the men. In his sexual affairs with men his part was always that of a man.

After his eighteenth year the patient was always a source of anxiety to his highly respected parents, for he then began a love-affair with a male waiter, who fleeced him and made him an object of remark and ridicule. He was taken home. He consorted with servants and hostiers. He caused a scandal. He was sent away for travel. In London he got into a "blackmailing scrape," but succeeded in escaping to his home.

He profited in no way by this bitter experience, and again showed disgraceful inclinations toward men. Patient was sent to me to be cored of his fatal peculiarity (December 12, 1888). Patient is a tall, stately, robust, well-nourished young man, of musculine build; large, well-formed genitals. Gait, voice, and attitude are mascaline. He has no prononneed masculine passions. He amokes but little, and only rigarettes; drinks little, and is food of confectionery. He loves music, arts, authories, flowers, and moves in Indian' society by preference. He wears a monetache, the face being otherwise cleanly shaved. His garments are in nowice remarkable. He is a soft, Maid fellow, and a domothing. He lies abed mornings, and can scarcely be made to rise before norm. He says he has never regarded his inclination toward his own sex as almormal. He looks upon it as congenital; but, taught by his evil experiences, he wishes to be cared of his perversion. He has little faith in his own will. He has tried to help binatelf, but always begins to masturbate. This he finds injurious, insernach as it causes alight neurasthenic symptoms. There is no moral defect. The intelligence is a little below the average. Careful education and aristocratic manners are equipment. The exquisite neuropathic eye betrays the nervous constitution. The patient is not a complete and topeless urning. He has betereserved feelings, but his serumal inclinations toward the opposite sex are manifested weakly and infrequently. When nineteen, he was first taken to a brothel by friends. He experienced no horror femine, had efficient erections, and some pleasure in softns, but not the instinctive delight he experienced while embracing men.

Since then, patient asserts that he has had coints six times, twice are sporte. He gives the assurance that he is always capable of it, but he does it only faute de micax, as he does masturbation, when the sexual impairs troubles him, as a substitute for intercourse with men. He has thought of the possibility of finding a sympathetic hely and marrying her. He would regard marital coinbitation and abstinence from intercourse with men as hard duties.

Since there were rudiments of betero-sexual feelings persent, and the case could not be looked upon as hopeless, it seemed that treatment was indicated. The indications were clear enough, but there was no support for them in the will of the indelent patient, so unconstrious of his own position. It by near to seek support for the moral indicates in hypnosis. The fulfillment of this hope seemed doubtfel, because the famous Hassen had tried several times, in vain, to hypnotice him.

At the same time, by reason of the most important social interests of the patient, it was necessary to make another attempt. To my great surprise, Bernheim's procedure induced immediately a condition of deep letherpy, with possibility of post-hypnotic suggestion.

At the second sitting someombulism was induced by merely looking at him. The patient is observious to suggestions of all kinds; indeed, contractures are induced by stroking him. He is awakened by counting three. Awakened, patient has numeric for all the events of the hypnotic state. Hypnosis is induced every second or third day for the communication of hypnotic suggestions. At the same time, moral and hydrotherapeutic measures are suppleyed.

The hypnotic suggestions were as follow:-

- 1. I abnor coanism, because it makes me sick and miserable.
- 2. I no longer lave inclination toward men; for love of men is against religion, nature, and law.
- I feet an inclination toward women; for woman is lovely and desirable, and created for non.

During the sittings the patient always repeats these anggestions.

After the fourth sitting it was noticeable that, when taken into society, as paid court to ladies. Shortly after that, when a farous prima-down sung, he was all enthusiasm for her. Some days later the patient sought the address of a brothel.

At the same time, he preferred the society of young gentlemen; but the most careful watching failed to reveal anything suspicious.

February 17th. Patient asks to be allowed to indulge in coitus, and is very well satisfied with his experience with one of the demi-scoole. March 14th. Up to this time, hypnosis twice a week. The patient always passes into deep someombelium by simply being looked at, and, all request, repeats the suggestions. He is observed to all kinds of post-hypnotic suggestion, and, in the waking sinte, knows not the least of the influences exerted on him in the hypnotic state. In the hypnotic condition he always gives the assumence that he is free from ournism and sexual Society for men. Since he gives the same answers in hypnosis,—e.g., that on such and such a date he practiced semnism for the last time, and that he is too much under the will of the physician to be able to lie,—his assertions deserve belief; the more, since he looks well and is free from all neurosibence symptoms, and, in the society of men, not the slightest suspicion rests on him. An open, free, and anally bearing is developed.

Moreover, since, of his own will, he now and then includes in coiting with pleasure, and occusional pollutions are induced by lascivious dramas which concern nomen, there can be no doubt of the favorable change of his vita examin; and it is presumable that the hypnotic suggestions have developed into auto-suggestive inclinations, which direct his feelings, thoughts, and will. Probably the potient will always remain a mixture frigida; but he more often speaks of marriags, and of his intention to win a wife as soon as he has become acquainted with a sympathetic lady.

In July, 1889, I received a letter from his father, which told me of his good health and conduct.

On May 24, 1890, by chance, I met my former patient, while on a journey. His bright, healthful appearance allowed the most favorable opinion of his condition. He told me that he still had sympathetic feeling for some men, but never anything like love. He occasionally had pleasurable coitus with women, and now thought of marriage,

I hypnotized him, in the former monner, to try him, and asked for the commands I had given him. In a deep condition of sommubulism, and in the same tone of voice as formerly, the patient repeated the suggestions he had received in December, 1888,—an excellent example of the possible duration and power of post-hypnotic suggestion.

Case 140. Psychical Hermaphrodition: Improvement unth Hypnotic Treatment.—Mr. von K., aged 23; of distinguished family; well-endowed mentally; scrofdons us a child. His father is said to have been dissipated. His father's brother is said to have been subject to contrary sexuality.

The potient states that, when only seven years old, he had a peenliar inclination for male persons. It was particularly conclumen and servants laying moustaches for whom he showed partiality at that time. He experienced a peculiar delightful sensation when he pressed himself against such persons.

The potient subsect the codet corps early, and there he was seduced buto mutual conniem, and also learned imutatio coltra inter femora viri. At the age of seconteen to bad orders with a prostitute for the first time. He performed the act perfectly, but had not the slightest pleasure in it; and he learned that this kind of gratification amounted to nothing, or that he must be different from other young men.

Nevertheless, he often ind coits, and contracted genorrhous. After this he experienced an increasing aversion for the female sex, and solvinged in coits less and less frequently; in fact, only when, with atense libido, he could not gain opportunity for intercourse with men. His inclination for men predominated more and more, and he was attracted exclusively by those handsomely formed, and having as lattle beard as possible. He descended to the most revolting practices,—column burculis, active and passive pedarasty.

The patient was deeply ashamed of such depravity, and was constantly endeavering to get into better ways by means of coites with women. But he came to the despairing conclusion that his moral strength was insufficient, that he was indifferent about intercourse with women, or that it was repregnant to him; and that he was created for sexual intercourse with persons of his own sex. In fact, he had never dreamed of women, but always of men; and that at a time, too, when he had no suspicion of the differences between the nexes.

The patient comes for consultation, because he sees that he is jeopardizing the impointess of his whole life, and recognizes the unnaturalizes and immorality of his sexual life. He does not regard his condition as hopeless; for he has no horror of women, and three weeks ago be had successful cottes with one, though it was devoid of all pleasure and mental extinduction. He has no doubt that he was really created to love men; but, owing to required nearesthenia, in the sexual set with a man be experiences no such pleasure as formerly. He had given up his position as an officer, because the soldiers excited him so sexually that he feared he might compromise himself.

The patient is devoid of degenerative signs. His appearance is perfectly mesculine, and his genitals are normal. Examination of the semen revealed abundance of spermatozon. The penis is large and well developed; the growth of bale ad gesitalia, as well as on the rest of the body, is abundant. The patient has masonline tastes, but has never been partial to drinking and uncking. A secrepathic eye is all that points to a nervous constitution.

In his sexual acts with men, he states that, as a rule, he has felt as a man, only now and then as a woman.

An attempt at hypnosis leads to bethorgy, with cataloptic condition of the muscles, and the opportunity is used to import suitable suggestions.

After the fourth sitting he expressed himself us satisfied, and wondered that men made no impression on him. He wished to try his fortune with women, but was afraid that he was impotent. After the sixth sitting, without advice, he sitempted coltan cum muliere. His litido was very great, but inter actum this and crection left him.

After the math sitting the potions was forced to discontinue treatment, owing to haviness that called him home. He was satisfied, in that he felt indifferent and capable of resistance to men. He felt were that he would not relapse into his former vices. At the same time, he had not the slightest interest in the female sex.

Case 141. Mr. X., aged 31, chemist, comes of a neurogathic family, and from childhood has been nervous, emotional, and approhensive, and afflicted with migraine. He remembers distinctly that, when a very small boy, he had a lustful feeling at the sight of the half-mixed persons in the work-shop at his father's house, and felt drawn to them. When he began school, he felt in the same way toward his companions. At the age of eleves, without teaching, he began to musturbate, during which he thought of his comrades. Later there were enthusiastic friendships. His vita sexualis gained the upper hand. As he grew up, women also interested him, but his chief interest was in men of the higher circles of society. He felt that this inclination was almormal, and sought the sequaintance of puellis; he often had coitus, but never with any real pleasure. Thus he become more and more given to contrary sexuality, practiced matual maximisation and coitus inter femora viri, and occasionally gave himself up to passive polerasty; but he soon abandoned this, on account of the rain it coussed him.

He asserts that he feels perfectly musculine, and has never had female inclinations. Skeleton and attitude perfectly masculine; strabismus, abundant heard; genitals entirely normal. No aversion to the female sex. Occasional coitus with puellis, but without satisfaction. The patient feels exceedingly unlarge, and clearly recognizes his almormul position; at may price, he wishes to be freed from his homo-sexual inclination, and made capable of marriage. "It is terrible to have to act a force constantly," At the first attempt at hypnosis, after Bernbein's method, the patient passes into a state of deep lethargy. He proves to be very susceptible to suggestion, and suitable suggestions are imported. After the fourth sitting, he states, with gratitude, that men become indifferent, and he begins to have pleasure in colum; but he did not feel mentally settisfied, owing to the fact that he was limited to puellic publicie. After the fourteenth sitting he declared that he required no more treatment. He was in love with a young lady, and thought of marrying her. He asked for her hand, and was refused. Scon after, while he was on a journey in Italy, mon interested him again. He had a relayer, and asked for further treatment. A few authors reestablished the manus quo mide.

Case 142. Psychical Hermsphroditism; Successful Treatment by Hypostic Supposition.—Mr. von Z., agod 29. He asserts that he comes of healthy grandparents; of a healthy father, but of a nervous mother. He is an only child, and was petted by his mother. At the age of eight he was powerfully excited sexually by a male servant, who showed him pomographic pictures and his penis.

When twelve years old, Z. fell in love with his toter. On going to alcep, the naked form of this man appeared before him. He thought of himself as it a female role in relation to him, and thought to marry him some time.

At the age of thirteen, at a private ball, his fancy was excited by a young governess, and, at fifteen, he fell in love with a young lady. He tensined very excitable sensually; but, thereafter, exclusively so to men pleasing to him. Masterbation was not practiced.

At the age of twenty the patient became normathenic (ex abstisentia?). He now attempted evitus, but was not successful. On the other hand, he had intense desire on an occasion when he saw a naked man in a steam-listle. The latter noticed his excitement, approached him, and performed musturbation on him, giving the patient intense delight. He felt powerfully attracted to this man, and, thereafter, allowed him to repeat the set. In the meantime, there were attempts at costs with females, which always ended in a finace. The patient was much troubled by this, and consulted physicians, who explained his impresence as due to pervousness, and thought that it would soon pass off.

Until his twenty-fifth year his sexual indulgence consisted of masturbation by the beloved man about once a month. At this time he last felt attracted to a woman. It was to a young person-pirl. She would not accode to his wishes. Since his lover was also mattrainable, the patient begar to mastrarhate alone. With this, his neurrathenia increased. For this reason he was unable to finish his studies; he became shy, dysthymic, about, and now vainly tried cures at various hydropathic establishments. On account of continued severe (cerebro-spinal) neumathenia, the patient came to me for advice, in the latter part of February, 1850

A tail, alim man, of aristocratic and decidedly masculine manners. Neuropathic appearance; large ears, the lobes of which run into and lose themselves in the akin of the checks. Genitals perfectly normal. The usual picture of combro-spinal neurosthesis of moderate degree. Great depression; complaint of being dissatisfied with life, even to teclium vite; he is pained by his sexual anomaly, especially because he is arged by his family to marry.

He is interested in women only mentally, not physically. Sexually, his only interest is in men of distinction. His dreams have never been about persons of the opposite sex, but of those of his own sex. In these issersions dreams he has always seen himself in the rile of a woman.

The most refined woman has never been able to induce erection or even libido in him. His sexual intercentes with men has consisted of pussive or mutual masturbation. He had practiced solitary onswism only infrequently and faste de meax. During the last five months he had abstained, and had had no male intercourse since August, 1889.

An attempt at hypnosis, after Bernheim's method, failed; prolonged stroking of the brow induced deep lotturgy, with estalepsy.

This method is used, in order to carry out suggestive treatment of this patient, who is so worthy of compassion. The hypnotic state is always the same; he cannot be brought into a state of somnambulism.

At the third sitting the patient is given the suggestions; ever despine onzaism and male love; find women beautiful, and dream of them.

After the sixth sitting (March 19th) a moral transformation takes place in his mind. The patient becomes quieter, feels more free, and dreams now and then of women, and no longer of men, finding that the latter have become indifferent to him. He gratefully states that he has no more inclination to masturbation. He approaches women, but he notices that they have not the least attraction for him.

On March 18th, business called the patient home; so that the treatment had to be discontinued.

On May 17, 1890, the patient returned for treatment. He asserted that he had not masturbated in the interval, and that he had resisted his inclination to men. Too, he had not dreamed of men, but twice of women, though only platonically. His cerebral asthenia (ex abstinentia?) had increased. He apparently suffers for the want of mental and sensual satisfaction of his vita sexualls; for homo-sexual love and masturbation have become impossible for him, and intercourse with women is denied him. The patient is thus painfully depressed to the extent of tacdium vitae.

He is now subjected to anti-nearasthenic treatment (hydro-therapentic and electro-therapeutic), and the treatment by hypnosis is resumed. Only after ten weeks of painstaking treatment did the neurathenic symptoms disappear. Progressing parallel with this, there was a change of his mental personality.

The patient was gratified to note that he grew stronger; that his sexual life no longer played a dominating part. Though he felt more drawn toward men than women, yet he easily resisted homo-exual desires. His former booder became a work-room; instead of to adornment and frieolous reading, he gave himself to walks in the mountains and forests. On account of the danger of a fasco, the initiative in hetero-exxual attempts was left to the patient.

It was not until the fourteenth week of treatment that the patient made an attempt. It was perfectly successful. The patient became happy, and sound in body and mind, and expressed the best hope of his fature, even having thoughts of marriage.

He experienced increasing pleasure in normal accust intercourse;

he occasionally had inscitious dressus of women, and so larger dressed of men.

The patient stopped treatment at the end of September. He felt perfectly normal in hetero-sexual intercourse, devoid of neurosthenia, and had thoughts of marriage. Yet he freely confessed that he still always had exections at the sight of a maked, handsome man; though he could easily resist the desires that arose, and in dreams had exclusively " refstions over la femore."

In April, 1891, I again saw the patient, and he was in the best of health. He regarded his vita sexualis as perfectly normal; for he had ceitas regularly with pleasure and full varility, dreamed only of women, and had no inclination to mesturbation. Yet he made the interesting confusion that frequently, post coitum, he still had a temporary "good poor Phramme," which he could easily control. He thought he was lastingly cured, and was occupied with thoughts of marriage.

Case 143. Congenital Contrary Sexual Feeling. Successful Remoral of Homo-Sexual Feelings by Suppositions.—L., ductor of philosophy, aged 34, German, consulted use, in the spring of 1888, on account of perversion of his vita sexualis, and asked whether he could not be freed from it by means of hypnotic treatment.

Patient came of a healthy mother, in whose family, for generations, there had been neither insmity nor nervous disease. He, like his only brother, is much like his father mentally. His brother is very sensual, and also psychically abnormal, and given to over-indulgence in drink.

His father was a neuropathic, eccentric man. Nothing is known of any almormal sexual manifestations in him, though, like all his brothers, he had a tendency to over-indulgence in alcohol.

This vice seems to have been inherited from his mother (grandmother of patient), who was a notorious drinker. The fiction of this woman (great-grandfather of patient) was also a great drinker. No other answeral history was obtainable.

Patient states that from childhood he was nervous and easily excited. He learned very easily, and had a talent for languages. He was always interested in art, particularly in music and poetry. His education was excellent, and given at home. When he was thirteen, his father told him that he abould never touch his genitals, for it was wrong to do so, and to do it might bring unhappiness.

Occasionally his father showed him pictures of syphilitic discussed conditions, etc., in an anatomical messeum, and the patient was disgusted and frightened. He believed that his later fear of sexual intercourse with women was partly nourished by this early erromeous teaching.

However, the patient seeks the principal cause of his sexual pertersion in a defect of organization. When a small boy, he had a stilly enthusiasm for companious. He also remembers that, at that time, he had a desire only for girlish games, and preferred the society of girls. When a boy, he had a passion for crosheting and embroidering. At fourteen he was still without any sexual knowledge, and fell into the hands of a pederast. He ran away, frightened, when he beamed what was to be done with him. When fifteen, a sympathetic compassion was accustomed to by his head in the patient's hip. This gave the patient a peculiar pleasurable feeling, but he knew no explanation of it. At sixteen he had the first erections—at the sight of men.

At twenty he first learned that his sexual condition was perverse, and recognized the fact that what he had taken for friendship was love. He was much frightened at the discovery, and much pained. His sympathies were directed toward young men of the upper class that were hardsomely formed and of pleasing appearance.

The society of isslies had no effect on him. He was never attracted by the charms of the opposite sex. In his fifteenth year be had a sensual dream, in which he thought a girl of elegant figure out opposite him, on a sofa.

In the theatre it was only the art of the actresses that he admired; the actors excited his real interest.

Drinking and smoking last always been very repugnant to him. Henting and gymnastics, and other masculine occupations, had no interest for him. He did not enter the army, because his general physical weakness precluded it.

The patient has but little sexual desire. He has never had any impulse to satisfy himself with persons of his own sex. Some years ago, when he first tried to embrace a man lovingly, he had powerful erection and became greatly excited; but he was able to control himself and to repel his lover. Thereafter he always avoided such attempts. It was only soldon that he became powerfully excited sexually, and even then he was not driven to satisfy himself. He was never given to onemism. During the establishment of puberty, the patient had frequent drams with polistions, but these were not induced by crotic functors of any kind.

Some years ago, for a long time, enculation was always induced by the embrace of a sympathetic man, but this condition of irritable weakness disappeared. As years possed, the patient, who had always had a desire for nurriago and a family, became auxious on account of the conviction that the inclination toward females, for which he had laped, would never come. It became more and more clear to him that he was abnormal, and he began to have fears about his virility and his future impriness in life.

In order to test the matter, he sought a teethel. He found a pease titute of beautiful form; he had the lesst will be satisfy himself that he was virile; the woman did all she could, but in vain. There was no exection, and he withdrew, salamed. New attempts, under the most favorable sireumstances, were likewise failures, though the patient brought his imagination to his aid, and thought himself to be embracing a man instead of a woman.

He now resilized that his ideal—to consummate marriage—was impossible. He fest himself very unfortunate, and dissociated with life. Besides, it forced itself open him that morally he was lowered, because he readd not overcome his inclination for his own sex, and his friendship for respeciable men of his circle was degraded by sexual feelings. In his consultation with me, the patient was unending in the description of his painful situation. His ideal was marriage. He longed for it, fee purely ethical reasons. He thought of it as something holy; but the legitling of children, the sexual set, was very repugnant to him. At the same time, he saw that he could not really marry without being potent. Would not hypnotic suggestion exercise a favorable influence on his sexual life? He had not the energy of a man of normal sexual condition. He seemed to himself to be all wrong. He would endure all—to be pour and miserable—if he could but have a normal sexual inclination.

When the patient was gently told of the congenital and deep constitutional significance of his sexual anomaly, and shown that, therefore, the creation of a normal sexual condition was doubtful, he thought that he would be satisfied to remain in his condition. But he wished to know whether it were not possible to eradicate his inclination for men, without attempting to create an equivalent for women; and if, in hypnosis, it could not be suggested to him that, in the future, men be a matter of indifference to him, and that, in intercourse with his friends, he no longer be excited scaually. Such a result would elevate very much his moral feeling, and make him satisfied and unembarrassed in social relations with his friends.

The possibility of such suggestive removal of feelings by hypnosis could not be gained, though he was in doubt as to whether be could be hypnotized or not, since the hypnoscope had proved to have no effect upon him.

Out of pity and scientific interest, I decided to make an immediate attempt at hypnosis, after Bernheim's method.

The patient passed easily into a condition of deep lethargy, and, in a drawling voice, repeated the following suggestion: "I feel that, from this time, I am sexually indifferent to men; and, that a man is as sexually indifferent to me as a woman."

When I counted three,—having suggested previously that he awake at three,—the patient came to himself, as if out of a deep sleep, and performed immediately the post-hypnotic suggestion to open the door of the store. He said that he laid not lost consciousness entirely, that he had felt as one paralyzed and without will, and that he had felt a peculiar creeping sensation in all his limbs.

After five days the patient come again. In manner he was a different person, and he said, joyfully, that he felt like another man-Energy and will-power—the loss of which he had felt so keenly—had returned. He felt, now, entirely unembarmoned toward men, and had a new joy in living.

The following seven days he was hypnotized. Hypnosis is no longer as deep as at first, though the suggestion is always accepted and repeated. However, he is quite profoundly influenced; for, the suggestion given, he sleeps on, in a state of lethargy, for ten minutes, and has to be awakened by suggestion. This always occurs as if from a deep sleep,—slowly, and through a stage of sommolence.

After the eighth sitting the patient found himself well and happy, and in possession of full self-confidence. He had the feeling and the eridence that men had no influence on him.

He thought he could dispense with hypnotic treatment, and gratefally took his leave, with the promise that, should the influence of the suggrestion fade, he would come again. Since then, I have heard nothing more of this interesting patient, and I have reason to hope that he remains improved.

The patient is, in all respects, of masculine appearance; beard abundant. Physically, with the exception of slight neurasthenic symptoms, he presents nothing remarkable. Genitals normal. (Personal case.

Internat, Centralbint, etc., Bd. i. Heft 1.)

Case 144. X., aged 31; single; tail. Mentally, of small endowment; comes of tainted family. Paternal grandfather died at thirty-four with a mental disease, which is said to have developed as a result of onanism and spermatorrhous. His father and brother suffered with fisturbances of the sexual functions. There was insunity in the mother's family; other branches of the family were noted for their irritable and occupied character.

The patient has too small a head, a retreating brow, abnormal ears, sparse growth of hair, and a hernin, which is probably congenital.

Genitals large, and normally developed:

Great impressionability; nearogathic constitution; occasional fardiam vite. For several years, peculiar, imperative ideas; that he is a locomotive; a horse; a velocipede; and, that he must act accordingly. From his earliest youth, contrary sexual facing (congenital). Horser femine; sexual inclination toward boys; satisfaction by sensual contact, and, foute de means, musturbation. One day he had an affair with a boy dressed in gray, which made a deep impression on him. Since then, while masturbating, the image of the boy comes into his mind; and he cannot see gray clothes without having powerful evertions. On the advice of physicians whom he consulted, he attempted exites with women, but was cold and impotent, notwithstanding the assistance of memory-pictures of the boy dressed in gray; and he finally gave up the efforts.

March 27th, first hypnotic sitting. Small result: He resists, and says his fancy keeps him from going to sleep.

In a further series of sittings he declares that he experiences unfavorable effects,—is more excited, and troubled by imperative ideas and the desire to unstarbate. He makes fun of the physician and hypocism, and offers much resistance, with the expression that hypocism is good for nothing, and only makes people grave.

However, gradually it became possible to induce summanbulism. After tweaty-five sittings the patient confessed that he was better, and that he was less troubled with imperative ideas and cumism. The settings were repeated every week or two. The patient felt mentally and morally well, ceased to measurbate, but, at the end of treatment, was indifferent toward the opposite sex (Dr. Ladame, Recue de l'hypnotiesse, September 1, 1889).

In the two foregoing cases there was successful suggestive removal of homo-sexual feelings,—a result which, as Case 143 shows, means a great improvement for such unfortunate individuals, in that it protects them from shame and the law. An sutirely different and phenomenal result is presented by the following case, reported by Dr. v. Schrenk-Notzing in the Wieser internat. klim. Resulscham, October 6, 1889, No. 40, which is a case of effemination. It discloses a new method of treatment of urnings; but it is necessary to guard against illusions. Only where hypnosis can be deepened to somnambulism, are decided and lasting results to be expected:—

"In brief, my abnormality consists of this, that in sexual relations I feel myself to be completely feminine. Since my earliest youth, in my sexual acts and funcies, I have always had before my eyes only images of masculine beings and masculine genitals.

"Until I went to the University, I found nothing in this (I had never spoken with others about my funcies, but rather, while at the Gymmatium, lived a silent and retired life).

"While at the University, it struck me that female persons made not the alightest impression on me. Since then, in houses of prostitution, etc., I have attempted coitins, or only to obtain an erection, with women, but always in vain. "Erection ceased immediately, as soon as I was in a room alone with a woman. At first I considered it impotence, though, at the same time, I was so excited sexually that I had to masturbate several times during the day in order to sleep.

"Quite different, however, has been the development of my feelings toward the musculine sex, and it has grown stronger every year. At first they expressed themselves in extraordinary, enthusiastic friendship for certain persons, under whose windows at night I would wait for hours; whom in all possible ways I would try to meet on the streets, and with whom I sought to come in contact. I wrote such persons the most passionate letters, in which, however, I was shy in expressing my fadings too plainly. Later, after my twentieth year, I come to understand the essential nature of my inclinations, particularly from the senseral pleasure I experienced as soon as I came in direct contact. with any of these friends. These persons were all finely built men. with dark hair and eyes. I have never half my feelings excited by boys. Real pederasty is absolutely incomprehensible to me. About this time (twenty-second to twenty-third year) the circle of my beloved friends grew more and more extensive. Now I can scarcely see a handsome man on the street without having the wish to possess him excited in me. The fact is. I especially love persons of the lower classes, whose powerful forms attract me, soldiers, policemen, car-drivers, etc., (a., all that wear uniforms. If one of these returns my book, I feel a kind of thrill go through my whole hody. I am especially excitable in the evening, and merely the heavy tread of a soblier is alone sufficient to induce the most powerful erections. I take a very peculiar pleasure in following such persons and looking at them. As soon as I learn that they are married, or that they consort with girls, my excitement very frequently coases.

"A few months ago I became able to control my inclinations to such an extent that they were not directly noticeable. About this time I followed a sobiler who seemed likely to acquiesce in my desire, and spoke to him. For money he was ready for snything. At once I was filled with a most violent longing to embrace and kiss him, and the danger of being noticed did not deter me from deing it. He had sourcely grasped my genitals when ejaculation followed. With this meeting, I had finally attained the long-desired goal of my life. I know that my whole nature would find its happiness and satisfaction in it, and from this time I gave myself up entirely to the effort to find a person whom I could love, and from whom I should never part. For my acts I do not experience the slightest twings of conscience.

"To be sure, in quiet moments, I very well appreciate the difference between my way of thinking and the way of the would; as a lawyer, too, I naturally recognize the dampers of a relation of the kind I desire; but, as long as my entire nature does not change, I shall not be able to give up the opportunities offered me. Nevertheless, I should be willing to undergo any cure to be freed from my abnormal condition.

"I recognize my feminine feeling, among other things, in the fact that any sensual idea in connection with a woman must be forced, and seems smatural to me. I am also sure that my respect for a woman-I move much in the society of laities, and enjoy it-would change immediately to regugnance, were I to notice any sensoni inclination in her toward me. In my dreams and accessed funcies of men, I always think of myself in such positions with them that their faces are always toward nine. My greatest delight would be to have a powerful man, undressed, take my in his arms with a force I could not resist. In such situations I always think of myself in a passive rôle, and have to force my feelings, in order to think of myself in any other position. In this, I am truly feminine. Great as my desire may be to approach certain persons, my struggle is as great not to allow this to be noticed. Monstrehes, alundance of fair, and even dirt, seem to be especially entiring. It is hardly necessary to say that, to me, my condition, with reference to society, is absolutely desperate; and, if I had not the hope of finding a being that would understand me, life would be scarcely endemble. I fiel that sexual commerce with a man is the only means of successfully combating my inpulse to opanism. Though this has a very lad effect on me, I cannot keep myself from it constantly, because, as I have often found, I will be even more weakened by pollutious at night and persistent erections during the day.

"Up to this time I have truly loved but two men. Both were officers, remarkably endowed mentally, handsomely and gracefully formed, and of dark skin and eyes. I became acquainted with the first at the University. I was madly in love with him, and suffered unspeakably on secount of his indifference. I spent nights under his window, simply to be near him. When he was officially transferred, I was in despair.

"Soon after, I became acquainted with an officer that resembled tim, who likewise enchained me at first sight. I sought avery opportusity to meet him, spent the day in the streets, and at places where I hoped to got a sight of him. I knew how the blood came into my face when, ansuspected, I saw him. When I saw him friendly with others, I could scarcely contain myself for jenlowy. When I sat near him, I was impelled to touch him. I could scarcely conceal my excitement when I touched his knew or thigh. I mover ventured, however, to express my feelings to him; for, from his conduct, I was convinced that he would not understand them or share them.

"I am twenty-seven years old, of medium beight, and well-developed, and would be considered handsome. My chest is somewhat narrow, hands and foct small, and soice weak. Mentally, I think I am well endewed; for I passed the State examination with distinction, speak several languages, and am a good painter. "In my calling I pass for one that is industrious and conscientions. My acquaintances think me cold and pensilar. I do not smoke, do not play games, and cannot sing or whistle. My gait, like my toler, is somewhat affected. I have much hade for elegence, love adocument, sweet-mosts, and performs, and prefer the somety of ladies."

Prom Dr. von Schrenk's notes of the case, it is learned, further, that social and criminal deterrents, on the one hand, and uncontrollable desire for his own sex, on the other, caused violent mental struggles, and made life unendomble. For this reason the patient confided in the physician. January 22, 1887, hypnotic treatment, with suggestion, after the method of Nancy, was begun with the patient. Gradually it became possible to induce sommericalism.

The suggestions were made with reference to indifference to men, and ability to resist them, and to increase of interest in women; imaterbation was thus forlidden, and women substituted for men in inscriptions dreams. After a few sittings pleasure at sight of women was induced. At the seventh sitting successful coitus was suggested; this was fulfilled.

During the next three months the patient remained, under the influence of occasional hypnotic suggestions, in the full possession of menul sexual functions. April 22, 1889, there was a relapse, induced by a companion. At the next sitting, remove and shame. As explation, colour with a woman in the presence of his seducer.

The patient complained that coits with women below him in station did not satisfy his aesthetic feelings. He hoped to find satisfaction in a imppy marriage. After forty-five sittings (May 2, 1889) the patient considered himself cured. Treatment censed. He became engaged to a young lady some weeks later, and presented himself again, after six months, as a imppy bridegroom. He thought that, in his happeness with his wife, he had a sure preventive against relapse.

The author emphasizes the fact that the hypnotic treatment had no injurious collateral effect, and leaves underided the question as to whother the cure is permanent or not, with R.'s very bad heredity. But he expresses the conviction that, in case of relapse, renewed hypnotic treatment would not be contrainalicated.

Since the incredible result of this case interested me exceedingly, as did its further course, I wrote to the author, requesting information concerning his patient.

Dr. v. Schrenk very kindly placed at my disposal the following letter, which he had received from the patient in January, 1890:—

"By manus of suggestive treatment given me by Baron Schrenk, for the first time I became possessed of the payetrical condition that permitted me to have intercourse with a woman, which, up to that time, is spite of repeated efforts, I had been unable to do successfully.

"Since my authoric needs were unsatisfied by intercourse with positives, I thought to find my real salvation in matrimony. The unifer friendly inclination toward a lady known in my youth offered me the apportunity, the more because I believed that she, of all others, would be in a position to awaken feelings for the opposite sex which were absolutely foreign to me. Her character,—i.e., our harmony,—is in such accord with my inclinations that I am fully convinced that I shall also find complete-psychical satisfaction. This conviction has not changed during the eight months of my engagement.

"I intend to be married in about four weeks.

"As far as my position with respect of my own sex is concerned, say power of resistance—and this is the lasting positive result of this treatment—is absolutely changed in degree. While previously it was impossible for me to overcome an intense sexual excitation when I saw a finely formed car-driver, to-day, in the company of my former lovers, I am without sexual excitament. At the same time, I must sold that now, as formerly, their society has a certain attraction for me, though it is not to be compared with my surfler position.

"On the other hand, I have refused repeated persuasions to indulge in sexual intercourse with men, without expending much force in resistance,—persuasions which formerly I about have been anable to resist. I may say, indeed, that it is a feeling of composition for my former lovers, that have proved their passionate devotion to me, which keeps me from directly repulsing them. My action seems to be due to a feeling of dety.

rather than to inner need.

"Since the conclusion of treatment, I have not conserted with prostitutes. This circumstance, and the numerous letters and personalous from my former lover, may well be the reason why, in the eight months that have clapsed. I have allowed him to personale me to sexual intercourse on three or four occasions. At these times I have always been conscious of being completely unster of myself, as compared with my earlier passistents condition in like situations, as the violent reproaches of my friend convinced me. I always feel a certain ancomparable repagnance, which causes be based on moved grownds, but which, I believe, must be attributed to the treatment. I no longer feel a love for him in the former sense. Besides, since the treatment, I have sought no opportunities for sexual intercourse with men, and I feel to need of it. But, formerly, not a day passed on which I did not feel impelled to it, so that at times I was unable to think of anything also. Awake or dreaming, ideas of sexual content are very infrequent.

-I may express the belief that my marriage, that is to take place in a few weeks, and the much desired change of place that is bound to it, will entirely remove the residuum of my earlier condition. I conclude these lines with the honest assurance that, subjectively, I am another man, and that this change has restored the mental equilibrium that was previously westing."

The foregoing words, which Dr. v. Schrenk completes with the verbal statement of the patient that he had not practiced onanism again, are a buildiant proof of the lasting effect of posthypnotic suggestion. I consider the hetero-sexual instinct of the patient to be the artificial creation of his excellent physician; and the patient himself seems to recognize this, in that he speaks of a repugnance which "does not rest on moral grounds, but which depends on the treatment."

The further fate of this interesting patient may be learned from the following letter, kindly submitted by Dr. v. Schrenk:-

"Honored Sir : Having been home some days from my webding. formey, I wish to send you a short report of my present condition. During the week before my wedding I was in great excitement, became I fenred that I should be unable to perform certain duties. The impelling thoughts of my friend, who wished another meeting with me, at any price, had no effect on me. We had not seen each other since I heard from you last. [Receipt of the perfessor's letter.] However, I was much troubled with the thought that my marriage must be unhappy. Now, however, I have no anxiety. To be sure, on the first night, sucress was difficult, to induce sexual excitation in myself, but on the following night, and since, the influences needed for a normal man, I believe, would have been sufficient for me. I am also convinced that the harmony between us, which, of course, is mentally of long standing, will become more and more complete. A relapse to the former condition seems impossible. It is, perhaps, significant for my present condition, that I one night dresmed of my former lover, and that the dream was not sensual, and did not excite me sensually.

"I am settisfied with my present circumstances. I am, of course, well aware that my present isolinations are far from being of a degree equal to what they formerly were. I believe, however, that they will daily grow stronger. Already my former life is incomprehensible, and I cannot understand why I did not earlier think to overcome the abnormal sexual instinct by normal sexual indulgence. A relapse would now be possible only with an entire change of my mental life; and, in a word, it seems impossible.

"Your obedient servant,

From a letter of Dr. v. Schrenk's, of December 7th, I extract the following:-

"In this case the cure seems to be of longer duration than I expected; for, on speaking with the patient, some months ago, he said that he was perfectly happy in matriage, and, as I hear, he expects soon the imprisons of a father."

Dr. v. Schrenk has reported in the Wiener internationales klimischen Rundschau, 1891, No. 26, later and very interesting facts concerning his patient, which, therapeutically, are very satisfactory.

IV. SPECIAL PATHOLOGY.

THE MANIFESTATIONS OF ABNORMAL SEXUAL LIPE IN THE VARIOUS FORMS AND STATES OF MENTAL DISTURBANCE.

ARREST OF MENTAL DEVELOPMENT.

SEXUAL life in idiots is, in general, but slightly developed. It is wanting entirely in idiots of high grade. In such instances the genitals are frequently small and deformed, and menstruntion is late or does not occur at all. There is impotence, or sterility, as the case may be. Even in idiots of low grade, sexuality is not prominent. In infrequent cases it is manifested with a certain periodicity, and then with greater intensity. It may then be expressed impulsively, and be violently satisfied. Perversions of the sexual instinct do not occur at the lowest levels of mental development.

When the desire for sexual satisfaction is opposed in these cases, great passion is excited, with danger of murderous assault on the persons attacked. It is to be expected that idiots should not exercise choice, and they attempt to satisfy the sexual instinct on their nearest relatives.

Thus Marc-Ideler reports the case of an idiot who attempted to rape his sister, and too almost strongled her when he was discovered:

Friedreich reports an analogous asse (Priedreich's Blätter, 1858, p. 50).

I have repeatedly had occasion to give opinions in cases of attempts to rape little girls.

Girand (Annal, mid. payed., 1885, Nr. 1) also reports a case of this kind. Consciousness of the significance of the act is always musting; an instinctive knowledge that such obscesse acts are not publicly permitted is often present, and causes the attempted sexual act to be undertaken in a described place.

In imbeciles the sexual instinct is usually developed as in normal individuals. The moral inhibitory ideas are cloudy, and, therefore, the sexual impulse is more or less openly manifisted. For this reason imbeciles are sources of disturbance in society. Abnormal intensity and perversion of the sexual instinct are infrequent.

(358)

The most frequent manner of satisfaction of the sexual desire is onanism. The weak-minded seldom make sexual attacks on adults of the opposite sex.

Sexual satisfaction with animals is frequently attempted. The great majority of cases of injury (sexual) to animals must be attributed to imbeciles. Children are quite often their victims.

Emisinghesis (Maschka's Handit iv., p. 234) draws attention to the frequency of open manifestation of sexual instinct, which comprises open masterbation, exhibition of the genitals, attacks on children and these of the same sex, and sodomy.

Girand (Annal, méd. psychol., 1855, Nr. 1) has reported a whole series of immoral attacks on children:—

 H., aged 17, insherile, entitled a little girl late a barn, by giving her auts. There he exposed her gostals and showed his own, making movements of coitus on the child's abdomen. He had no idea of the usural significance of the net.

2. L., aged 21; imbecile; degenerate. While he was watching eattle, his sister of eleven years, with a playmate of eight years, came and told him how some unknown man had attempted to do them vicinies. L. led the children to a deserted house and attempted coitus with the younger child, but let her go because no emission occurred, and because the child cried out. On the way home he promised to marry her if she would not say anything. At the trial he thought that by marriage he could right the wrong he had done.

& G., aged 21, microcephalic, imbecile, has masturbated since his sixth year, and practiced active and passive pederasty. He has repeatedly tried to perform pederasty with hojo, and attacked little girls. He was absolutely without an understanding of his acts. His sexual desire was manifested periodically and intensely, so in animals."

* Other cases of podernily r. Cooper, Kitt. Norollen, Fall 5; Courtes, Annal. 1846.

pepcholi.

&lt;sup>1</sup> For namerous cases, c. Henke's Zeitschr., pxiii.—Explanaugebett, p. 147.—Combes, Annut. matt. psychol., 1996.—Linner, Zerrich. conferentiation, p. 200.—Cospec.Linner, Lehrh., 7. Auflage, Fait 205.—Tartelle, Principalet's Restor I. general. Mod., 1990, Elen 1.

4. B., aged 21; imbecile. While alone in a forest with his sister of nineteen, he demanded that she allow coites. She refused. He threatened to strangle her, and statised her with a knile. The frightened girl foudled his penis, and he then left her and quietly went on with his work. It has a deformed, microcopinite skull, and has no sense of the significance of his art.

Emminghaus (op. cit., p. 234) reports the case of an exhibitionist:-

Case 148. A man, aged 40, married, had for elatern years been acconstromed to exhibit himself in parks, at dask, to little girls and servants, and draw their attention to himself by whistling. After having been frequently punished for it, he avoided the places, but he carried on his practice elsewhere. Hydrocephalus. Mental weskness of alight degree. Mild sentence passed.

Case 187. X., of tainted family; imbecile; defective and perverted in interiors, feeling, and wall. For help and protection he was brought before an officer. It was complained that he had repeatedly exposed his genitals to servant-girls, and had shown himself at windows with the upper portion of his body naked. No other manifestations of sexual instinct. No onanism reported. (Samler, Archiv f. Paych, i.

p. 655.)

Case 148. Pederasty with a Child .- On April 8, 1884, at ten o'clock. a.m., while X, was sitting on the street, holding a boy of eighteen months on her lap, a certain Valiario approached and took the child from X. saying he was going to take it for a walk. He went the distance of half a kilometre, and returned, saying that the child had fallen from his arms, and thus injured its same. The same was torn, and blood was pouring from it. At the place where the deed was done, traces of sensen were found. V. confessed his horrible crime, said, at his final trial, be acted so strongely that an examination of his mental condition was made. He had impressed the prison attendents as being an imbedie. V., aged 45, muson, defective morally and intellectually, is delicho-microrephalic; has marrow, deformed facial bones, and the inless of the face and the ears are asymmetrical; the trow is low and retreating; genitals normal. V. shows general diminstion of estansons sensibility, is imbeeile, sent tex no ideas. He lives in the present, has no ambition, and does nothing of his own will. He has no desires and no escotional feeling. He less never had evites. Nothing more could be ascentained about his vita sexualis. Proofs of intellectual and moral idiscy, this to missisceplisty; the crime is referred to a perverse, meoutrollable sexual impulse. Sent to an asylum. (Virgilio, il Manicomio, V. year, N = 2.

A case mentioned by L. Meyer (Arch. f. Psych., Bd. i, p. 103) shows bow female imbeciles may indulge in shameless prostitution and immorality.

STATES OF ACQUIED MENTAL WEARNESS.

The numerous anomalies of the vita sexualis in senile dementia have been described in the section on "General Pathology." In other conditions of acquired mental weakness, —those due to apoplexy; trauma capitis; to the secondary stages of psychoses; or to inflammatory processes in the cortex (lues, paretic dementia),—perversions of the sexual instinct seem to be infrequent; and here the immoral sexual acts seem to depend on abnormally increased or uninhibited sexual feeling, which, in itself, is not abnormal.

(1) Dementia Consecutive to Psychoses,

Casper (Klin. Novellen, Fall 31) reports a case that belongs here. It is that of a physician, aged 33, who attempted mpe on a child. He was weakened mentally, as a result of hypochondriacal melancholis. He excused his deed in a very silly way, and had no appreciation of the moral and criminal meaning of the act, which was apparently the result of a sexual impulse that could not be controlled on account of his mental weakness.

Case 21, in Liman's Zweifelkofte Geisteszuständen, is an analogous case (dementia after melancholia; offense against morals by exhibition).

(2) Dementia After Apoplexy.

Case 149. B., aged 52. He passed through a cerebral attack, and was no longer able to exery on his business as a searchant.

One day, in the absence of his wife, he locked two girls in the house, gave them liquous to drink, and then carried out sexual acts with the children. He commanded them to say nothing, and went to his business. The medical expert established mental weakness, resulting from repeated apoplexics. B., who, up to this time, had been well-behaved, says he committed the criminal set because of an incontrollable and incomprehensible impulse; and that, when he came to himself, he was ashamed, and sent the girls away. Since his specientic attack, B. had been weak-minded, incapable of business, and hemiplegic; but, scon after arrest, he made an unskillful attempt at saloide. He often cried chibdishly. His moral and intellectual energy is opposing his sensual impulses was certainly much weakened. No sentence. (Girand, Jan. mid. Popchol. March, 1881.)

V. Rander, Vierteljahrender, f. ger M., artit, p. 32.—Cusper, Klin. Norollen, Fall 22.

(3) Dementia After Injury of Head.

Case 159. K., when fourteen years old, was injured on the bend by a horse. The skull was fractured in several places, and several pieces of bone required removal.

From that time K, was weak mentally, passionate, and ill-tempered.

Gradually he developed an inordinate and truly beastly seminality, which drave him to the most immoral acts. One day he raped a girt of twelve, and strangfed her for fear of discovery. Arrested, he confessed. The medical experts declared him responsible, and he was executed.

The autopsy revealed oscilication of almost all the satures, remarkable asymmetry of the halves of the skull, and evidences of besied fractures. The affected homisphere had bunds of cicatricial tissue running through it, and was one-third smaller than the other. (Priedrosch's Elatter, 1885, Heft 6.)

(4) Acquired Mental Weakness, Probably Resulting from Luca.

Case 151. X., officer, and repeatedly committed immoral acts with little girls; among other things, he had induced them to perform manusterpration on him, had exposed his genitals, and handled theirs.

X. formerly healthy, and of bismeless life, was infected with syphilis in 1867. In 1879 paralysis of the left abducens occurred. Thereafter mental weakness was noticed, with a strange of his disposition and character. Heafische, occasional incoherence of speech, failure of power of thought and logic, occasional inequality of pupils, and puresis of the right facial muscles, were observed.

X., aged 37, shows no trace of lines when examined. The paralysis of the left abdocens is still present. The left eye is amblyopic. He is mentally weak. Concerning the trial that was before him, he said it was nothing but a harmless misunderstanding. Indications of aphasia. Weakness of memory, particularly for recent events. Superficial emotional reaction; tapid extraortion of memory and ability to speak, Proved: that the ethical defect and the perverse sexual impulse are the symptoms of an absormal condition of brain induced by lace.

Suspension of criminal proceedings. (Personal case. Jahrbücker für Paulfatrus.)

(5) Paretic Dementia.

Here the sexual life is usually abnormally affected; in the incipient stages of the disease, as well as in episodical states of excitement, it is intensified, and sometimes perverse. In the final stages libido and sexual power usually become nil.

Just as in the prodromal stage of the senile forms, one sees here, in connection with more or less evident losses in the moral and intellectual spheres, expressions of an apparently intensified sexual instinct (obscene talk, openness in intercourse with the opposite sex, thoughts of marriage, frequenting of brothels, etc.), which is characteristic of the clouding of consciousness.

Seduction, abduction, and public scandal are here the order of the day. At first there is still some appreciation of the circumstances, though the synicism of the acts is striking enough. As the mental weakness increases, such patients become criminal by reason of exhibition, masturbation in the streets, and attempts at immoral acts with children.

If conditions of mental excitement come on, attempts at rape are committed, or, at least, grossly immoral acts,—the patient attacks women on the street, appears in public in very imperfect dress; or, half-clothed, tries to force his way into strange houses, to cohabit with the wife of an acquaintance, or to marry the daughter on the spot.

Numerous cases belonging to this category are cited by Tardien ("Attentate nex moreurs"); Mendel ("Progressive Paralyse der Irren," 1889, p. 123); Westplial (Arch. J. Psych., vii., p. 622); and a case by Petrocci (Annel. mid. Psychol., 1815) shows that bigamy may also occur here.

The brutal disregard of consequences with which the patients in the advanced stages attempt to satisfy their sexual instinct, is characteristic.

In a case reported by Legrand (" La folie," p. 519), the father of a family was found maxturbating in the open street. After the act he consumed his senses.

A patient seen by me, an officer, of a prominent family, in broad daylight, made attacks on little girls at a watering-place.

A similar case is reported by Dr. Régio p. De la dynamic on exaltation forestonnelle au début de la paral, géa.," 1858).

Cases reported by Tumowsky (op. cir., p. 82) show that also paderasty and bestiality may occur in the prodround stages and course of this maledy.

Epilepsy.—Epilepsy is allied to the acquired states of mental weakness because it often leads to them, and then all the possibilities of reckless satisfaction of the sexual impulse that have been mentioned may occur. Moreover, in many epileptics the sexual instinct is very intense. For the most part, it is satisfied by musturbation, now and then by attacks on children, and by pederasty. Perversion of the instinct with perverse sexual acts seems to be infrequent.

Much more important are the numerous cases in literature in which epilepties, who, during intervals, present no signs of active sexual impulse, but manifest it in connection with epileptic attacks, or during the time of equivalent or post-epileptic exceptional mental states. These cases have scarcely yet been studied clinically, and forensically not at all; but they deserve careful study. In this way certain cases of violence and rape would be understood, and legal murders prevented.

From the following facts, it will certainly be clear that the cerebral changes which accompany the epileptic outbreak may induce an abnormal excitation of the sexual instinct. Besides, in the exceptional mental states of epileptics, they are unable to resist their impulses, by reason of the disturbance of consciousness.

For years I have known a young epileptic, of bad heredity, who, always after frequent epileptic arisares, attacks his mother, and tries to violate her.\(^1\) After a time he comes to himself, and has no memory of his acts. In the intervals he is very strict in morals, and has but slight sexual inclination.

I Assist (Labels d. Psych., p. 416) sepositely emphasizes the passionals element in epitepties: "There access epitepsy that expressed their is a most season was forward the mother, and that that routed moder a propiose in the part of fathers, concerning actual intercorner with the notices." But when Amelt declares that, wherever there is a petatianty of the arms life, thought of an epiteptic stement about come into considerables, he is in secon.

Some years ago I became acquainted with a young peasant, who, during epileptic attacks, namurbated shamelessly, but during the intervals was above represent.

Simon ("Crimes et délits," p. 220) mentions an epiceptic girl of twenty-direc, well educated, and of the best morale, who, in attacks of vertigo, would about out obscene words, then raise her dress, make incirious moretreuts, and try to tear open bey moler-garments.

Kierran (Alfeniet and Neurologiat, January, 1884) reports the case of an epileptic who always had, as an sum, the vision of a beautiful woman is lastivious attitudes, which induced speculation. After some years, with treatment with potassium beamide, the vision was changed to that of a devil attacking him with a patchlock. The instant this reached him, he became unconscious.

The same nuther speaks of a very respectable man who had, two or three times a year, epiloptic attacks of furor and dyathymin, with impulses to polaristy, which hasted a week or two; and of a lady who, with epilopsy that came on during the climaeterium, had scaud desire for boys.

Case 152. W., of good herefity, previously healthy; before and after, sound scentally, quiet, kind, temperate. On April 13, 1877, he had no appetite. On the 14th, in the presence of his wife and children, he dimunded cottes, first of his wife's friend, who was present, then of his wife. Taken away, he had no epileptoid attack; after this he became wildly manincal and destructive, three hot water on those that track to appearsh him, and threw a child in the store. Then he seem became quiet, but for some days remained confused, and finally came to himself with no memory of the events of his attack. (Kownlewsky, Jahroiichez
f. Psych., 1879.)

Another case, examined by Casper (Klin. Noveller, p. 267), may be attributed to epilepsy (larvated). A respectable man attacked four wassen, one after another, in the open street (once before two witnesses), and violated one of them, "notwithstanding that his young, pretty, and healthy wife." lived hard by.

The epileptic significance of the sexual acts in the following cases is unequivocal:—

Case 153. L., official, aged 40; a kind hashend and father. During four years he has offended public morals twenty-five times, for which he has had to endure long imprisonment.

In the first seven complaints he was accused of exposing his genitals to girls from eleven to thirteen years old, while riding by them, and calling their attention by observe words. While in confinement, he had exposed his genitals at a window which opened on a popular street. Le's father was insure; his brother was once uset on the street wearing only a shirt. During his military service Le had had two attacks of severe fainting. Since 1855 he had suffered with peculiar attacks of vertigo, at such times becoming weak, tremnists, and deathly pule; it grow dark before his eyes, and he saw bright stars, and was ferced to get support in order to keep speight. After violent attacks, great weakness, sections executing.

Since 1861 he had been very irritable, which respected though he was as an official, caused him much trouble in his work. His wife noticed the change in him. He had days when he would run about the house as if insone, helding his head between his hands, striking the wall, and complaining of headache. In 1864 he fell to the ground four times, lying there stiff, with syss open. Confused states of consciousness.

were also proved to have occurred.

L. declared that he had not the slightest remembrance of the crime of which he was accused. Observation showed further and more violent attacks of application vertigo. L. was not sentenced. In 1875 paretic dementia developed with a rapidly fatal result. (Westphal, Arch, J. Peych., vii, p. 113.)

Case 154. A rich man of twenty-six had lived for a year with a girl with whom he was very much in love. He colabited infrequently.

and was never perverse.

Twice during the year, after excessive indulgence in alcohol, he had had epileptic attacks. One evening after dimer, where he had taken much wine, he harried to the house of his mistress, and into her electricity appartment, although the servant told bins she was not at home. From there he hastened into a room where a boy of fourteen was sheeping, and began to violate him. At the cry of the child, whose prepares and hand he had injured, the servant hurried to them. He left the boy and attacked the maid; after that he went to bed and slept twelve hours. When he awoke, be had an indistinct remembrance of intoxication and coilus. Thereafter there were repeated epileptic attacks. (Tarnowsky, ep. cat., p. 52.)

Case 155. X., of high sortal position, led a dissolute life for some time, and had spileptic attacks. He became engaged. On his weddingday, shortly before the ceremony, he appeared, on his brother's arm, before the assembled guests. When he came before his bride, he exposed his genitals and began to unsturbate. He was at ones taken to an expert in mental disease. On the way he constantly nesturbated, and for some days was actuated by this impulse, which gradually decreased in intensity. After this paroxysm the patient lind only a confused memory of the events, and could give no explanation of his acts. (Turnowsky, ep. cif., p. 53.)

Case 156. Z., aged 27; very bad heredity; optisptic. He violated a girl of eleven, and then killed her. He field about the deed. Absurer of memory, i.e., mental confusion at the time of the crime, was not proved. (Pugliese, Arch. de Paich., vill, p. 622.)

Case 152, V., aged 60, physician, violated children. Sentenced to imprisonment for two years. Dr. Marandon later proved the existence of epiloptoid attacks of apprehensiveness, dementis, crotic and hypochendeisend delusions, and occasional attacks of fear. (Lucussague, Lysumid., 1881, No. 51.)

Case 158. On August 4, 1878, H., aged 15, was picking gooseberries with several little girls and boys as her companious. Suddenly she threw L., aged 10, to the ground and exposed her, and ordered A., aged 8, and O., aged 5, to bring about conjunctio membersum with the girl; and they obeyed.

H, find a good character. For five years she had been subject to irritability, beschede, vertigo, and epileptic attacks. Her mental and physical development had been arrested. She had not menstranted, but she manifested menstrual molimens. Her mother is suspected to be spilaptic. For three months H., after sciences, had frequently done strange things, and afterward had no memory of them.

H. seems to have been deflowered. Mental defect is not apparent. She said she had no memory of the set of which she was accused. According to her mother's testimony, she had an epileptic attack on the morning of August ith, and she had been, on that account, told by her mother not to leave the house. (Pirkaner, Friedreick's Blitter f. ger. Hed., 1872.)

Case 159. Immeral Acts of an Epileptic in States of Abnormal Unconsciousness.—T., revenue-collector; aged 52; married. He is accused of having practiced immerality with boys for about seventeen years, by practicing maximilation on them, and by inducing them to carry out the act on himself. The accused, a respected officer, is over come by the terrible crime attributed to him, and declares that he knows nothing of the deeds of which he is accused. His mental integrity is questionable. His family physicism, who has known him twenty years, emphasizes his peculiar, retiring disposition and his mercerial moods. His wife asserts that T. once tried to throw her in the water, and that he sometimes had outlevake in which he torr off his clothing, and tried to throw himself out of windows. T. knew nothing of these attacks. Other witnesses testified to strange changes of mood and peculiarities of character. A physician reports the observation of occasional attacks of sertigo and consulsions in him.

The grandmother was insure; his father was affected with circuits alcoholism, and of late years had had epileptiform attacks. The father's brother was insure, and had killed a relative while in a delinous state. Another uncle of T. had killed himself. Of T.'s three children, one was weak-minded, another cross-eyed, and the third was subject to convulsions. The accused asserted that he had occasional attacks in which consciousness was so reduced that he did not know what he was about These altricks were usbered in by an aura-like pain in the back of his neck. He was then impelled to go out in the air. He did not know where he went. His wife and perfectly satisfied him sexually. For eighteen years he had had chronic conema (actual) of the second, which had often soused him to have extmonlinary sexual excitement The opinions of the six experts were contradictory (sme, attacks of larested spilopsy); the jury disagreed, so that he was dismissed. Br. Legrand do Saulle, who was called as no expert witness, found that, until his tweaty-serond year, V. had unjusted in bed from ten to eighteen times a year. After that time the energets necturns had coused; but, from that time, states of mental confusion, lasting from an bour to a day, had occurred occasionally, seel they left the patient without may memory of them. Soon again T. was arcested for public immorality, and remement to imprisonment for fifteen months. In prison he grew sick, and apperently much weaker mentally. For this peason he was pardoned, but the mental weakness increased. T, was noticed to have repeated epileutoid convelsions (tonic convulsion with tremor and loss of consciousness). (Autony, Jasel, wid. psychol., 1874, Nov.; Legmad. du Saulle, " Étude méd. légale," étc., p. 99.)

The following case of immoral acts with children, observed by the author and reported in Friedreich's Blütter, will serve to conclude this group,' so important in its legal bearings. It is the more important, in that a state of unconsciousness was established at the time of the act, and because, for allied reasons, the facts related in Latin show how a complicated and refined net becomes possible in such a state of unconsciousness.

Case 140. P., aged 49; married; hospital heneficiary. He was accused of having committed the following terrible acts with two girls, —D., aged ten, and G., aged nine,—whom he had taken to his work-shop on May 45, 1883.

D. testifies: "I was in the mendow with G. and my sister J., ago! three. P. called us into his shop and fistened the door. Thus not execulabator, linguism in or mean demitters tentabot facients; milital limbels; sustaill me in greature, bracas aperuit, vertex mean sublevarit, digitis me in genitalities titilialist of membro femina uses friends: the unbannish fierces. When I cried, he gave me twelve kronzers, and threatened to shoot me if I told on him. At last he tried to peruiade me to come again the next day."

&lt;sup>5</sup> Comp. also Lineau, SectleInste Grintenenstante, Fall 6.—Lasigue, Extitute atita, Union moli, 1877.—Bull and Chambert, Am. Somplimbuleous (Birl. des acienc. mbl., 1881).

G. testified: "P. mates et genitalia D. se exosculatus, lindem me constitus aggressus est. Deinde filiolam quoque tres nance natura in manus acceptum osculatus est audatumque parti sue virin appreseit. Postea mue nobie casent nomina interrogavit no cananit, penitalia D æ mela multo esso majora. Quin etiam nos impulit, ut membran summ intoeremor, manibus comprehenderemus et videremos, quantopere id esset excetsion."

At his examination, May 23th, P. said be had but an indistinct recollection of having fondled, caressed, and made presents to a little rid a short time before. If he had done anything more, it must have leep to an irresponsible condition. Besides, he had suffered for yours with weakness in his head, as result of an injury. On June 22d to know nothing of the events of May 25th, and nothing of his examination on May 20th. This amnests was shown, also, on cross-examination.

P. comes of a family affected with cerebral discour; a brother was application. P. was formerly a drinker. Years before, he had netually suffered an injury to his head. Since then, from time to time, he has had situcks of mental disturbance, introduced by moroseness, irritability, tendenor to alcoholic excesses, apprehension, and debusions of persontion sufficient to induce threats and doeds of violence. At the some time, he would have auditory hyperauthesia, vertigo, headache, and serebral emigestion, -all this, with great mental confusion and appresia for the whole period of the attack, which would sometimes last for weeks.

During the intervals he was subject to headwide, which marted from the seat of injury on the head (a small year in the skin over the right temple), which was prinful on pressure. With exacerbation of the headache, he became very irritable, morose to an extent that inclined him to spicide, and mentally like one drunk. In 1819, while in such a state, he made an impulsive attempt at suicide, of which he afterward had no memory. Soon after this, being sent to hospital, he gave the impression of being epileptic, and, for a long time, was treated with potbromide. At the end of 1879 he was taken to the infirmery, no actual epileptic attack having been observed.

During his bacid intervals he was a virtuous, infinatrious, goodnatured man, and had never shown any sexual excitement; and, antill this time, never sexual inclinations, even during his mental confusion, Morrover, until ladely, he lead lived with his wife. At the time of the erminal act, he had shown signs of an approaching attack, and had salord the physician to prescribe por bromids.

P. asserted that, since the injury to his head, he had been intolerant of best said alcohol, which immediately brought on beschede and confin sion. The medical examination proved the truth of his resertions about mental weakness, irritability, and poor sleep.

If pressure were made at the west of the traums, P. became congested, irritable, confused, and translited all over; he appeared excited; conscioumers was disturbed, and remained so for hours.

At times, when he is free from the assessment that start from the sear, he seems kind, free, willing, and open, though he is mentally weak and cloudy. P. was not sentenced. (Fade Friedresch's Blatter for full report.)

PERSONGAL INSANITE.

Just as in cases of non-periodical mania, an abnormal intensity or a noticeable prominence of the sexual sphere is very often manifested in the periodical attacks (c. infra, "Mania").

The following case, reported by Servaes (Arch. f. Psych.), shows that it then may also be perverted:—

Case 161. Catharine W., agod 16; she has not yet meastrusted; previously healthy.

Seven weeks before admission (December 3, 1872), melanchallo depression and irritability. November 27th, manisonl outbreak, lasting two-days; thereafter, melancholic. December 5th, normal condition.

December 24th (twenty-eight days after the first manistral attack), eilent, sky, depressed. December 27th, exaltation (jolly, laughing, etc.), with violent love for an attendant (female). December 31st, enddenly meinscholic cutalepsy, which disappeared after two hours. January 20, 1873, new attack like the previous one. A similar one on February 18th, with traces of meases. The patient had no memory wintever for what occurred in the puroxysms, and blushed scarlet with astonishment and shame when told about them.

Thereafter there were abcetive attacks, which entirely disappeared, to give place to the normal mental condition in June.

In a case reported by Gock (Arch. f. Psych., v), which was probably circular insanity, in a man of very bad heredity, during the stage of exultation there was manifestation of sexual feeling for men. In this case, however, the patient thought himself a girl, and it is questionable whether the sexual inclination was induced by the delusion or by a contrary sexual instinct.

In connection with these cases of abnormal manifestation of the sexual instinct are those which, as a symptom of mania, manifest an abnormal and frequently a perverse sexual instinct in an impulsive way, analogous to dipsomania, which forms the nucleus of the psychical disturbance, while in the intervals the sexual instinct is neither intense nor perverse. Quite a pure case of such periodical psychopathia sexualis, connected with the process of menstruction, is the following, reported by Anjel (Arch. f. Psych., xv, H. 2):—

Case 162. A quiet hely, near the climarteric. Very laid heredity. In let youth, attacks of petit unit. Always eccentric, quick-tempered; sers moral; childless marriage.

Several years upo, after a violent emotional disturbance, a hysteroepileptic attack, with post-epileptic insonity of several weeks' duration. Thereafter there was sleeplessness for several months. Following this, there was always menstrual insomnia, and the impulse to embrace and this boys of ten, and fondle their genitals. During this excitement there was no desire for coitus; certainly not for intercourse with adults.

The patient often speaks openly of this impulse, and asks to be watched, as she is not to be trusted. In the intervals she anxiously acous all talk of it, is very modest, and in newise passionate sexually.

With reference to the still imperfectly-known cases of periodical psychopathic sexualis of this kind, Turnowsky (op. cot., p. 85) has under valuable contributions, though his cases were not all of a periodic nature; and one of the cases, taken from a work of the author's, is not rightly understood (Case 8, p. 31), since addrony was only subsidiary, and the abnormal intense litido sexualis was not periodic.

Taraousky reports mass where married, cultured men, the fathers of families, were, from time to time, compelled to perform the most terrible sexual acts, while during the interrals they were sexually normal, abhorred their percaysmal sexual acts, and shuddered before the expectation of their repetition.

If a new paroxysm came on, the normal sexual instinct disappeared; a state of mental excitoment arose with insomnia, and thoughts and impulses to commit the perverse sexual acts, with anxious confusion and an increasing impulse to the abberred includence. In this state the act was a rollef, because it ended the condition. The analogy with dipagentaria is complete.

For other cases (of periodical pedemsty), side Tarnowsky, op. cit., p. 41. The case there reported, on page 46, belongs in the category of epilepsy.

The following case, reported by Anjel (Arch. f. Psych., xv, H. 2), is one of the most typical of the convulsive-like occurrence of sexual excitement:—

Case 163. A gentleman of high social position, aged 45; generally tespected and beloved; heredity good; very moral; married fifteen years. Previously normal sexually; the father of several healthy children, and living in happy matrimony. Eight years ago he suffered a riolent fright. For some weeks thereafter he had a feeling of appechension and cardiac attacks. Then came attacks, at intervals of several months or a year, of what the patient called his "moral catarrh." He became sleepless. After three days, loss of appetite, increasing irritability, strange appearance; fixed store, storing into space; palences, changing with reduces; tremor of the fingers; red, shining eyes, with pseuliar glassy expression; and violent, quick manner of speech. There was a desire for girls of from five to ten years, even for his own daughters. He would beg his wife to guard the children. For days at a time, while in this state, he would shut binself in his room. Previously he was compelled to pass school-girls on the street, and he found a pseuliar pleasure in exposing his genitals before them, by acting as if about to urinate.

For fear of exposure, he shots himself in his room, fell of desire, incapable of movement, and form by feelings of fear. Consciousness seems to be undisturbed. The attacks last from eight to fourteen days. The cause of their return is not clear. Improvement is sudden; there is great desire for sleep, and, after this is satisfied, he is again well. In the interval there is nothing abnormal. The author assumes an epileptic foundation, and considers the attacks to be the psychical equivalents of epileptic convulsions (1).

Massia.—With the general excitation that here exists in the psychical organ, the sexual sphere is likewise often implitated. In maniscal individuals of the female sex, this is the rule. In certain cases, it may be questionable whether the instinct, which, in itself, is not intensified, is simply recklessly manifested, or whether it is present in actual abnormal intensity. For the most part, the latter is the true assumption, certainly so where sexual delusions and their religious equivalents are constantly expressed. In accordance with the degrees of intensity of the disease, the intensified instinct is expressed in different forms.

In simple maniscal exaltation in men, courting, frivolity, and lasciviousness in speech, and frequenting of brothels, are observed; in women, inclination for the society of men, personal adorament, perfumes, talk of marriage and scandals, suspicion of the virtue of other women; or there is manifested the religious equivalent,—pilgrimages, missionary work, desire to go into a cloister or to become the servant of a priest; and in this case there is much talk about innocence and virginity.

At the height of manin there may be seen invitations to coitus, exhibition, obscenity, great excitation at sight of women, bendency to smear the person with saliva, urine, and even faces; religio-sexual delusions,—to be under the protection of the Holy Ghost, to have given birth to Christ, etc.; open onanism, and pelvic movements of coitus.

In maniscal men care must be taken to prevent shameless masterbation and sexual attacks on women.

SATURDAME AND NUMBEROGANIA.

States of mental excitement, in which an abnormal intense sexual impulse is prominent, are called satyriasis (in males) and nymphomania (in women), or uteromania.

Moreau considers these cases peculiar to themselves, but he is certainly in error. The sexual complexus of symptoms is always but the partial manifestation of a general psychosis (manin, hallucinatory insanity!).

The essential element of the state of sexual excitement is a condition of psychical hypercesthesia with involvement of the sexual sphere. The imagination calls up only sexual images, which may lead to hallucinations, illusions, and true hallucinators delirium.

The most indifferent ideas excite sensual association, and the lustful coloring of the ideas and apperceptions is very much intensified.

The abnormal state of consciousness implicates the whole course of feeling and desire, and is accompanied by general physical excitement like that that accompanies coitus (e. "Physiology"). Often the genitals are in a constant state of turgor (prinpism in males).

The man affected with this sexual passion seeks to satisfy his desire at any price, and, therefore, becomes very dangerous to women. Faute de micaz, he practices onanism or sodomy. The nymphomaniacal woman seeks men by exhibition, or to attract them by her sensual conduct; at the sight of men she is intensely excited sexually, and satisfies herself by masturbation, or by pelvic movements of coities.

Satyriasis is infrequent. Nymphomania is more frequently observed, and not seldom in the climaeteric. It may occur in sensity. Abstinence, with constant excitation of the sexual sphere as a result of psychical or peripheral irritation (pruritus pudenda, oxymis, etc.), may cause these conditions, but probably only in those predisposed.

The assertion that it may also result from poisoning by cantharides seems to depend upon confounding it with priapism. The primary lustful feeling that accompanies prinpism due to cantharides soon becomes painful. Satyriasis and nymphomania are acute abnormal psycho-sexual states.

There are also cases that, not without reason, might be called chronic satyriasis or nymphomania. To these belong the men who, for the most part as a result of abuses veneris, or more particularly of masturbation, suffer with neurasthenia sexualis, and at the same time have intense libido exualis. The imagination, as in acute cases, is in a state of excitement, and the mind full of obscene images; so that the most elevated ideas are besmirched with the most cynical images and thoughts.

The thought and desire of such men are solely directed to the sexual sphere; and since their flesh is weak, led on by their fancy, they come to indulge in the grossest perversions of the sexual act.

Analogous cases in women may be called chronic nymphomania. They naturally lead to prostitution. Legrand du Saulle ("La folie," p. 510) reports interesting cases which apparently are pure.

Meluschotics.—The thoughts and feelings of melancholines are not favorable for the excitation of sexual desires. At the same time, these patients sometimes musturbate. In my experience such cases have always been heredistarily predisposed and previously given to onanism. The act did not seem to be so much due to a lustful desire as to be induced by habit, excess, anxiety, and the impulse to change temporarily the painful mental condition.

Comp. the interesting cases of Marc.Heise, S. p. 137.—Halar, "Grandons der Secient-ellipsois," S, pp. 439-432.

Hysteria.—In this neurosis the sexual life is very frequently abnormal; indeed, always in predisposed individuals. All the possible anomalies of the sexual function may occur here, with sudden changes and peculiar activity; and, on an hereditary degenerate basis and in moral imbecility, they may appear in the most perverse forms. The abnormal change and inversion of the sexual feeling are never without effect upon the patient's disposition.

The following case, reported by Girnud, is one of this nature worthy of repetition :-

Case 164. Marian L., of Bordeaux. At night, while the household was asleep under the influence of narcoties she had administered, she had given the children of the house to her lover for sexual enjoyment, and had looked on at the immeral nets. It was found that L was hysterical (insulanceathesia and convolute attacks), but before her illness she had become a shameless prostitute, and lost all metal sense.

In the hysterical the sexual sphere is often abnormally excited. This excitement may be intermittent (menstrual t). Shameless prostitution, even in married women, may result. In a milder form the sexual impulse expresses itself in coanism, going about in a room naked, smearing the person with urine and other things, or wearing male attire, etc.

Schule (Klin. Psychiatrie, 1886, p. 237) finds very frequently an abnormally intense sexual impulse "which disposes girls, and even women living in happy marriage, to become Messalinas."

The author cited knows cases in which, on the wedding-journey, attempts at flight with men, who had been accidentally met, were made; and respected wives who entered into liaisons, and sacrificed everything to their insatiable impulse.

In hysterical insanity the abnormally intense sexual impulse may express itself in delusions of jealousy, unfounded accusations against men for immoral acts," hallucinations of coitus," etc.

Occasionally frigidity may occur, with absence of lustful freling,-due, for the most part, to genital anaesthesia.

Percassia.—Abnormal manifestations in the sexual sphere, in the various forms of paramois, are not infrequent. Many of these cases are developed on sexual abuse (mosturbatic paramois) or sexual excitement; and, according to experience, in individuals psychically degenerate, with other functional signs of degeneracy, the sexual sphere is, for the most part, deeply implicated.

In pamnois religious and crotica the abnormally intense and, under certain circumstances, perverse sexual instinct is most clearly manifested. In the first variety, however, the condition of sexual excitation is expressed not so much in a direct method of satisfaction of the sexual desires as (there are exceptions) in platonic love,—in enthusiastic admiration of a person of the opposite sex who is pleasing aesthetically. Under certain circumstances, the enthusiasm is for a fanciful person, a portrait, or a statue.

A love for the opposite sex that is weak and purely mental, too, often has its basis in weakness of the genitals due to longcontinued masturbation; and, under the guise of virtuous admiration of a beloved person, great lasciviousness and sexual perversion are often concealed. Episodically, especially in women, violent sexual excitement may occur as a nymphomania.

For the most part, paranoia religiosa rests upon sexuality which manifests itself in a sexual impulse that is abnormally early and intense. The libido finds satisfaction in masturbation or religious enthusiasm, the object of which may be a certain minister, saint, etc.

The psycho-pathological relations between the sexual and religious domains have been described in detail on p. 8 of seq.

2 The horsbus in the witch tright of the Middle Ages depended on them.

&lt;sup>8</sup> Fale Fall Merins, in the author's Labels, d. ger. Psychopathol., S. Auff., p. 825 — Marci, Traini des maind, mentales, p. 697.—Legrand, La folie, p. 207.—Propose La Roundes, in Acond. Cheg., I. Serie, in ; S. Serie, p. 311.

Apart from masturbation, sexual crimes are relatively frequent in religious parancis.

Maro's work (p. 160) contains a remarkable example of religious insanity.

Girand (Annal. suid. psychol.) has reported a case of rape of a little girl by a religious paranoiac, aged 43, who was temporarily erotic. Here, also, belongs a case of incest (Liman, Vierteljahrsschr. f. ger. Med.).

Case 165. M. imprognated his daughter. His wife, mother of eighteen shidren, and herself pregrant by her husband, lodged the complaint.

M. had had religious paranola for two years. "It was revealed to me that I should beget the Eternal Son with my daughter. Then a man of feah and blood would arise by my faith, who would be eighteen hundred years old. He would be a bridge between the Old and New Testaments."

This command, which he deemed divine, was the cause of his insans act.

Sexual acts that have a pathological motive sometimes occur in persecutory paranois.

Case 166. A married woman of thirty had, by means of money and sweetments, enticed a boy of five, who played near her, handled his genitals, and them attempted coitins. She was a teacher, who had been betrayed and then cast off. Previously moral, for some time she had given herself to prostitution. The explaination of her immoral change was given, when it was found that the had various delusions of persecution, and thought she was under the secret influence of her seductr, who imposhed her to sexual acts. She also believed that the boy had been put in her way by her seducer. Course sensuality as a motive for her trime came less into consideration, as it would have been easy for her to satisfy sexual desire in a natural way. (Küssner, Berl, klin, Weetenschrift.)

Cullerre ("Perversions sexuelles chez les persécutés," in Aunol. médico-psychol., March, 1886) has reported similar cases,—the case of a patient who, suffering with paranoia sexnalis persecutoria, tried to violate his sister, giving as a reason that the impulse was given him by Bonapartists.

In another case a captain, suffering with delusions of persecution by electro-magnetism, was driven to pederasty,—a thing he abhorred. In a similar case the persecutor impelled to onanism and pederasty.

V. PATHOLOGICAL SEXUALITY IN ITS LEGAL ASPECTS.

The laws of all civilized nations punish those who commit perverse sexual acts. Inasmuch as the preservation of chastity and morals is one of the most important reasons for the existence of the commonwealth, the state cannot be too careful, as a protector of morality, in the struggle against sensuality. This contest is unequal; because only a certain number of the sexual crimes can be legally combated, and the infractions of the laws by so powerful a natural instinct can be but little influenced by punishment. It also lies in the nature of the sexual crimes, that but a part of them ever reach the knowledge of the authorities. Public sentiment, in that it looks upon them as disgraceful, lends much aid.

Criminal statistics prove the sad fact that sexual crimes are progressively increasing in our modern civilization. This is particularly the case with immoral acts with children under the age of fourteen. The moralist sees in these sad facts nothing but the decay of general morality, and in some instances comes to the conclusion that the present mildness of the laws punishing sexual crimes, in comparison with their severity in past centuries, is in part responsible for this.

The medical investigator is driven to the conclusion that this manifestation of modern social life stands in relation to the predominating nervousness of later generations, in that it begets defective individuals, excites the sexual instinct, leads to sexual abuse, and, with continuance of lasciviousness associated with diminished sexual power, induces preverse sexual acts.

It will be clearly seen, from what follows, how such an opinion is justified, especially with respect of the increasing number of sexual crimes committed on children. It is at once evident, from what has gone before, that neuropathic, and even psychopathic, states are largely determinate for the commission of sexual crimes. Here nothing less than the responsibility of many of the men who commit such crimes is called in question.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Casper, Etc. Scotles.—Londreso, Geltlaumer's Archie, St. 222.— Octifages, Norabididità, p. 294.

Psychiatry cannot be denied the credit of having recognized and proved the psycho-pathological significance of numerous monstrous, paradoxical sexual acts. Law and Jurisprudence have thus far given but little attention to the facts resulting from investigations in psychopathology. Law is, in this, opposed to Medicine, and is constantly in danger of passing judgment on individuals who, in the light of science, are not responsible for their acts.

Owing to this superficial treatment of acts that deeply contern the interests and welfare of society, it becomes very easy for justice to treat a delinquent, who is as dangerous to society as a murderer or a wild beast, as a criminal, and, after punishment, release him to prey on society again; on the other hand, scientific investigation shows that a man mentally and sexually degenerate ob origine, and therefore irresponsible, must be removed from society for life, but not as a punishment.

A judge who considers only the crime, and not its perpetrator, is always in danger of injuring not only important interests of society (general morality and safety), but also those of the individual (honor).

In no domain of criminal law is co-operation of judge and medical expert so much to be desired as in that of sexual delinquencies; and here only anthropological and clinical investigation can afford light and knowledge. The nature of the act can never, in itself, determine a decision as to whether it lies within the limits of mental pathology, or within the bounds of mental physiology. The perverse act does not indicate perversion of instinct. At any rate, the most monstrous and perverse sexual acts have been committed by persons of sound mind. The perversion of feeling must be shown to be pathological. This proof is to be obtained by learning the conditions attending its development, and by proving the existence of a general neuropathic or psychopathic condition.

The species facti is important; but it allows, however, only presumptions, since the same sexual act, according as it is committed by an epileptic, paralytic, or a man of sound mind, takes on other features and peculiarities, in accordance with the manner in which it is done.

Periodical recurrence of the act under identical circumstances, and an impulsive manner in carrying it out, give rise to weighty presumptions that it is of pathological significance. The decision, however, must follow after referring the act to its psychological motive (abnormalities of thought and feeling), and after showing this elementary anomaly to be but one symptom of a general neuropathic condition,—either an arrest of mental development, or a condition of psychical degeneration, or a psychosis.

The cases discussed in the portion of this work devoted to general and special pathology will certainly be useful to the medical expert, in assisting him to discover the motive of the act. To obtain the facts necessary to allow a decision of the question whether immorality or abnormality occasioned the act, a medico-legal examination is required,—an examination which is made according to the rules of science; which takes account of both the past history of the individual and the present condition,—the anthropological and clinical data.

The proof of the existence of an original, congenital anomaly of the sexual sphere is important, and points to the need of an examination in the direction of a condition of psychical degeneration. An acquired perversity, to be pathological, must be found to depend upon a neuropathic or psychopathic state.

Practically, paretic dementia and epilepsy must first come to mind. The decision concerning responsibility will depend on the demonstration of the existence of a psychopathic state in the individual convicted of a sexual crime.

This is indispensable, to avoid the danger of covering simple immorality with the clouk of disease.

Psychopathic states may lead to crimes against morality, and at the same time remove the conditions necessary to the existence of responsibility, under the following circumstances:-

- To oppose the normal or intensified sexual desire, there may be no moral or legal notions, owing to (α) the fact that they may never have been developed (states of congenital mental weakness); or to (δ) the fact that they have been lost (states of acquired mental weakness).
- When the sexual desire is increased (states of psychical exaltation) and consciousness simultaneously clouded, the mental mechanism is too much disturbed to allow the opposing ideas, virtually present, to exert their influence.
- When the sexual instinct is perverse (states of psychical degeneration). It may, at the same time, be intensified.

Cases of sexual delinquency that occur outside of states of mental defect, degeneration, or disease, can never be excused on the ground of irresponsibility.

In many cases, instead of an abnormal psychical condition, a neurosis (local or general) is found. Inasmuch as the transitions from a neurosis to a psychosis are easy, and elementary psychical disturbances are frequent in the former, and constant in profound perversion of the sexual life, the neurotic affection—e.g., impotence, irritable weakness, etc.—exerts an influence on the motive of the incriminating act; and a just judge, notwithstanding the lack of legal irresponsibility due to mental defect or disease, will recognize the circumstances which ameliorate the heinousness of the crime.

For various reasons the practical jurist will, in all cases of sexual crimes, call medical experts to make a psychiatric examination.

To be sure, his own conscience and judgment must be the guides when necessity makes them his only reliance. Under the following circumstances indices are given which point to a pathological condition:—

The accused is semile. The sexual crime is committed openly, with remarkable cynicism. The manner of obtaining sexual satisfaction is silly (exhibition), or cruel (mutilation or murder), or perverse (necrophilia, etc.). From what experience teaches, it may be said that, among the sexual acts that occur, rape, mutilation, pederasty, amor lesbicus, and bestrality may have a psycho-pathological basis.

In case of lust-murder,—in as far as it goes beyond murder itself,—and likewise in case of mutilation of corpses, psychopathic conditions are probable.

Exhibition and mutual masturbation make pathological states seem very probable. Masturbation of another and passive onanism may occur in connection with senile dementia and contrary sexual feeling, but also with more sensuality.

Connilingus and fellare (penem in os mulieris arrigere) have not thus far been shown to depend upon psycho-pathological conditions.

These horrible sexual acts seem to be committed only by sensual men who have become satisfied or impotent from excessive indulgence in a normal way. Passicatio mulierum does not seem to be psychopathic, but rather a practice of married men of low morality, who wish to prevent pregnancy; and of satisfied cynics in non-marrital sexual indulgence.

The practical importance of the subject makes it necessary that the sexual acts threatened with punishment as sexual crimes be considered by jurists from the stand-point of the medico-legal expert. Thus there is an advantage gained, in that the psycho-pathological acts, according to circumstances, are placed in the right light by comparison with analogous acts that fall within the domain of physiological psychology.

OTTENDE AGAINST MORALITY IN THE FORM OF EXHIBITION. (Austrian Statister, § 516; Abridgment, § 196. German Stateter, § 183.)

In man's present condition of civilization, modesty is a characteristic and motive so firmly fixed by centuries of education that presumption of a psycho-pathological element necessarily arises when public decency is coarsely offended.

The presumption is justifiable that an individual who in this way has offended public decency and his own self-respect was incapable of moral feeling (idiots); or that it has been lost (states of acquired mental weakness); or that he has acted while in a clouded state of consciousness (transitory insanity, states of partial consciousness).

A very distinctive act which belongs here is that of exhibition (exposure). The cases thus far recorded are exclusively those of men who estentatiously expose their genitals to persons of the opposite sex, in some instances following them, without, however, becoming aggressive.

The silly manner of this sexual activity, or really sexual demonstration, points to intellectual and moral weakness; or, at least, to temporary inhibition of the intellectual and moral functions, with excitation of libedo dependent upon a decided disturbance of constituences (abnormal unconsciousness, mental confusion); and, at the same time, the virility of these individnals is called in question. Thus there are various categories of exhibitionists.

The first category includes states of mental weakness in which, owing to the causative cerebral (or spinal) disease, consciousness is clouded, and the ethical and intellectual functions are interfered with; and in which there can be no opposition made to a sexual desire that has either always been intense, or that has been intensified by the disease-process. At the same time, impotence exists, and no longer permits expression of the sexual instinct in violent acts (mpe), but only in acts that are silly.

The majority of reported cases! fall in this category. They are those of individuals afflicted with scalle dementia, paretic dementia, or mental defects due to alcoholism, epilepsy, etc.

Case 167. Z., high official, aged 60; widower; father of a family. He had excited offense in that, during fourteen days, he had repeatedly exposed his genitals at his window, to a girl of eight years who lived apposite him. After a few months, under like oirconnstances, this man repeated his indepent act. At his examination he acknowledged the deprayity of his action, and could give no excuse for it. Death, a year later, due to cerebral disease. (Lasegue, op. cif.)

* Lasigue, Union Midicale, 1877, May.—Laugher, Amusi d'hyglinn publ., 1878, No. 105.—Palanda, "Porsopulle," Archivin di Picchestria, etti.—Schurhardt, Zeitache, f. Medicandis, 1890, Eleft 6.

Case 168. Z., aged 18; seams. He had repeatedly exhibited his genitals on children's play-grounds, and in the neighborhood of girls' schools. This was the only way in which he was active sexually. He was married, and the father of ten children. Twelve years before, he had suffered a severe head-injury, since which he had had a deep sear, which indented the bone. Pressure on this scar caused pain; at the same time his face would flush, his expression become fixed, and he would grow someolent, with convalue movements in the right apper extremity (apparently epileptoid state in connection with cortical disease). Besides, there was scalle dementia and advanced senior. It is not reported whether the exhibition coincided with epileptoid attacks or not. Senite dementia proved; paraloned. (Dr. Schuchardt, op. cit.)

Pelanda (op. cit.) has reported a number of cases of this kind:—

- Paralytic, aged 60. At the age of fifty-eight he began to exhibit himself to women and children. In the asylum at Verous, for a long time thereafter, he was lastivious and also attempted fellatio.
- A drinker, aged 66, suffering with folio circulaire. His exhibition was first noticed in church during divine service. His brother was likewise an exhibitionist.
- A drinker, predisposed, aged 49. He was always very excitable sexually; in an asylum on account of chronic alcoholism. He exhibited himself whenever he saw a woman.
- A man, aged 64; married; father of fourteen children. Great predisposition. Backlife, microscephalic heat. For years he had been an exhibitionist, in spite of repeated punishment.

Case 169. X., merchant, born in 1833; single. He had repeatedly exhibited himself to children, or even urinated at the same time; ones, under these circumstances, he had kissed a little girl, driving her away. Twenty years previously X. had had a severe attack of mental disease, lasting two years, in which he is said to have had an apople-tic attack. Later, after loss of his fortune, he gave himself to drink, and of late years had often appeared absent-minded. His condition was that of alcoholism, seniom precess, and mental weakness. Penis small; phimosis; testioles atrophic. Proof of mental disease; pardoned. (Dr. Schuchaesk, ep. co.)

Such cases recall the lasciviousness of youthful, sexuallyexcited persons that are still more or less boyish; but also that of many mature cynics of low morality, who find plensure in defling the walls of public closets, etc., with drawings of male and female generals,—a kind of ideal exhibition which, however, is still widely separated from actual exhibition. Another category of exhibitionists is made up of epileptics. This category is essentially to be distinguished from the foregoing, in that a conscious motive for the exhibition is wanting; and it appears much more like an impulsive act which, without any consideration of external circumstances, is performed as if it were an abnormal organic necessity.

At the time of the act there is always a state of imperfect consciousness; and thus is explained the fact that the unfortunate individual, without consciousness of the meaning of his act, or, at least, without cynicism, does it in obedience to a blind impulse. On regaining consciousness, he regrets and abhors it if there is not permanent mental weakness.

The prime motive in this state of imperfect consciousness, as with other impulsive acts, is a feeling of apprehensive oppression. If a sexual feeling become associated with it, then the ideas are given a certain direction in the sense of a corresponding (sexual) act.

How sexual ideas very easily arise temporarily in epileptics may be understood from the discussion under "Epilepsy."

If, however, such an association has once been formed; if a particular act has taken place in an attack,—it is the more easily repeated in every subsequent attack; for, so to speak, a known tract has been established in the path of motivity.

The feeling of anxiety, with the state of imperfect consciousness, causes the associated sexual impulse to appear as a command,—an inner force, which is acted upon in a purely impulsive manner and in a state of absolute irresponsibility.

Case 170. K., a subordinate official, aged 25; of neuropathic family; living in happy marriage, and the father of one child. He has repeatedly, superially at dusk, exhibited himself to serrant-girls. K. is tall, slim, pale, nervous, and hasty in manner. There is imperfect memory of the crimes. Since childhood there have been frequent series congestive stracks, with interne flushing of the face, a rapid, tense pulse, and a fand, absent stare. At the same time there were, now and then, confusion and vertigo. In this (epileptic) exceptional state K. would answer only after repeated questioning, and then it was as if he were making from a dream. K. states that he has always felt excited and restless for some hours before his criminal sets, and experienced a feeling of fear, with oppression, and congestion of the head. In this condition be last often been giddy, and experienced an indistinct feeling of sexual excitement. At the height of such states he had belt the house, without any purpose in view, and exposed his genitals anywhere. When he had reached home again, he had had but a dreamy remembrance of what had occurred, and felt very weak and depressed. It is also invariable that, while exhibiting his genitals, he had used lighted matours to make them visible. The opinion was to the effect that the criminal acts depended upon epilopsy, and were imperative impulses; but he was, nevertheless, sentenced, with the assumption of extenualing circumstances. (Dr. Schnehardt, op. vii.).

Case 171. L., aged 39; single; tailor. His father was probably a drinker; he had two epileptic brothers, one of whom was insue. The patient himself has slight epileptic attacks, and from time to time states of imperfect consciousness, in which he runs about aimlessly, and thereafter does not know where he has been. He was considered a moral man, but he is now accused of having exhibited and played with his genitals in a strange house five or six times. His memory of these acts was very imperfect.

On account of repeated desertion from the army (probably likewise in epileptic states of imperfect consciousness). L. had been severely purished. In imprisonment to became insure with "epileptic insurity," was sent to the Charité, and from there discharged "cured." As far as the criminal acts were concerned, cynicism and wantenness could be excluded. That they were committed in a state of imperfect consciousness is probable from the fact, smoog other things, that to the policeman who arrested him, the "imberile," who was then in a cloudy state of consciousness, was in a remarkable mental state. (Liman, Vierteijahranchrift f. ger. Med., N. F. xxxviii, H. 2.)

Case 172. L., aged 27. From Ortober 15th to November 2d, he had many times given offense, by exhibiting himself to girls in daylight on the open street, and even in schools, into which he forced himself. It impossed occasionally that he wanted the girls to perform unsustrupration or allow coitus, and, when refused, he performed mastarbation before them. In G., in a public-house, he rapped on the window, with his penis exposed, so that the children and aerwant-girl in the kitchen were forced to see it.

After his arrest it was ascertained that since 1876 L, had very frequently caused trouble by exhibitions, but had always escaped punishment, owing to the demonstration of mental disease by physicians. On the other hand, he had been penished for desertion and theft in the army, and, later, once, as a civilian, for stealing cigars. L, had repeatedly been in asylume on account of insunity (attacks of insunity). Besides, he was often remarkable on account of his changeable, quarrelsome character, expressional excitement, and inconstancy.

I, a brother died of paralysis. He himself presents no degenerative signs; no epileptic anteredents. During the time of observation be in neither insone nor mentally weakened. He behaves himself very well, and expresses great regret for his sexual crimes. About himself be states that, though no drinker, be occasionally has an impulse to drink. Soon after beginning, congestion of the himself, vertigo, restlesances, anxiety, and opposition come on. He then passes into a dreamy state. An irresistible impulse now forces him to expose himself; and he then experiences a beiling of reher and breathes more easily. When he has once exposed himself, he knows nothing more of what he does. As precursors of such attacks, he had often, a short time before, had finnes before the eyes, and vertigo. For the time of his clouded state of consciousness, he had but a clouded, dresmy memory.

It was only after a time that sexual ideas and impulses had become associated with these apprehensive cloudy states of consciousness. Years ago, in such states, without motive and with great danger, he had deserted; once he had jumped from a third-story window; on another perasion be had left a good position to wander about nimically in a neighboring country, where he was at once arrested for exhibition.

When, outside of his abnormal periods, L. once became intoxicated, there was no exhibition. In the lucid state his sexual feeling and intercourse are perfectly normal. (Dr. Hotzen, Priedreich's Blatter, 1829, H. f.). For other instances, rule Cases 153, 155.

A clinical group that very nearly approaches the epileptic exhibitionists is made up of certain neurosthenic individuals, in whom, likewise, there may occur attacks (epileptoid!) of imperfect consciousness! in connection with a feeling of apprehensive oppression; and with this sexual impulses may be associated, resulting in acts of exhibition having an impulsive character.

Case 173. De. S., scademic teacher, and arcosed public indignation by being seen repeatedly someting about in the Zeological Garden at Berlin, before ladies and children, with his genitals langing out. S. admitted this, but denied all thought or consciousness of causing public offense, and excused himself by saying that his running about with exposed genitals afforded him relief from necrous excitament. Mother's father was insure, and died by suicide; his mother was constitutionally neuropathic, a normambulist, and had been temporarily insure. The sulprit was neuropathic, and been a somnambulist, and had had contintors aversion to sexual intercourse with females. In his youth he procticed oranism. He was a nearesthesic tree, sky, torpid, and easily became embarrassed and confused. He was sexually always much excited. Proquently* he dresmed that he was rouning about with exposed genitals, or that, dressed only in a shirt, he long from a ferm with his band downward, so that the shirt sell down, exposing his created penis. His dresms would induce pollution, and he would then have rest for a few days or an easiler week.

* Comp. v. Kraffi, "Ueler transportacion freezele bei Neurasthenischen," Irrenfreund, 1883, No. 8.

Also, in his waking state, the impulse would often come upon him, just us in his dreams, to run about with exposed genitals. As he was about to expose himself, he would become very hot, and then he would run simlessly about. The member would become moist with secretion. but pollution was never induced. Finally, when it had become flaceid, be would put it up, and then come to himself, glad if no one had seen him. In such conditions of excitement he seemed to be in a dream; as if intoxicated. He had never had the intention to offend women. S. was not spileptic. His declarations had the impress of truth. He had actually never followed or spoken to women while in this condition. Prirolity and consenses were excluded. In agreement with Westplad. the nuthor regards S. as belonging "to a class of individuals of peculiar by pockondriaced tendencies, in whom the attention is constantly directed, in an abnormal way, to certain bodily sensations and processes; who brood over these, connecting all kinds of peculiar conceptions with them, at last assking use of quite as strange means to combat the boddy sensations and ideas." At least, S's act was due to pathological sensation and idea, and S. was in a condition of pathological disturbance of mental action at the time of the commission of his acts. In the case of this exhibitionist, the manner of active etion of the sexual lustinet may be considered as peculiar to the individual. (Liman, Viertefjahrmehrift /ur gerichtel, Med., N. F. xxxviii, Heft 2.)

Case 114. X., nged 28; married; father of one child. Always unlies and silent. Suffers frequently with headache. Very neuratheric, though not insone. He is troubled much at night by pollutions. He has repeatedly followed shop-girls, for whom he had lain in wait, exposing and handling his genitals. In one case he even followed a girl into a shop. (Troches, Arch. de l'ambropelogue criminalle, iii, p. 256.)

In the following case the exhibition seems subsidiary to the impulsive desire to satisfy sudden, intense libido, by means of masturbation:—

Case 175. R., coachman, aged 49, Vienus; married since 1866; childless. Father neuropathic and given to sexual excesses; died of cerebral disease. He presents no dependantive signs.

At the age of twenty-nine he suffered a severe concussion by falling from a beight. Up to that time the vita exemlis had been normal. Since that time, every three or four months, he has been seized with very painful sexual excitement, accompanied by an intense desire to manner bute. A feeling of weariness and discomfort, with a desire for alcoholic infulgence, precedes this. In the intervals he is sexually cold, and has but very infrequent desire for his wife, who, moreover, for five years has been sick, and incapable of colmbitation. He gives the assurance that, as a young man, he never masturiented, and that, in the intervals between his attacks, he has never thought of satisfying himself sexually in this way

The impulse to maximisation during the attack is siways excited by certain feminine charms,—short clock, pretty foot and ankle, elegant appearance. Ago makes no difference; even little girls excite him. The impulse is under and unconquerable. R. describes the situation and act as characteristically impulsive. He had often tried to resist it; but then be would grow bot, terribly frightened, his head would term, and he would seem to be in a fog; but he never lost consciousness. At the same time he would have violent, during pain in the testicles and spermatic cords. He regretted it, but had to confess that the impulse was stronger than his will. In such a situation it forced him to maximistic, no matter where he night by. After ejeculation he would become calm, and regain his self-control. He regarded it as a terrible affliction. Defense shows that R. has been possibled six times for similar offcance—exhibition and maximisation in the open street.

On November 4, 1889, B., while in his worst condition, impresed to be in the street as a crowd of school-girls went by. This awakened his unconquerable impulse. There was not time to run to a closet, he was so excited. There was immediate exhibition, masturbation in front of a home,—great scandal and immediate arrest. B. is not weak-minded, and has no ethical defect. He benoons his fate, deeply regrets his act, and fears now attacks. He regards his condition as abnormal,—as a fate against which he is powerless.

He thinks himself still virile. Penis abnormally large. Cremasteric reflex present; pateline reflex increased. Weakness of the aphineter of the bladder, that has existed for some years. Various neurasthenic difficulties.

The opinion showed that B. was subject to the influence of shourmal conditions, and had acted impulsively. Patient was sent to an asylum, from which he was discharged after a few months.

In the foregoing case the important point, clinically, lies not in the neurosis that is present, but rather in the impulsive character of the act (exhibition dependent on masturbation).

With the enumeration of the categories of imbeciles, of mentally weakened individuals, and of the exhibitionists that are in a neurotic (epileptic or neurosthenic) state of imperfect consciousness, apparently the clinical and forensic side of this phenomenon is still unexhausted; in addition to these, there is another class, the representatives of which, owing to deep hereditary taint (hereditary degenerative neurosis?), are impelled to periodical and very impulsive exhibition.

With reference to these conditions of psychopathia sexualis periodica (comp. "Periodical Insanity"), in which the arcidentally-awakened impulse to exhibition is but a partial manifestation of a clinical whole, like dipsomants periodica, Magnan, from whom I borrow the following instructive cases, justly lays the greatest stress upon the impulsive, periodical feature of these abnormal impulses; and no less upon the fact that they are often accompanied by terrible anxiety, which, after the realization of the impulse, gives place to a feeling of relief.

These facts, and, no less, the clinical picture of degeneracy that, for the most part, is referable to injurious conditions that use hereditary, or that exercise an injurious effect on the development of brain in early years (rachitis, etc.), are, medicolegally, of decisive importance [with reference to the question of responsibility].

Case 176. G., aged 29, waiter in a coff. In 1888, while standing under a church-door, he exhibited himself to several girls working apposite. He confessed the not, and also that, many times, in the same place and at the same time of day, he had been guilty of the same crime, having been punished for it, the year before, with imprisonment for one month.

G. has very nervous parents. His father is mentally mustable and very irracible. His mother is at times insure, and suffers with severe nervous disease.

G. has always had nervous twitching of the face, and constant alternation of councies depression, with training vites, and periods of elation. At the ages of ten and aftern, for slight cause, he wished to commit sorcide. When excited, he has similar twitching of the extremities. He presents constant general needgesin. In prison to was at first beside himself with stance about the disgrace he had brought on his family, and said he was the worst of each, deserving the severest punishment.

Until his nineteerth year G. had satisfied bimself with solitary and mutual musturbation, and, on one occasion, he had practiced onanism with a girl. From that time, working in a cofe, the female contomers had excited him so intensely that ejeculation was often induced. He suffered with almost constant prispiers, and, as his wife stated, in spite of coitus, it often disturbed his rest at night. For seven years he had repeatedly exhibited himself at his window, and also exposed himself naked to female neighbors living opposite.

In 1883 he married out of desire. Marital intercourse did not satisfy his needs. At times his sexual excitement was so intense that he had bradache, and seemed confused, like one drunk, strange, and incapable of work.

Case 177. B., agod 27; of neuropathic mother and alcoholic father. He has one brother who is a drinker; and an hysterical sister.

After his eleventh year, onanism, solitary or mutual. After his threath year, impulses to exhibition. He attempted it at a streeturital; he felt pleasure in it, but also tramediately twinges of conniences. If he attempted to oppose his impulse thereafter, he became apprehensive, and had a feeling of oppression in his chest. When a soldier, he was often impelled to expose himself, under various pretexts, to his committee.

After his seventeenth year he had sexual congress with women. It gave him great pleasure to show himself naked before them. He continued his exhibition on the street. Since he could but infrequently count on female spectators at urinals, he changed his place to churches. In order to exhibit himself at such places, he always had to strengthen his courage by drinking. Under the influence of spirits, the impulse, at other times controllable with difficulty, became irresistible. He was not sentenced. He lost his position, and then drank more. Not long after, he was again arrested for exhibition and musturintion in a church.

Case 178, X., agod 35; barber's assistant. Repeatedly punished for offense against decency, he is again arrested; for, during three weeks, he had been banging around girls' schools, trying to attract the strention of the pupils, and, when he had succeeded in this, had exhibited himself. Occasionally he had promised them money, with the words, "Haboo mentalian pulcherriman, venite ad me ut cam harbatis." At his examination X. confessed everything, but did not know how it had come about. He was the most reasonable of men in other respects, but had the impulse to commit this crime, and could not overcome it.

In 1879, when in the army, he was once out on leave, and had run around exhibiting himself to children: imprisonment for a year. The name crime in 1881. He chased the crying children, and "stared" at them: imprisonment of one year and three months. Two days after his discharge, he said to two little girls: "If you want to see my tail, come with me to this (murket) booth." He desired these words, and claimed drunkenness: imprisonment for three months.

In 1842, renewed exhibition; during the act he said nothing. At his examination he stated that, since a severe illness, eight years previously, he had suffered with such excitations; imprisonment for one month.

In 1884, exhibition before girls in a church-yard; sgain in 1885. He declared: "I understand my crime, but it is like a discuse. When it comes over me, I cannot keep from such acts. It sometimes happens that, for quite a long time, I am free from these inclinations." Imprisonment for six months.

Discharged on August 12, 1885, he had a relapse on August 15. The same excuse was given. This time he underwent medical examination. The examination revealed no mental disturbance. Sentenced to three years. After discharge, a series of new exhibitions. On this accanion, examination revealed the following:—

His father suffered with chronic alcoholism, and is said to have been guilty of the same orime. Mother and sister nervously ill, and the whole family of excitable temperament.

From his seventh to his eighteenth year X, suffered with epilephic convenience. First echshitation at sexteen; later, gonorrhom and, it is stated, syphilis. After that, normal sexual intercourse until his twenty-first year. At that time he often had to pose a play-ground, and he occasionally had to urinate there; and it happened that the children looked at him, out of curiosity.

He noticed, occasionally, that this looking at him caused him sexual excitement, and induced erection, and even ejeculation. He now found more pleasure in this kind of sexual gratification, and became indifferent about collus, anisifying himself only in this manner. He felt that all his thought was ruled by this, and he dreamed only of exhibitions, with pollutions. His attempts to control his impulse became more and more ineffectual. It cause over him with such force that he noticed nothing around him, and saw and heard nothing, and was like one "devoid of reason,"—like "a built trying to but his best through a wall."

X. has an abnormally broad head. Small penis; the laft testicle deformed. Patellar reflex absent. Symptoms of neurasthesia, especially cerebral. Frequent pollutions. For the most part, his dreams are about normal cottus, only infrequently about exhibition before little girls.

With reference to his sexual arts, he states that the impulse to seek and approach little girls is primary; only when he has succeeded in attracting their attention to his expressed genitals do erection and ejaculation occur. He does not lose consciousness in the act. After it he is troubled shout his deed, and, if undiscovered, says to himself, "Once more I have escaped the authorities."

In prison he did not have the impulse; there, he was troubled only with dresms and pollutions. In freedom he had daily sought opportanity to estisfy himself with exhibition. He would give sen years of his life to be free from the thing; "this life of constant anxiety, this alternation between freedom and imprisonment, is unendurable."

The opinion assumed a congenital (?) persently of the sexual institut, with numbitakable hereditary taket, neuropathic constitution, asymmetry of country, and defective development of the genitals.

It is also worthy of remark that the exhibition began when the epilepsy central; so that one might think of a vicurious phenomenon.

The sexual perversity developed, with predisposition, through assidental association of ideas of sexual content (children looking at him while urinating) with an act that, in itself, was purposeless.

The patient was not sentenced, but sent to an saylum. (Dr.

Preyer, Zeitschr. f. Medicinalbeumte, 3 Jahrg., No. 8.)

Case 179. At 9 o'clock at night, in the spring of 1891, a hely, in great trepidation, came to the policeman in the city park of X., with the statement that a man, abscintely naked in front, had approached her from the bushes, and she had run away, frightened. The officer went at once to the place indicated, and found a man, who exposed ventrem et genitalia anda. He attempted to escape, but was overtaken and arrested. He stated that he had been accusally excited by alcohol, and had been on the point of going to a prostitute. On his way through the park, however, he recalled the fact that exhibition gave him much greater pleasure than was afforded him by coitus, in which he seldom, and only faxle de micrar, indulged. After drawing up his short, be posted himself in the heales, and, when two women exme up the path, he approached them with exposed genitals. In such exhibition he had a pleasurable feeling of warmath, and the blood mounted to his head.

The secused works in a manufactory, and his employer states that he is faithful, saving, sober, and intelligent.

In 1886 B. had been purished because he had twice exhibited himself publicly,—once in broad daylight, and once at night, under a Isinp.

B. aged 37, single, makes a peculiar impression, owing to his dandified dress and affected manner. His eyes have a neuropathic, languishing expression; around his mouth plays a smile of self-satisfaction. He is said to come of healthy parents. A sister of his father, and one of his mother, were insone. Others of their relatives were thought religiously accentric.

B. has never had any severe illness. From childhood he was eccentric and imaginative. He loved rossances about knights and others, was entirely absorbed by them, and even went so far as to identify kinnelf in fancy with the horoes. He slways thought binnelf a little better than others, and thought much of elegant dress and ornatient; and when he strutted about on Sundays, he imagined himself a high official.

B. has sever had epileptic symptoms. In youth, moderate indisigence in mesturbation; later, moderate indulgence in coitus. Protionaly, never any pertures sexual feelings or impulses. Retired manner of life; in leisure hours, reading (popular novels, heroic tales, Dannes, and others). B. was so drinker. Exceptionally he made himself a kind of punch, by which he was always excited asxually.

For some years, with marked decrease of libido, after such alcoholic indulgence, he had had "accurredly silly thoughts," and developed the desire genitalia adspectui feminarum publice exhibere.

If he got into this state, he felt warm, his heart heat violently, blood reshed to his head, and he could then no longer resist his impulse. He heard and new nothing more, and was absolutely absorbed in his list. Afterward he had often pounded his crazy head with his fiets, and firmly resolved never to do such a thing again; but the crazy ideas had always returned.

In his exhibition his penis became only half-creeted, and quoulation never occurred; even in couns it was always tardy. In exhibition he was satisfied with genitalia sun adepteere, and he had the lessful thought that this sight must be very pleasant to women, since he liked so much to see genitalia feminarum. He was capable of souns only when the puella showed herself very partial to him; without this, he preferred rather to pay and go without doing anything. In his dreams he exhibited himself to young, voluptuous women.

The medico-legal opinion recognized the hereditary psychopathic eliameter of the culprit, and the perverse, impulsive desire to perform the incriminating acts; and pointed cut, further, the remarkable fact that in B., who was otherwise soher and saving, the impulses to intulge is alreaded depended on abnormal conditions that recurred periodically, and forced him to indulge. That, during his attacks, B. was in an exceptional psychical state, in a kind of mental confusion, and absolutely absorbed in his perverse sexual fancy, is clearly shown by the species facts. Thus is explained the fact that he became aware of the approach of the police only when it was too late to try to escape. In this hereditary and degenerate impulsive exhibitionism, it is interesting to note how the perverse sexual impulse is awakened from its latency by the influence of alcohol.

A forensically important variety of exhibition, which, clinically, certainly rests upon a similar neurotic and degenerate foundation, and which expresses itself in a peculiar act, conditioned by violent libido (hypera-sthesia sexualis), associated with diminished virility, is made up of the so-called frottenes.

The three following cases, borrowed from Magnan (op. cit.), are typical:—

Cose 180. D., aged 44, hereditarily predisposed, drinker, and suffering with lead possessing. Until the last year he had masturbated much, and often drawn pornographic pictures, and above them to his acquaintances. He had repeatedly dressed himself as a woman in secret. For two years, since becoming impotent, he had dist desire, while in crowds at dusk, mentulars depudsive comque ad notes molleris crassissings terers. Once, when discovered in the act, he had been sentenced to imprisonment for four months.

His wife kept a milk-shop. Iterum iterumque sini temperare non potnit quin genitalia in oliam hote sompletam mergeret. In the act he felt testful pleasure, "as if touched with velvet." He was eynical enough to use this milk for himself and the customers. During imprisconsent alcoholic persecutory invanity developed in him.

Case 181. M., aged 31; unarried six years; father of four children; bedly predisposed; subject to melancholin at times. Three years before, he was discovered by his wife with a silk dress on, masturbating. One day he was discovered, in a store, in the act of frottogs on a lady. He was very regentant, and asked to be severely punished for his irrealstible impulse.

Case 182. G., aged 31; budly predisposed hereditarily. At an amnihus station he was discovered in the act of froitoge with his penis on a lady. Deep repentance; but he stated that at the eight of a noticeable posteriors of a lady, he was irrevisibly impelled to practice froitage, and that he became confused and knew not what he did. Sent to an saylem.

Case 183. A frotter. Z., born in 1859; of blameless life previously; of good family; private official. He is well-to-do financially, untainted. After a short married life he because a widower, in 1873. For some time he had attracted attention in charches, because he crowled up behind women, both old and young indifferently, and toyed with their tournares. He was watched, and one day he was arrested in the set. Z. was terribly frightened, and in despair about his situation; and, in making a full ecofession, he begged for pardon, for nothing but suicide remained for him.

For two years he had been subject to the unlarppy impulse to go in crowds of people,—in churches, at box-offices of thereties, etc,—and press up behind females and manipulate the prominent portion of their dresses, having organs and ejaculation during the act.

Z states that he was never given to nesturbation, and had never been in any way perverse sexually. Since the early death of his wife, he had gratified his great sexual desire in temporary love-affairs, leaving always had an aversion for prostitutes and brothels. The impulse to fromese had auddenly seized him, two years before, while he happened to be in church. Though he was conscious that it was wrong, he could not help yielding to it immediately. Since then he had been excitable to the posteriors of females, and had been actually impelled to seek opportunity for frottage. The only thing on women that excited him was the toursure; every other part of the body and attire was a matter of indifference to him; and it made no difference to him whether the woman was old or young, beautiful or agiy. Since this began, he had no more inclination for unional gratification. Of late frostops scenes had appeared in his dreams. During his acts he was fully conscious of his situation and the act, and tried to perform it in such a way as to attract as little attention as possible. After his act he was always ashumed of what he had done.

The medical examination revealed no sign of mental disease or mental weakness, but symptoms of neutrathenia sexualis,—ex statimentla lithidinosi (!),—which was also proved by the circumstance that even simple teaching of the fetich with the mexpecsed genitals sufficed to induce spanishion. Apparently Z., weakened sexually and distrusting his virility, and yet libidinous, had come to practice frostage by laving the sight of posteriora femine fall together accidentally with sexual excitement; and this associative combination of a perception with a feeling permitted the former to attain the significance of a fetich.

As an act which offends public morals, and which is, therefore, punishable, the violation of statues-a whole series of cases of which Moreau (op. cit.) has collected from ancient and modern times-may be enumerated here. They are, unfortunately, given too much like succdotes to allow satisfactory judgment of them They always give the impression of being pathological,-like the story of a young man (related by Lucianus and St. Clemens, of Alexandria) who made use of a Venus of Praxiteles for the gratification of his lust; and the case of Clisyphus, who violated the statue of a goddess in the Temple of Samos, after having placed a piece of meat on a certain part. In modern times, the Journal L'érénement of March 1, 1877, relates the story of a gardener who fell in love with a statue of the Venus of Milo, and was discovered attempting soitus with it. At any rate, these cases stand in etiological relation with abnormally intense libido and defective virility or courage, or lack of opportunity for normal sexual gratification.

The same thing must be assumed in the case of the so-called soyeurs, -i.e., men who are so cynical that they seek to get sight of coitus, in order to assist their virility; or who seek to have orgasm and ejaculation at the sight of an excited woman. Concerning this moral aberration, which, for various reasons, cannot be further described here, it will suffice to refer to Coffignon's book, "La Corruption à Paris." The revelations, in the domain of sexual perversity, and also perversion, which this book makes, are horrible.

&#x27; Dr. Mell calls this percentes (I) mixmosque (from pale, rentabilisting and recrees, to tech). His assumption that it to release the respection, in that there is a stimular for the region in suffering at seeing a serious in the passential of another, does not seem to use to be justified. For further facially, safe that, "Die contrary flexualsurphiciting," p. 137.

2. RATE AND LUST-MURDER.

(Austrian Statutes, § 125, 127; Austrian Abridgment, § 192; German Statutes, § 117.)

By the term rape, the jurist understands coitus, outside of the marriage relation, with an adult, enforced by means of threats or violence; or with an adult in a condition of defenselessness or unconsciousness; or with a girl under the age of fourteen years. Immissio penis, or, at least, conjunctio membrorum (Schutze), is necessary to establish the fact. To-day, rape on children is remarkably frequent. Hofmann ("Ger. Med.," i, p. 155) and Tardieu ("Attentats") report horrible cases.

The latter establishes the fact that, from 1851 to 1875 inclusive, 22,017 cases of rape came before the courts in France, and, of these, 17,657 were committed on children.

The crime of rape presumes a temporary, powerful excitation of sexual desire, induced by excess in alcohol, or by some other condition. It is highly improbable that a man morally intact would commit this most brutal crime. Lombroso (Goltdammer's Arch.) considers the majority of men who commitrape to be degenerate, particularly when the crime is done on children or old women. He asserts that, in many such men, he has found actual signs of degeneracy.

It is a fact that rape is very often the act of degenerate male imbeciles, where, under some circumstances, the bond of blood is not respected.

Cases as a result of mania, satyriasis, and epilepsy, have occurred, and are to be kept in mind.

Annal, midden-payethii, 1869, p. 515; 1865, p. 57; 1866, p. 315; 1866, p. 268.

The crime of rape may follow the murder of the victim.\(^1\)
There may be unintentional murder, murder to destroy the only witness of the crime, or murder out of lust (c. sopra). Only for cases of the latter kind should the term \(^1\) tool-murder\(^1\) be used.

The motives of lust-marder have been previously considered. The cases given in illustration are characteristic of the manner of the deed. The presumption of a murder out of lust is always given when injuries of the genitals are found, the character and extent of which are such as could not be explained by merely a brutal attempt at coitus; and, still more, when the body has been opened, or parts (intestines, genitals) torn out, and are wanting."

Lust-murders dependent upon psychopathic conditions are never committed with accomplices.

Case 184. Weak-mindedness, Epilepsy. Attempt at Rape; Marder.

—On the evening of May 27, 1888, an eight-year-old boy, Blasius, was playing with other children in the neighborhood of the village of S. An inknown man came along and entired the boy into the woods. The next day the boy's body was found in a ravine, with the abdomin slit open, an incised wound in the cardiac region, and two stab-wounds in the neck.

Since, on May 21st, a man, answering to the description given of the murderer by the children, and attempted to treat a six-year-old girl in a similar manner, and had only accidentally been detected, it was presumed to be a case of lust-murder. It was proved that the body was found in a brap, with only the shirt and jacket on; also, that there was a long incision in the scrotum.

Suspicion fell upon a pensant, E.; but, on confrontation with the children, it was not possible to identify him with the stranger who had entired the boy into the woods. Besides, with the help of his sister, he proved an shibi. The untiring offices of the officers brought new evidence to light, and finally E. confessed. He had entired the girl into the woods, thrown her down, exposed her genitals, and was about to abuse her; but, as she had an eruption on her head, and was crying loudly, his desire cooled, and he fied.

After he enticed the boy into the woods, with the pretext of show-

! Tardica, Attendals, Case 50, p. 188.

<sup>3</sup> Comp. the cases of Turdien, Attendate, p. 185-295.

<sup>4</sup> Comp. Hallemdorff, Psychologic des Morda.

my him a bird's nest, he was taken with a desire to abuse him. Since the toy refused to take off his trousers, he did it for him; and when the toy began to cry out, he stabbed him twice in the neck. Then he unds in incision, just above the pubes, in imitation of famile genitals, a order to use it to entisty his last. But, since the body grew cold consultately, he lost his desire, and, eleming his knife and hands near the body, he fed. When he saw the boy dead, he was filled with fear, and his limbs became weak.

During his examination E. looked apathetically at a garland. He had acted in a state of mental weakness. He could not understand how he came to do such a thing. He must have been buside himself; for he often became senseless, so that he would almost full down. Previous employers report that he had periods when he was devoid of thought and confused, doing no work all day, and avoiding others. His father states that E. loarned with difficulty, was unskillful at work, and other to elections that one did not think to punish him. At such times he would not eat, and occasionally ran away and remained all day. At such times he also seemed quite lost in thought, screwed his face up, and said senseless things. When quite a boy, he still sometimes wet the bed, and often come home from school with wet or solied clothing. He was very restless in sleep, so that no one could alrep beside him. He had never had playmates. He had never been cruel, bad, or impossit.

His mother gave similar testimony; and further, that, in his fifth year, E. first had convulsions, and once lost the power of speech for seven days. Sometime about his seventh year be once had convulsions for forty days, and was also dropsical. Later, too, he was often seized in alcop, and be often then talked in his alcep; and meenings, after such nights, the bed was found wet.

At times it was impossible to do snything with him. Since his mother did not know whether it was due to victoreness or disease, she did not venture to punish him.

Since his convelsions, in his seventh year, he had failed so in mind that he could not learn even the common prayers; and he also became very inscable.

Neighbors, persons prominent in the community, and teachers state that E. was peccliar, weak-minded, and trascible; that at times he was very strungs, and apparently in an exceptional means state.

The examinations of the medical experts gave the following results:---

E. is tall, slim, and poorly nourished. His head measures 33 centimetres in circumference. The cranium is rhombic, and in the occipital region flattened.

His expression is devoid of intelligence; his glance is fixed, expressionless; his attitude is cureless, and his body is bent forward.

Movements are slow and heavy. Genitals normally developed, E.'s whole appearance points to torpidity and moutal weakness.

There are no signs of degenerative marks, no abnormality of the vegetative organs, and no disturbances of motility or sensibility. He comes of a perfectly healthy family. He knows nothing of convulsions or of wetling his bod at night, but he states that, of late years, he has had attacks of vertigo and loss of mind.

At first, in circumfocution, he desires the murder. Later, in great contrition, before the examining judge, he confessed all, and gave a clear motive for his crime. He had never had such a thought before.

He has been given to consists for years; he even practiced it twice duity. He states that, for want of courage, he had never ventured to ask cottus of a woman, though in dreams such scenes exclusively passed before him. Neither in dreams nor in the waking state had he ever had perverse instincts; particularly no sadistic or contrary sexual feelings. Too, the eight of the shaughter of animals had never interested him. When he entired the girl into the woods, his desire was to satisfy his last with her; but how it happened that he tried such a thing with a boy, he could not explain. He thought he must have been out of his mind at that time. The night after the morder he could not shap or account of fear; he had twice confessed already, to suce his conscience. He was only afraid of being time. This should not be done, as he had done the deed in a weak-minded condition.

He could not tell why he had cut open the boy's abdomen. It had not occurred to him to hundle the intestines, smell them, etc. He stated that, after the attempt on the girl in the day time, and in the night, after the number of the boy, he had convulsions. At the time of his crime he was indeed conceious, but he had not throught at all of what he did,

He suffered much with hendselse; could not endure heat, thirst, or alcohol; there were times when he was perfectly confused. The test of his intelligence showed a high grade of weak-mindedness.

The opinion (Dr. Kautaner, of Graz) showed the imbecility and neurosis of the accused, and made it probable that his crime, for which he lad only a general recollection, had been committed in an exceptional (pre-epileptic) mental state, conditioned by the neurosis. Under all circumstances, E. was considered dangerous, and probably would require commitment to an asylum for life.

S. Bedely Inster, Inster to Property, and Torrers of Annuals Dependent on Sabing.

(Austrian, § 152, 411; German, § 223 [bodily injury]. Austrian, § 85, 465; German, § 303 [injury to property]. Austrian Police Regulations; German Statutes, § 360 [torture of animals].)

Aside from lust-murder, described in the foregoing section, as milder expressions of sadistic desires, impulses to stab, flagellate, or defile females, to flagellate boys, to maltreat animals, etc., also occur.

The deep degenerative significance of such cases is clearly demonstrated by the series of examples given under "General Pathology." Such mentally degenerate individuals, should they be unable to control their perverse impulses, could only be objects of care in asylums.

6. Remay Indian, Rossian, and Their Department on Personnel. (Austrian, § 196; German, § 249 [robbery]. Austrian, § 171, 460; German, § 242 [theft].)

It is seen from the section on fetichism, under "General Pathology," that pathological fetichism may become the cause of crimes. There are now recognized, as such, hair-despoiling (Cases 78, 79, 80); robbery or theft of female linen, handkerchiefs, aprons (Cases 82, 83, 85, 86), shoes (Cases 68, 87, 88), and silks (Case 93). It cannot be doubted that such individuals are subjects of deep mental taint. But, for the assumption of an absence of mental freedom and consequent irresponsibility, it

&lt;sup>1</sup> Masschlem may, under certain elementations, all the formal importance. Making criminal law up images renogalized the principle, "voluntines fit injuria."; and the present America statute, in § 4, says expressly: "Crimes may also be committed as persons who demand their communities on themselves."

As Herbst (Hamilto et interes Strafrenkin, When, 1979, p. 72) remarks, there are, nevertheless, minuse conditioned by the absence of assent on the part of the injured individual, which come to be such as soon as the injured individual has given consent,—e.g., theft, raps.

But Herbot also renominates here the limitation of personal freedom (1),

Of late a decided change of views on this paint has taken place. The German annihal law reports to consent of a man to his own death of such importance that a very different and much middle pentalment is deficted under such streamscances (§ 216); and it is the same in Austrian law (Austrian Abridgment, § 2015). The accorded deaths raided of largers was the act considered. In bodity layary and deprination of freedom, the consent of the victim must also receive consideration at the books of the judge. Declarity a knowledge of massecimes is of importance in making a judgment of the probability of asserted possent.

must be proved that there was an irresistible impulse, which, either owing to the strength of the impulse itself, or to the existence of mental weakness, made control of the punishable, perverse impulsion impossible. Such crimes and the peculiar manner in which they are performed,—in which they differ very much from common robbery and theft,—always demand a medico-legal examination. But that the act per se does not, by any means, necessarily arise from psycho-pathological conditions is shown by the infrequent cases of hair-despoiling simply for the purpose of gain.

 Violatios of Isdividuals Usiem the Age of Foreigness.
 (Austrian Statutes, § 128, 132; Austrian Abridgment, § 189, 191<sup>9</sup>; German Statutes, § 174, 176<sup>9</sup>)

By violation of sexually immature individuals, the jurist understands all the possible immoral acts with persons under fourteen years of age that are not comprehended in the term rape. The term violation, in the legal sense of the word, comprehends the most horrible perversions and acts, which are possible only to a man who is controlled by lust and morally weak, and, as is usually the case, lacking in sexual power.

A common feature of these crimes, committed on persons that are more or less children, is that they are unmanly, childish, and often silly. It is a fact that such acts, with exceptions in pathological cases, like those of imbeciles, pareties, and semile dements, are almost exclusively committed by young men who lack courage or have no faith in their virility; or by rows who have, to some extent, lost their virility. It is psychologically incomprehensible that an adult of full virility, and mentally sound, should indulge in sexual abuses with children.

The imagination of debauchees, in actively or passively picturing the immoral acts, is exceedingly lively; and that the following enumeration of the sexual acts of this kind known to law exhausts all the possibilities is questionable. Most frequently the abuse consists of sexual handling (under some circumstances, flagellation '), active manustupration, or seducing children by inducing them to perform onanism, or lustful handling, on the seducer. Less frequent acts are cunnilingus, irrumare on boys or girls, padicatio puellarum, coitus inter femora, and exhibition.

According to Ametrica law, this crime about full nades § 411, as slight bound to party, according to the Greans command law, it is tend by bejony (comp. Last, p.225).

In a case which Maschka reports ("Handb," lii, p. 174), a young man had maked girls, from eight to twelve years old, dance about in his more, and urinate before him, until he sjaculated. Not infrequently boys are abused by sensual women, who undertake to bring about conjunctio membrorum with them, in order to satisfy themselves by means of friction or comment.

Taplicu saw one of the most disgusting examples. A servant, in company with her lover, meaturisted children introduced to them, performed consilingus with a girl of seven, and introduced parentps and potatoes into her regims, and put similar things into the rectum of a haby of two years!

Case 185. Z., aged 62; deeply tainted, musturbator. He states he has never had coities, but has frequently practiced fellatic. He is in an asylum, on account of paranels. It had been his greatest pleasure to entire girls, aged from ten to fourteen years, and practice contilingua and other vile acts with them. In these acts to had organic and squenhation. Musturbation sid not give him the same satisfaction, and induced ejaculation only with difficulty. Faste de minur he also practiced fellatio with men; occasionally an exhibitionist. Phinosis; asymmetrical granium. (Pelanda, Arch. de Peichistries, x, fascic. 3, 4.)

Case 186. X., priest, aged 40. He was accused of entiring girls, aged from ten to thirteen, undressing and foodling them Instfully, and finally insturbating. He is tainted, and has been an counist from childhood; numlly inshedie; always very excitable sexually. Head somewhat small. Penis unusually large; indications of hypospudiasis. (Pelanda, icc. cit.)

Case 187. K., aged 21; laborer. He was accused and convicted of repeatedly anticing boys, and now and then girls, to an out-of-theway place, and practicing abuses with them (mutual masturbation, fellatio prescoum, forbilling of the genitals of the girls).

K. is an imbecile, and physically deformed, being scarcely 1.5 metres tall; eranism rachitic and hydrocephalic; teeth bad,—furrowed, defective, and irregular. Large lips, idiotic expression, stattering speech, and an awkward attitude complete the picture of psychophysical degeneration. K. behaves like a child discovered in some machinesom act. Scarcely may growth of beard. Genitals well and normally developed. He has a superficial consciousness of lawing done something improper, but he is unconscious of the moral, social, and legal significance of his crimes.

<sup>3</sup> Cases, vide Friedmich's Billior f. ger. Authropologie, III, p. 77.

&lt;sup>4</sup> Cases, Muschke, Hamite, 12, p. 175.—Casper, Varrietjahrusche, 1852, Bd. 1.—Tardies, durentate

K. comes of a decision father, and a mother who become issues from the abuse of her husband, and died in an asylum. In his bubyhood the boy was almost blinded by corneal ulcers, and, after his sixth year, he grew up with an almoser, and later with difficulty corned his living as an organ-grinder. His brother is good for nothing, and the enlight himself was considered a surfy, quarrelsome, exil, moody, irritable man. The opinion emphasized the intellectual, moral, and physical defect of the culprit.

Unfortunately it must be admitted that the most revolting of these crimes are done by sane individuals who, by reason of satiety in normal sexual indulgence, laseiviousness, and brutality, and not seldom during intoxication, forget that they are human beings.

A great number of these cases, however, certainly depend upon pathological states. This is particularly true where old men become the seducers of children."

I agree with Kirn, who, under all circumstances, in cases of this kind, holds a mental examination to be always necessary; since, frequently enough, a re-awakened, perverse, abnormally intense, and uncontrolable sexual desire is shown to be one of the manifestations of a senile dementia.

6. UNNATURAL ABUSE-SHORY.

(Austrian Statutes, § 129; Abridgmest, § 190; German Statutes, § 175.)"

(a) Violation of Animals-Bestiality?

Violation of unimals, monstrous and revolting as it seems to mankind, is by no means always due to psycho-pathological

* Comp. Kirn, Allg. Zetticke, d. Poyen., 30, p. 527.

If follow the usual terrateology is describing bermility and poderacty under the general term socious. In General (chap. 212), whereve this want course, it signifies exclusively the view of poderacty. Later, nothing was after used syncoprocacly with hastiality. The moral theologicus, like its Alphone of Lignort, Gery, and others, have always distinguished country, i.e., in the sense of Generic, between reducing t.e., correlative country of the policy of the conditions. Low morality and great sexual desire, with lack of opportunity of natural indulgence, are the principal motives of this unnatural means of sexual satisfaction, which is resorted to by women as well as by men.

The jurists brought confusion into the fermionless by establishing a "Sodomia nations error" and a "S rations generic." Science, however, should must incli as establishing, and return to the current unage.

&lt;sup>3</sup> See interesting hinteries, said Krames, Paperint J. Verbrychens, p. 184 — Nuschka. Edn. 11, p. 188.—Helineses, Lebris, 4, per Med., p. 180.—Recombines, Der Louisensche.

To Poink we owe the knowledge that in Persia hestinity is frequently practiced because of the deinson that it cures gonorrhou; just as in Europe an idea is still prevalent that intercourse with children buils renormal disease.

Experience teaches that bestiality with cores and horses is none too infrequent. Occasionally the acts may be undertaken with goats, hitches, and, as a case of Tardien's and one by Schmenstein show (Lokels, p. 125), with hors.

The notion of Frederick the Grest, in the case of a capalryman whohad committed bestiality with a mare, is well known: "The fellow is a beast, and shall be reduced to the infantry."

The intercourse of females with beasts is limited to dogs. A monstrons example of the moral depravity in large cities is related by Massiska ("Handb.," iii),—the case of a Parisian female who showed herself in the sexual art with a trained bull-dog, to a secret circle of routs, at 10 france a head.

There has been, heretofore, but little legal consideration of the mental condition in those given to violation of animals. In several cases known to the writer, the individuals were weakminded. In Schauenstein's case there was insanity.

The following case of bestiality is one that was certainly conditioned by disease. He was an epileptic. In this case the desire for animals appeared as an equivalent of the normal sexual desire:—

Case 188. X., peasant, aged 40; Greek-Catholic. Father and mother were hard drinkers. Since his fifth year patient has had epileptic convulsions,—i.e., he falls down unconscious, lies still two or three minutes, and then gets up and runs wildly about with staring eyes. Sexnality was fast resulfested at seventeen. The patient had inclinations neither for women nor for men, but for minute (birds, horses, etc.). He had intercourse with here and ducks, and later with horses and rows. Never any openism.

The patient points pictures of saints; is of very limited intelligence.

For years, religious paranois, with states of sectusy. He has an "unspeakable "fore for the Virgin, for whom he would sacribes his life. Taken to hospital, is proves to be free from infirmity and signs of degeneration.

He had always had an aversion for women. In a single attempt at roites with a woman be was impotent, but with animals he was always potent. He is ashamed before women; collar with women by regards almost as a sin. (Kowalewsky, Jakob J. Psychistric, vii, Heft 3.)

Case 189. On the afternoon of September 25, 1889, W., aged 16, shes-maker's apprentice, exagin a goose in a neighbor's garden, and committed bestiality on the fowl until the neighbor approached. On being accused by the neighbor, W. wiff," Is there anything wrong with the goose?" and then went away. At his examination he confused the act, but excessed himself on the ground of temporary loss of mind. Since a severe illness, in his twelfth year, he several times a month had attacks, with heat in his need, in which he was intensely excited sexmily, could not help himself, and did not know what he did. He had done the act in such an attack. He answered for himself in the same way at the trial, and stated that he knew nothing of the species facel except from the statements of the neighbor. His father states that W., who comes of a bealthy family, has always been sickly since an attack of scarlating in his fifth year, and that, at the age of tweive, he had a febrile cerebral disease. W. had a good reputation, learned well in school, and, later, helped his father in his work. He was not given to musturbation.

The medical examination revealed so intellectual or moral defect. The physical examination revealed sormal genitals; penis relatively greatly developed; marked exaggeration of the patellar reflexes. In other respects, negative result.

The history of the condition at the time of the deed was not to be depended upon. There was no history of previous attacks of mental disturbance, and there were none during the six weeks of observation. There was no perversion of the vita arxivals. The medical opinion allowed the jussibility that some organic cause (corelied congestion), dependent upon cerebral disease, may have exercised as influence at the time of the commission of the criminal act. (From the opinion of Dr. Fritsch, of Vienna.)

Case 190. Inspellate Solomy.—A., agod 16; gardener's boy; bern out of wellock; father, misnown; mother, deeply tainted, hystero-epiteptic. A. has a deformed, asymmetrical eranium, and deformity and asymmetry of the bones of the face; the whole skeleton is also deformed, asymmetrical, and small. From childhood he was a maximisator; always morose, apathetic, and fond of solutude; very irritable, and pathological in his emotional reaction. He is imbenile, probably much reduced physically by maximisation, and nearesthenic. Besides, he presents hysteropathic symptoms (limitation of the visual field, dysobromatomia; diminution of the senses of smell, taste, and hearing on the right side; amesthesia of the right testicle, claves, etc.).

A. is convicted of having committed masteriation and sodomy on dogs and rabbits. When twelve years old he saw how boys masterbated a dog. He imitated it, and thereafter he could not keep from abusing dogs, exts, and rabbits in this vile manner. Much more frequently, however, he committed redomy on female rabbits,—the only animal that had a charm for him. At thisk he was accustomed to repair to his master's rabbit-pen, in order to gratify his vile desire. Rabbits with torn rectums were repeatedly found. The act of bestinking was always done in the some manner. There were actual attacks which came on every eight weeks, always in the evening, and always in the same way. A. would become very uncomfortable, and have a feeling as if some one were pounding his bead. He felt as if losing his reason. He struggled against the imperative idea of committing sodomy with the rabbits, and thus had an increasing feeling of fear and intensification of headsche, until it became unbearable. At the height of the attack there was sound of tells, cold perspiration, trembling of the knees, and, finally, loss of resistive power, and impulsive performance of the perverse act. As soon as this was done, he lost all maxiety; the perrous evole was completed, and he was again master of himself, deeply ashamed of the deed, and fearful of the return of an attack. A. states that, in such a condition, if called upon to choose between a womin and a female rabbit, he could males choice only of the latter. In the intervals, of all domestic animals, he is partial only to rubbits. In his exceptional states simple caressing or kissing, etc., of the rabbit suffices, as a rule, to afford him sexual satisfaction; but sometimes he has, when doing this, such force sexualis that he is forced to wildly perform sodomy on the animal.

The note of besticitty mentioned are the only acts which afford him sexual satisfaction, and they constitute the only manner in which he is capable of sexual indulgence. At states that, in the set, he never had a lustful feeling, but satisfaction, incomuch as he was thus freed from the painful condition into which he was brought by the imperative impulse.

The medical evidence easily proved that this better monater was a psychically degenerate, irresponsible invalid, and not a criminal. (Bostems, Let France médicale, 28th year, No. 38.)

The following case seems to be devoid of a psychopathic basis:-

Case 191. Saferny.—In a provincial town a man was cought in intercourse with a hen. He was thirty years old, and of high social position. The chickens had been dying one after mother, and the man causing it had been searched for a long time. To the question of the judge, as to the reason for such an act, the normed said that his genitals were so small that ocitus with women was impossible. Medical examination showed that the genitals were actually extremely small. The man was mentally entirely sound.

There were no statements concerning any absormalities at the time of pulserty, etc. (Gyurkovechky, "Mannl. Impotent," 1889, p. 82.)

(b) With Persons of the Same Sex-Pederonly; Sodony in its Strict Sense.

German law takes cognizance of unnatural sexual relations only between men; Austrian, between those of the same sex; and, therefore, unnatural relations between women are punishable.

Among the immoralities between men, pederasty (immissio penis in anum) claims the principal interest. Indeed, the jurist thought only of this perversity of sexual activity; and, according to the opinions of distinguished interpreters of the law (Oppenhoff, "Stgsb.," Berlin, 1872, p. 324, and Rudolf and Stenglein, "D. Strafgesb. f. d. Deutsche Reich," 1881, p. 423), immissio penis in corpus vivum belongs to the criminal act covered by § 175.

According to this interpretation, legal punishment would not follow other improper acts between male persons, so long as they were not complicated with affirms to public decease, with force, or undertaken with logs under the age of fourteen. Of late this interpretation has again been abundoned, and the crime of unnatural abuse between men has been assumed when merely acts similar to cohabitation were performed.<sup>1</sup>

The study of contrary sexual instinct has placed male love of males in a very different light from that in which it, and particularly pederasty, stood at the time the statutes were framed. The fact that there is no doubt about the pathological basis of many cases of contrary sexual instinct shows that pederasty may also be the act of an irresponsible person, and makes it necessary, in court, to examine not merely the deed, but also the mental condition of the perpetrator.

The principles laid down previously must also be adhered to here. Not the deed, but only an anthropological and clinical judgment of the perpetrator can permit a decision as to whether we have to do with a perversity deserving punishment, or with an abnormal perversion of the mental and sexual life, which, under certain circumstances, excludes punishment. The next legal question to settle is whether the contrary sexual feeling is congenital or acquired; and, in the latter case, whether it is abnormal perversion or moral perversity.

If the stational, supplement, and damperous for the Justs Judgment of these "emboding " acts for the collaboration of the objective fact of the crime may be a well above by an article on the pumpitablement of male informative, in the Zemake, f. d. generants Straffrontise to conclude., ind. vii, likely 1, as well as by a shadar one in Priphreich's Station I ger. Modern, 1996, 84-85, faction, Mod., Counties Semantic planting, p. 1993 of pay, and Bernhards, Der Unmersen, Berlin, 1992.

Congenital contrary sexual instinct occurs only in predisposed (tainted) individuals, as a partial manifestation of a defect evidenced by anatomical or functional abnormalities, or both. The case becomes clearer, and the diagnosis more certain, if the individual, in character and disposition, seems to correspond entirely with his sexual peculiarity; and if the inclination toward persons of the opposite sex is entirely wanting, and horror of sexual intercourse with them is felt; and if the individual, in the impulses to satisfy the contrary sexual instinct, shows other anomalies of the sexual sphere, such as more pronounced degeneration in the form of periodicity of the impulse and impulsive conduct, and is a neuropathic and psychopathic person.

Another question concerns the mental condition of the urning. If this be such as to remove the possibility of moral responsibility, then the pederast is not a criminal, but an irrespensible insane person. This condition in congenital urnings is apparently less frequent than another. As a rule, these cases present elementary psychical disturbances, which do not remove responsibility. But this does not settle the question of the responsibility of the urning. The sexual instinct is one of the most powerful organic needs. There is no law that looks upon its satisfaction outside of marriage as punishable in itself; if the urning feels perversely, it is not his fault, but the fault of a condition natural to him. His sexual instinct may be resthetically very repugnant, but, from his stand-point, it is natural. And, too, in the majority of these unfortunates, the perverse sexual instinct is abnormally intense, and their consciousness recognizes it as nothing unnatural. Thus they fail to have moral and resthetic ideas to assist them in resisting the instinct. Innumerable normally constituted men are in a position to overcome the desire for satisfaction of their libido without suffering from it in health. Many neuropathic individuals,—and urnings are almost always neuropathic,—on the contrary, become nervously ill when they do not satisfy the sexual desire, either as Nature prompts or in a way that is for them perverse.

The majority of urnings are in a painful situation. On the one hand, there is an impulse toward persons of their own sex that is abnormally intense, the satisfaction of which has a good effect, and is natural to them; on the other, is public sentiment which stigmatizes their acts, and the law which threatens them with punishment. Before them lies mental despair,—even insanity and suicide,—at the very least, nervous disease; behind them, shame, loss of position, etc. It cannot be doubted that, under these circumstances, states of necessity and compulsion may be created by the unfortunate natural disposition and constitution. Society and the law should understand these facts. The former must pity, and not despise, such unfortunates; the latter must cease to punish them,—at least, while they remain within the limits which are set for the activity of their sexual instinct.

As a confirmation of these opinions and demands concerning these step-children of Nature, it is permissible to reproduce here the secnorial of an urning to the author. The writer of the following lines is a man of high position in London:—

"You have no idea what a constant struggle we all—particularly those of us that have the most mind and finest feelings—have to undure, and how we suffer under the prevailing false ideas about us and our so-called immerality.

"Your opinion that the phenomenon under consideration is primarily due to a congenital 'pathological' disposition will, perhaps, make it possible to overcome existing prejudices, and awaken pity for peor, 'abnormal'men, instead of the present repugnance and contempt. Mach as I believe that the opinion expressed by you is acceedingly beneficial to us, I am still compelled, in the interest of science, to repudinte the weed 'pathological'; and you will permit me to express a few thoughts with respect of it.

"Under all circumstances the phenomenon is anomalous; but the word 'pathological' conveys another meaning, which I cannot think ents this phenomenon; at least, as I have had occasion to observe it in very many cases. I will allow, a priori, that, among urnings, a far higher proportion of mass of insurity, of nervous exhaustion, etc., may be observed than in other normal men. Does this increased acryomeness recessarily depend upon the elemeter of amingion, or is it not, in the majority of cases, to be ascribed to the effect of the laws and the prepadices of society, which prohibit the indulgence of their sexual desires, depending on a congenital peculiarity, while others are not thus restrained?

"The youthful urning, when he feels the first sexual promptings and alively expresses them to his committee, soon finds that he is not unlerstood; he shrinks into himself. If he tell his parents or teacher shat moves him, that which is as natural to him as awimning is to a fish is described as wrong and sinful, and he is told it must be longht and overcome at any price. Then an inner conflict begins, a powerful repression of sexual inclinations; and the more the natural satisfaction of desire is repressed, the more lively the fancy becomes, and points the very pictures that the wish is to banish. The more energetic the character that carries on this inner conflict, the more the whole nervous system must suffer. Such a powerful repression of an instinct so deeply implanted in us, in my equinon, develops the absormal symptoms which are observed in many armings; but this does not necessarily follow from the urning's disposition.

"Some continue the conflict for a longer or shorter time, and thus isjure themselves; others at last come to the knowledge that the powerful instinct been in them cannot possibly be sinful, and, therefore, they cease to try to do the impossible, the repression of the instinct. Then, however, begin constant suffering and excitement. When a normal man waks satisfaction of sexual inclination, he knows how to find it easily; it is not so with the uming. He sees men that attract him, but he dares not say may, not even betray by a look-what his feelings are. He thinks that he slone of all the world has such almorand feelings. Natufully be seeks the society of young men; but he does not venture to confide is them. Thus he comes to provide himself with a satisfaction that he caused otherwise obtain. Ouranism is practiced inordinately, and followed by all the oril results of that vice. When, after a time, the nerrour system has been injured, the abnormality is again not the result of urningion, but it is produced by the consuism to which the urning resorts, as a result of the public sentiment that slexies him opportunity to satisfy the sexual instinct that is natural to him.

Or, let us suppose the urning has had the rare fortune to seen find a person like himself; or, that he has been introduced by an experienced friend to the events of the world of urnings. Then he is spaced much of the inner conflict; but, at the same time, fearful cares and anxieties follow his factsteps. Now he knows that he is not the only one in the world that has such abnormal feelings; he opens his eyes and wonders that he musts so many of his kind in all social circles and in all.

callings; he also learns that, in the world of armings, as in the other, there is prostitution, and that men as well as women can be bought. Thus there is no longer any want of opportunity for sexual satisfaction. But here how differently the experience is gained from that obtained in the normal manner of sexual indesigner!

"Let us consider the happest case. After longing all sur's life, the friend of like feeling is found. But he cannot be approached openly, as a lover approaches the girl he loves. In constant fear, both must conceal their relations; may, even entimacy that might eneity excite suspicion—especially should they not be of like age, or should they belong to different classes—must be kept from the world. Thus, even in this relation, is forged a chain of saxiety and fear that the secret will be betrayed as discovered, which leaves them majoy in the indulgence. The slightest thing that would not affect others makes them trenshie with fear that suspiction might be excited said the secret discovered, and destroy social position and business. Could this constant anxiety and care be endured without leaving a trace, without exerting an influence on the entire narrous system?

"Another less fortunate man does not find a friend of like feeling, but falls into the hands of a handsome man, who sought him satil the secret was discovered. Now the most refined blackmail is extorted. The unfortunate, persecuted man, brought to the alternative of paying or of losing his social position, and bringing disgrace on himself and his family, pays; and the more be given, the more vecacious the sample becomes; until at last there remains nothing but absolute financial rain or dishorar. Who can wonder that nerves are not equal to such a terrible struggle!

"They give way; insmity comes on; and the miserable must hat finds the rest in an asylum that he could not find in the world. Another, in the same situation, driven to despair, finds relief in suicide. It cannot be known how many of the suicides of young men are to be attributed to this combination of circumstances.

"I do not think that I am in error when I declare that at least onehalf of the snicides of young men are due to such conditions. Even in those cases where urnings are not persecuted by a heartless villain, but where a happy relation between two men exists, discovery, or even the fear of it, very effect leads to snicide. How many officers, how many soldiers, having such relations with their subcordinates or companions, in the moment when they have believed these elves discovered, have sought to except the threatened diagrace by means of a bullet! And it is the same in all callings.

"Therefore, if it must be admitted that, among usuings, more mental abnormalities and more insurity are actually observed than among other men, yet this does not prove that the mental disturbance is a necessary accomposiment of the urning's condition, and that the latter induces the former. "According to my firm conviction, by far the greater number of most of mental disturbance or abnormal disposition observed in arrange are not to be attributed to the sexual anomaly; but they are caused by the existing notions concerning urnings, and the resulting laws, and dominant public scutiment concerning the anomaly. Any one with an adequate idea of the mental and moral suffering, of the anxiety and curv, that the urning must endure; of the constant bypoernsy and sorreey be must practice, in order to concent his inner instinct; of the difficulties that more insmity and nervous disturbance does not occur in urnings. The greater part of these abnormal states would not be developed, if the urning, like another, could find a simple and easy way in which to satisfy his sexual desire,—if he were not forever troubled by these anxieties!"

De loge late, as far as the urning is concerned, the paragraph with reference to pederasty must not be applied without the proof of actual pederasty; and psychical and somatic abnormalities must be examined by experts with respect of an estimate in the individual of the question of guilt.

De lege feresolo, the urnings wish a repeal of the paragraphs. The jurist could not consent to this, if he were to remember that pederasty is much more frequently a disgusting vice than the result of physical and mental infirmity; and that, moreover, many arnings, though driven to sexual acts with their own sex, are yet in nowise compelled to indulge in pederasty,—a sexual act which, under all circumstances, must stand as cynical, disgusting, and, when passive, as certainly injunous. Whether for reasons of expediency (difficulty of fixing the guilt, encouragement of blackmail, etc.), it would not be opportune to strike from the statutes the legal punishment of the male-loving man, and to protect youth by the use of the paragraphs concerning sexual abuses, is a future question for jurists.

What has been said concerning congenital contrary sexuality and its relation to the law is also applicable to the acquired abnormality. The accompanying neurosis or psychosis should have much diagnostic and forense weight with reference to the question of guilt.

It only remains to describe acquired non-pathological pederasty,—one of the saddest pages in the history of human delinquencies:—

CULTIVATED PEDERASTY.

The motives that being to pederasty a man originally normal sexually and of sound mind are various. It is used temporarily as a means of sexual satisfaction faste de mieux,—as in infrequent cases of bestiality,—where abstinence from normal sexual indulgence is a necessity. It thus occurs on shipboard during long voyages, in prisons, in baths, etc. It is highly probable that, among men subjected to such conditions, there are single individuals of low morals and great sensuality, or actual urnings, who seduce the others. Lust, imitation, and desire further their purpose.

The strength of the sexual instinct is most markedly shown by the fact that such circumstances are sufficient to overcome repugnance for the unuatural act.

Another category of pederasts is made up of old roufer that have become supersatiated in normal sexual indulgence, and who find in pederasty a means of exciting sensual pleasure, the act being a new method of stimulation. Thus they temporarily renew their power, that has been psychically and physically reduced to so low a state. The new sexual situation makes them, so to speak, relatively potent, and makes pleasure possible that is no longer possible in normal intercourse. In time power to indulge in pederasty is also lost. The individual may thus finally be reduced to passive pederasty as a stimulus to make possible temporary active pederasty; just as, occasionally, flagellation or looking on at obscene acts (Maschka's case of mutilation of animals) is resorted to for the same purpose.

The termination of sexual activity expresses itself in all kinds of abuse of children,—cunnilingus, fellare, and other enormities.

This kind of pederasts is the most dangerous, since they deal mostly with boys, and min them in body and soul.

&#x27;Pur interesting histories and notes; v. Krusse; Parchel, des Vechrechens, p. 174.— Tardien, Alberten.—Maschka, flundo., ili, p. 174. This vice seems to have seems through frete from Asia to finerce, and, in the times of classic Helias, to have been wide operate. From there is spenial to Some, where is finerished lexistingly. In Persia and Chem. (where it is actually folerated) it is wide-spread, as it also is in Sureps. (Comp. Tarnowsky at al.)

* Lowdrome (Der Verlegeller, p. 20 et sep.) shows that also, is case of animals, intercourse with the same sex occurs where normal indulgrams is impossible.

In reference to this, the experiences of Tarnowsky (sp. cit., p. 53 of sep.), gathered from the society of St. Petersburg, are terrible. The piaces where pederatty is cultivated are Institutes. Old roads and amings play the rôle of seducers. At first it is difficult for the person to carry out the disgusting act. Fancy is made to assist by calling up the image of a woman. Gradually, with practice, the meantural act because may, and at last the individual, like one injured by masturbation, becomes relatively impotent for women, and bustful enough to find pleasure in the perverse act. Such individuals, under certain circumstances, give themselves for money.

As Tardico, Hofmann, Simon, and Taylor show, such individuals are not infrequently found in large cities. From numerous statements made to use by armings, it is learned that actual prostitution and houses of prostitution for male-loving men exist in large cities. The arts of coquetry used by these male prostitutes are noteworthy,—ornament, perfumes, feminine styles of dress, etc., to attract pederasts and armings. This imitation of feminine poculiarities is spontaneous and unconscious in congenital cases, and in many acquired cases of (abnormal) contrary second instinct.

The following lines are of interest to the psychologist, and offer the officers of the law important facts concerning the social life and practice of pederasts:—

Coffiguou, " La Corruption à Paris," p. 327, divides active poleraits into "qualeure," "enfecteueure," and "souteneare,"

The "ounteurs" ("efecties") are debauched persons, but also frequently congesitally perverse sexually, of position and fortune, who are forced to guard themselves against detection in the gratification of their homo-sexual desires. For this purpose they visit brothels, lodging-houses, or the private houses of female prostitutes, who are notally on good terms with male prostitutes. Thus they escape blackmail.

Some of these "manageure" are cunning enough to indulps their vile desires in public places. They thus run the risk of arrest, but, in a large city, little risk of blackmail. Danger is said to add to their secret pleasure.

The "enfrereneurs" are old sinners who, even with the danger of falling into the hands of blackmailers, cannot deny themselves the pleasure of keeping a (male) matrees.

The "sourcessers" are pedernate that have been punished, who keep their "jerse," whem they send out to entire customers ("faire chanter les ricettes"), and who then, at the right moment, if possible, appear for the purpose of placking the victim.

Not infrequently they live together in bands, the members, in accordance with individual desire, living together so husbands and wives. In such bands there are formal marriages, betretbals, banquets, and introductions of brides and grooms into their apartments.

Three " soutenears" attach their "jeans" to themselves.

The passive poderasts are "perits juste," "jesus," or "sauta,"

The "petits jesse" are lost, depeaved children, whom socident piaces in the hands of active pederasts, who seduce them, and reveal to them the horrible means of enraing a livelihood, either as "entretenos" or as male street-walkers, with or without "soutearners."

The most suitable and promising "petite jesse" are given into the hands of persons who instruct these children in the art of female dress and manner. Gradually they then sook to smaneinate themselves from their teachers and masters, in order to become "female entretesmes"; and not infrequently by means of anonymous demonstration of their "soutenesses" to the police.

It is the object of the "souteneur" and the "petit jenus" to make the latter appear young, as long as possible; by means of all the arts of the toilet.

The limit of age is about twenty-five years; then they all become "jenus" and "femmes sufretenues," and are then sustained by several "souteneurs." The "jenus" fall into three enterpoises: "filles guillanles," i.e., those that have fallen again into the hands of n "souteneur"; "puerrenees" (ordinary street-walkers, like their female colleagues); and "domestics."

The "domestice" hire out to active pederasts, either to gratify their desires or to obtain "petate seems" for them.

A sub-group of these "dementies" in formed by such of them as enter the service of "petits jenus" as "ferrors de chambre." The principal object of these "dementies" is to use their positions to obtain compromising knowledge, with which they later practice blackmail, and thus assure themselves case in their old age.

The most horrible class of active pedernsts is made up of the "custs,"—i.e., the "entireneurs" of (mule) prestitutes,—who, though normal sexually, are morally deprayed, and practice pedernsty (passive) only for gain, or for the purpose of blackmail.

The wealthy "amateurs" have their remions and places of meeting, where the passive ones appear in female attire, and herrible organs take place. The waiters, musicions, etc., at such gatherings, are all pederasts. The "filles pullenter" do not venture, except during the carmival, to show themselves on the atreet in female dress; but they know how to lead to their appearance concething indicative of their milling, by means of style of theses, etc. They entice by means of gesture, peculiar movements of the hands, etc., and lead their victims to botchs, boths, or brothels.

What the author says of blackmail is generally known. There are cases where pedecasts have allowed their entire fortune to be wrong from them.

The following notice from a Berlin (National f) newspaper, of February, 1884, which fell into my hands by accident, seems suited to show something of the life and customs of umings:—

"The Woman-Balers' Ball,—Almost every social element of Berlin has its social remions,—the fat, the build-headed, the young,—and why not its woman latters? This species of men, so interesting psychologically and note too elifying, had a great ball to-day. "Grand Vienna Mask Ball,"—so must be notice. The sale of teckets was very rigorous; they wish to be very exclusive. Their rendexyons was a well-known dance-ball. We enter the hall about midnight. The graceful dancing is to the strains of a fine orehestra. Thick tobacco-moke, reiling the gas-lights, does not allow the details of the moving mass to become obvious; only during the pause between the dances can we obtain a closer view. The masks are by far in the unjectity; black dress-costs and ball-gowns are seen only now and then.

"But what is that? The body in rese-tarleton, that just now possed us, has a lighted eight in the corner of her mouth, and pattle like a trooper; and she also wears a small, blonde beard, lightly pointed out. And yet she is talking with a very decoleré 'angel' in triceto, who stands there, with here arms folded behind her, likewise smoking. The two voices are musculine, and the conversation is likewise very masculine; it is about the 'd— telenceo, that permits no sin.' Two men in somale attire. A conventional clown stands there, against a pillar, in soft conversation with a ballet-dancer, with his arm around her finitiess waist. She has a blande 'Tatno-head,' sharp-out profile, and apparently a voluptuous form. The brilliant careings, the necklace with a medallion, the full, round shoulders and arms, do not permit a doubt of her 'genumeness,' until, with a midden movement, she disengages herself from the enhancing arm, and, yawning, moves army, saying, in a deep bass, 'Emile, you are too tiresome to-day!' The ballet-hancer is also a male!

"Suspicious now, we look about further. We almost suspect that here the world is topsy-turey; for here goes, or, rather, trips, a manno, no man at all, even though he were a carefully trained monstache. The well-curled hair; the powdered and pointed face with the blackened sychrows; the golden cur-rings; the bosquet of flowers reaching from the left shoulder to the breast, ornamenting the elegant black gown; the golden bracelets on the wrists; the elegant fan in the white-gloved band,—all these things are anything but mescaline. And how he toys with the fan! How he dances and turns, and trips and tisps! And yet kindly Nature nucle this doll a man. He is a salesman in a great millinery store, and the bellet-sharest mentioned is his 'colleague.'

"At a little consertable there seems to be a great social circle. Several eiderly gentlesses press around a group of decolleté ladies, who sit over a glass of wine and—in the spirit of fun—make jokes that are none too deficate. Who are these three ladies? "Ladies! laughs my knowing friend." Well, the one on the right, with the brown hair and the short, fancy dress, is called "Butterricke," and he is a hair-dresser; the second one—the blonde in a singer's costume, with the necklace of pearls—is known here by the name of "Miss Elia of the tight-rope," and he is a ladies' tailor; and the third,—that is the widely-celebrated "Lottie."

"But that person cannot possibly be a man? That waist, that bust, those classic arms, the whole air and person are markedly feminine?

"I am told that "Lottle" was once a book-keeper. Today she, or, rather, he, is exclusively 'Lottle, and takes pleasure in decriving men about his sex as long as possible. 'Lottle is singing a song that would hardly do for a drawing-room, in a high voice, acquired by years of practice, which many a suprano might envy. 'Lottle' has also worked as a female comedian. Now the quondam book-keeper has so entered into the female rile that he appears on the street in female attire almost excinsively, and, as the people with whom he lodges state, uses an embroifered night-draws.

"On closer examination of the assembly, to my astenishment, I discover acquaintances on all lands: my shoe-maker, whom I should have taken for anything but a woman-later—he is a 'troubadour,' with sword and plume; and his 'Lectora,' in the costume of a bride, is accustomed to place my favorite brand of cigars before me in a certain cigar-store. 'Lectora,' who, during an intermission, removes her gloves, I recognize with certainty by her large, blue hands. Right! There is my haterdasher, also; be moves about in a questionable cestame as Bucchus, and is the swain of a repugnantly bedecked Diam, who works as a waiter in a been restaurant. The real 'holies' of the ball cannot be described here. They associate only with one snother, and avoid the woman-hating men; and the latter are exclusive, and amuse themselves, absolutely ignoring the charms of the women."

These facts deserve the careful attention of the police, who should be placed in a position to cope with male prestitution, as they now do with that of women.

Male prostitution is certainly much more dangerous to society than that of females; it is the darkest stain on the history of humanity.

From the statements of a high police official of Berlin, I learn that the police of Berlin are conversant with the male demi-movele of the German Capital, and do all they can to suppress blackmail among pederasts,—a practice which often does not stop short of murder. The foregoing facts justify the wish that the law-maker of the future may, for reasons of utility, at least, abandon the prosecution of pederasty.

With reference to this point, it is worthy of note that the French Code does not punish it so long as it does not become an offense to public decency. Probably for politico-legal reasons, the new Italian Penal Code passes over the crime of unnatural abuse in silence, as do the statutes of Holland and, as far as I know, Belgium and Spain.

In how far such cultivated pederasts are to be regarded as mentally and morally sound may remain an open question. The majority of them suffer with genital neuroses. At least, in these cases, there are the stages of transition to acquired pathological contrary sexual instinct. The responsibility of these individuals, who are certainly much lower than the women who prostitute themselves, in general cannot be questioned.

The various categories of male-loving men, with respect of the manner of sexual indulgence, may be thus characterized in general:—

The congenital urning becomes a pederast only exceptionally, and eventually resorts to it after having practiced and exhausted all the possible immoral acts with males. Passive pederasty is for him the ideally and practically adequate form of the sexual act. He practices active pederasty only to please another. The most important point here is the congenital and unchangeable perversion of the sexual instinct.

It is otherwise with the pederast by cultivation. He has once acted normally sexually, or, at least, had normal inclinations, and occasionally has intercourse with the opposite sex. His sexual perversity is neither congenital nor unchangeable. He begins with pederasty and ends in other perverse sexual acts, induced by weakness of the centres for erection and ejaculation. At the height of his power, his sexual desire is not for passive, but for active pederasty. He yields himself to passive pederasty only to please another; for money, in the rôle of a male prostitute; or as a means, when virility is declining, to make active pederasty still occasionally possible.

A horrible act, that must be alluded to, in conclusion, is predicatio mulicrum, 'and even uxorum. Sensual individuals sometimes do it with hardened prostitutes, or even with their wives. Tardieu gives examples where men, usually practicing coitus, sometimes indulged in pederasty with their wives. Occasionally fear of a repetition of pregnancy may induce the man to perform, and the woman to tolerate, the act.

Case 192. Impulsition of pederasty that was not proved. Résumé from the legal proceedings —

On May 10, 1888, Dr. S., chemist, of H., in an aneaymous letter, was necessed by his step-father of having immoral relations with G., aged 19, the son of a batcher. Dr. S. seccived the letter, and, astounded by its contents, hastened to his lawyer, who promised to proceed discreetly in the matter, and to ascertain from the anthorities whether he would be publicly prosecuted.

On the next morning, G., who lived in the house of Dr. S., was arrested. At the time he was sick with gonorrhes and orchitis. Dr. S. tried to induce the authorities to release G., and advised caution, but he was refused. In his statement to the judge, S. said that he became acquainted with G. on the street, three years previously, and then saw no. more of him until the fall of 1887, when he met him in his father's shop-After November G. supplied Dr. S.'s kitchen with ment,-coming in the evening to get the order, and bringing the meats the next morning. Thus S. gradually became well acquainted with G., and came to have a very friendly feeling for him. When S. fell till and was, for the most port, confined to his bed until the middle of May, 1888, G. gave him so smoll attention that S, and his wife were much attencted to him on account of his hamnless, rhild-like, and happy disposition. Dr. S. showed and explained to him his collection of cariosities, and they spent the evenings pleasantly together, the wife also being manife present; busides, S. and G. experimented in making sansages, jelly, etc. In February, 1888, G. fell ill with gonorrhou. Dr. S., being his friend, and having studied medicine for several terms, took care of G., procured medicine for him, etc. In May, G. being still sick, and, for several reasons, inclined to leave home, S, and his wife took him into their own home to care for him. S. denied the truth of all the suspicions that had been mised by this relation, and defeaded himself by pointing to his life of previous respectability, his education, and to the fact that G., at the time, was suffering with a diagnoting, contagious disease, and that he himself had a painful affection (nephritic calcules, with occasional attacks of colic).

&lt;sup>5</sup> Comp. Tarchen, Attendate, p. 198.—Martinese, Deptechs Med. Zentang, 1883, p. 9. —Verdoon's Johnto, 1881, t. p. 533.—Contagne, Lyon Modical, Nov. 23, 56.

Opposed to this statement of Dr. S.'s must be mentioned the facts that were brought out in court, and which led to conviction in the first trial.

The relation of S. to G. had, by reason of its obviousness, given came for remark by private individuals, as well as by these in public houses. G spout almost all his evenings with S,'s family, and, finally, came to be quite at home there. They took walks together. Once, while on on such a walk, S. said to G. that he was a perity fellow, and that he (8.) was very foul of him. On the same occasion, there was also talk of sexual matters, and also of poderasty. S. said he touched on these subsects only to warn G. With reference to the intercourse at home, it was proved that occasionally S., while sitting on a sofa, embraced G., and kissed him. This happened in the presence of the wife, as well as of the serrant-girls. When G: was ill with genorehors, S. instructed him in the method of using a syringe, and, at the time, took the penis in his hand. G. testified that S., in answer to his question why he was so fond of him, said," I don't know, myself," When, one day, G. remained away, S., with tears in his eyes, complained of it to him when he returned. S. also told hiri that his marriage was unhappy, and, in tears, begged G. not to leave him; that he must take the place of his wife.

From all this resulted the just accountion, that the relation between the culprits had a sexual direction. The fact that all was open and known to everybody, accounting to the compinist, did not speak for the harmlessness of the relation, but more for the intensity of the passion of 8. The spotless life of the accused was silowed, as well as his bacesty and gentleness. The probability of an unhappy marriage, and that 8. was of a very sensual mature, was shown.

During the course of the trial, G was repeatedly examined by the medical experts. He is scarcely of medium size, pale, and of powerful frame; penis and testirles are very perfectly developed (large).

In consonance with the accountion, it was found that the axus was pathologically changed, in that there were no wrinkles in the skin about it and the sphineter was relaxed; and it was presumed that these changes pointed to the probability of passive polemety.

The conviction was based on those facts. The judgment passed recognized that the relation that existed between the culprits did not necessarily point to munitural abuses, any more than did the physical conditions found on the person of G.

However, by reason of the combination of the two facts, the court was equivariated of the guilt of both colorits, and held it proved: "That the shuormal condition of G.'s man had been caused by the frequently repeated introduction of the penis of S., and that G. columnarily permitted the performance of this immoral act on himself."

Thus the conditions of § 175, R. St. G. B., seemed to be covered. In passing sentence, there was consideration of S.'s education, which made him appear to be G.'s sodneer; in G.'s case, this fact and his youth were given weight; and the previous respectability of both was beld in view. Thus Dr. S. was sentenced to imprisonment for eight months, and G. for four months.

The culprits appealed to the Supreme Court at Leigning, and prepared themselves, in case the appeal should be dealed, to collect evidence sufficient to call for a new trial.

They subjected themselves to examination and observation by distinguished experts. The latter declared that G is now presented no signs of indulgence in possive polerasty.

Since it seemed of importance to those interested to make clear the psychological aspect of the case, which was not touched on at the trial, the author was intrusted with the examination and observation of Dr. S. and G.

Results of the Personal Examination, from December 11 to 13, 1888, in Gran.—Dr. S., aged 31; two years married, without shidren. Ex-Director of the City Laboratory of H. He comes of a father who is said to have been nervous, owing to great activity; who had an apopleotic attack in his fifty-seventh year, and died, at the age of sixty-soven, of another attack of apoplexy. His mother is living, and is described as a strong person, who has been nervous for years. Her mother reached quite an old age, and is said to have died of a cerebellar tunser. A brother of the mother's father is said to have been a drinker. The paternal grandfather died early, of softening of the heain.

Dr. S. lms two brothers, who are in perfect health.

He states that he is of nervous temperament, and has been of strong constitution. After articular rheumatism, which he had in his fourteenth year, he suffered with great nervousness for some months. Thereafter he often suffered with rheumatic pains, palputation, and shortness of breath. These symptoms gradually disappeared with sca-bathing. Seven years ago he had generates. This discuss because thronic, and for a long time caused blackler-difficulty.

In 1887 he had his first attack of rousi colic, and he had such attacks repeatedly during the winter of 1887 and 1888, until May 10, 1888, when quite a large read calculus was passed. Since then his condition had been quite satisfactory. While suffering with stone, during seitus, at the moment of spaculation, he felt severe pain in the unother, and the same pain on urinating.

With reference to his life, S. states that he attended the Gymmisium until he was fourteen, but after that, owing to the results of his severe illness, he studied privately. He then spent four years in a drug-store, and then studied medicine for six semesters at the University, serving, in the war of 1878, as a voluntary hospital assistant. Since he had no certificate of graduation from the Gymmisium, he gave up the study of medicine, and obtained the degree of doctor of philosophy. Then he asreed in the Museum of Minerals in K., and later as assistant in the Mineralogical Institute of H. Thereafter he made special studies in the chemistry of food-stuffs, and five years ago became Director of the City Laboratory.

He makes all these statements in a prompt, precise manner, and does not think long about his answers; so that one is more and more led to think that he is a man who loves and speaks the truth,—the more, since, on the following day, his statements are identical. With reference to his vita accusits, Dr. S., in a modest, delicate, and open way, states that, in his eleventh year, he began to have a knowledge of the difference of the exces, and for some time, until his fourteenth year, was given to minism. He first had coitin at eighteen, and thereafter indulged mederately. His sensial desire had never been very great, but, until lately, the sexual act had been normal in every way, and accompanied by gratifying pleasurable feeling and full virility. Since his marriage, two years ago, he had colabited with his wife exclusively. He had married his wife out of love, and still loved her, having coitus with her at least several times a week. The wife, who was also at hard, confirmed those statements.

All cross-questioning with reference to a perversion of sexual feeling toward men Dr. S. answered repentedly in the negative, to repeated examination, and that without controlliction or any thought of the snewers. Even when, in order to Imp him, he is told that the proof of a personne sexual instinct would be of avail in the trial, he sticks to his statements. One gains the important impression that S. has not the slightest knowledge of the facts of maledove. Thus it is learned that his lacivious dreams have never been about men; that he is interested only in female andity; that he liked to dame with ladies, etc. No traces of any kind of sexual inclination for his own sex can be discovered in S. With reference to his relations with G., Dr. S. expresses himself exactly as he did at his examination before the court. In explanation of his partiality for G., he can only say that he is necrous, and a man of feeling and great sensibility, and very sensitive to friendliness. During his illness he had felt very lenceouse and depressed; his wife had frequently been with her parents; and thus it had imported that he had become friendly with G., who was so gentle and kind. He still had a weakness for him, and felt remarkably quiet and contented while in his society.

He had had two ands close friendships previously: when he was yet a sinders, with a corpolarother, a Dr. A. whom he also embraced and kissed; inter, with a Baron M. When it impressed that he could not see him for a law days, he became depressed, and oven gried.

He also had a similar feeling and attachment for animals. Thus he had a poodle that died a short time ago, mormed like a member of the family; and he had often kissed the animal. (On relating this, the tears came to his eyes.) His hyother confirmed these statements, with the remark, with reference to his brother's remarkable friendship for A. and M., that in these instances there was not the slightest suspicion of sexual coloring or relation. Too, the most careful and detailed examination of Dr. S. gave not the slightest reason for such a presumption.

He states that he never had the slightest scussed feeling for G., to say nothing of crection or sensual desire. His partiality for G., which berdered on jenlousy, S. captained as due merely to his sentimental temperament and his inordinate friendship. G. was still as dear to him as if he were his son.

It is worthy of note that S. stated that when G. told him about his love-adventures with girls, it had hart him only because G. was in danger of injuring himself and ruining his health by dissipation. He had never felt burt himself by this. If he knew a good girl for G. he would be glad to rejoice with him, and do all he could to promote their marriage.

S, states that it was first in the course of his logal examination that he saw how he had been careless in his intercourse with G., by causing gossip. His openness he explained as due to the innocence of the friendship.

It is worthy of note that S.'s wife never noticed anything suspections in the intercourse between her husband and G., though the most simple wife would instinctively notice anything of that nature. Mrs. S. had also made no opposition to receiving G. into the house. On this point she remarked that the guest-chamber in which G. lay iii, was on the second floor, while the living apartments were on the fourth; and, further, that S. never associated alone with G. as long as he was in the house. She states that she is convenced of her husband's innucence, and that she loves hum as before.

Dr. S. states freely that formerly he had often kinsed G., and talked with him about sexual matters. G. was much given to women, and in friendship he had often warned him about sexual dissipation, particularly when G., as often happened, did not look well. He had once said that G. was a hand-some follow; it was in a perfectly termless relation.

The hissing of G. had been due to inordinate friendship, when G. had shown him some particular attention, or pleased him especially. In the art he had never had any sexual Seling. Too, when he had now and then dreamed of G., it was in a perfectly harmless way.

It appeared of great importance to the author to form also an opinion of G.'s personality. On December 18th, the desired opportunity was given, and G. was enrefully examined.

G. is a young man, aged 20, of delicate build, whose development corresponds with his years; and he appears to be neuropathic and sensual. The genitals are normal and well developed. The author thinks he may be permitted to pass over the condition of the anns, as he does not feel called upon to pass judgment upon it. With prolonged association with G., one gets the impression that he is a harmless, kind, and artices man, who is light-minded, but not morally depraced. Nothing in his dress or manner indicates percerse sexual feeling. There farmed be the slightest suspicion that he is a mule courtesan.

When G. is introduced in median yes, he states that S. and he, feeling their innocence, had told the matter as it actually was, and on this the whole trial had been boxed.

At first, S.'s friendship, and especially the kinning, had seemed nemarkable, even to him. Later he had convinced himself that it was merely friendship, and had then thought no more about it.

G. had looked upon S. as a father-like friend; for he was so mostlish and loved him so.

The expression "handsome fellow" was made when G. had a loveaffair, and when S. expressed his fours about a happy fature for G. At that time S. had conforted him, and said that his (G.'a) appearance was pleasing, and that he would make an eligible match.

Once S. had complained to him (G.) that his wife was inclined to drink, and hurst into tears. G. was touched by his friend's unhappiness. On this occasion S. had kissed him, and begged for his friendship, and saked him to visit him frequently.

S. had never spontaneously directed the convenation to sexual matters. G. once asked what pederasty was, of which he had heard much while in England; and S. had explained it to him.

Gi acknowledges that he is seremal. At the age of twelve he had been made acquainted with sexual matters by schoolmates. He had bever musturinated, had first had coits at the age of eighteen, and had since visited brothels frequently. He had never felt any inclusion for his own sex, and had never experienced any sexual excitement when 8, knowl him. He had always had pleasure in costus normally performed. His laseivious dreams had always been of women. With indignation, and pointing to his descent from a healthy and respectable family, he needs the instruction of having been given to passive pederasty. Until the goastp about them came to his cars, he had been innecent and devoid of suspicion. The small anomalies he tries to explain in the same way that he did at the trial. Auto-maximization in two be denies.

It should be noted that Mr. J. S. claims to be no less estonished by the charge against his brother of male-love than these more closely associated with him. Yet be could not understand what attached his brother to G.; and all the explanations which S. made to him concerning his relation to G. were twin.

The author took the trouble to observe Dr. S. and G., in a natural way, while they were dining, in company with S.'s brother and Mrs. S., in Gran. This observation revealed not the slightest sign of improper friendship.

The general impression which Dr. S. made on me was that of a acreous, sanguine, somewhat overstrained individual, but, at the same time, kind, open-hearted, and very custional.

Dr. S. is physically strong, somewhat corpulent, with a symmetrical, brachycephalic crantum. The genitals are well developed; the peals somewhat belified; the prepare somewhat hypertrophied.

Opinion.-Pederasty is, unfortunately, not infrequent among muskind to-day; but will, occurring among the peoples of Europe, it is an musual, perverse, and even monstrous manner of sexual gratification. It presumes a congenital or acquired perversion of the sexual instinct, and at the same time, defect of moral sense that is either original or acquired, as a result of pathological influences.

Medico-legal science is thoroughly conversant with the physical and psychical conditions from which this abstration of the sexual instinct arises; and in the concrete and doubtful case it seems requisite to alcertain whether these empirical subjective conditions accessary for pederasty are present. Too, it is essential to distinguish between active and passive pedemoty.

Active pederaty occurs :-

I. As a non-pathological phenomenon:-

I. As a means of sexual gratification, in case of great sexual desire, with enforced abstinence from natural sexual intercourse.

2. In old debanchees, who have become satisfied with normal sexual intercourse, and more or less impotent, and also morally depraced; and who resort to pederasty, in order to excite their lust with this new stimulus, and sid their virility, that has sink so low psychically and physically.

1. Traditionally, among certain barbarous races that are devoid of morality.

II. As a pathological phenomenon:—

- t. Upon the tasks of congenital contrary sexual instinct, with repugnance for sexual intercourse with women, or even absolute incapability of it. But, as even Casper knew, pederasty, under such conditions. is very infrequent. The so-called tirning satisfies himself with a man by means of passive or mutual cosmism, or by means of coitus-like acts is a reitne inter Sensora); and he resorts to pederasty only very exceptionally, as a result of intense sexual desire, or with a low or lowered moral sense, out of desire to please another.
  - 2. On the basis of sequired contrary sexual instinct :-
- (a) As a result of long years of coanism, which finally causes impotence for women with continuance of intense sexual desire.
- (b) As a result of severe mental disease (scale dementis, brainsoftening of the instanc, etc.), in which, as experience teaches, an inversion of the sexual instinct may take place.

Passive pederasty occurs:-

- I. As a nan-pathological phenomenon :-
- 1. In individuals of the lowest class, who, having had the misfortune to be seduced in boyhood by debanchees, endured pain and disgust for the take of money, and became deprayed morally, so that, in more mature years, they have fallen so low that they take pleasure in being male prostitutes.

2. Under circumstances analogous to those of I, 1,-as a remuneration to another for having allowed active pederasty.

II. As a pothological phenomenon:-

In individuals affected with contrary sexual instinct, with endurance of pain and diagnat, as a return to men for the bestowal of sexual favors.

In arraings who feel toward mes like women, out of desire and last.
 In such female-men there is horror femine and absolute inespability for sexual intercourse with women. Character and inclinations are feminine.

The empirical facts that have been gathered by legal medicine and psychiatry are all included in this classification. Before the court of nactions science, it would be necessary to prove that a man belonged to one of the above categories in order to enery the conviction that he was a pedemat.

In the life and character of Dr. 8., one searches in vain for signs which piace him in one of the categories of active pederasts which science has established. He is neither one forced to sexual abeliannee, nor one male impotent for women by defauchery; neither is he congenitally male-loving, nor alterated from women by masterbation, and attracted to men through continuance of sexual desire; and, finally, he is not sexually previous as a result of severe mental disease.

In fact, the general conditions necessary for the occurrence of polerasty see wanting in him,—moral imberility or moral depracity, on the one hand, and inordinate sexual desire, on the other.

It is likewise impossible to classify the accomplice, G., in any of the empirical categories of passive pedensty; for he possesses neither the premiurities of the male prestitute nor the clinical marks of effecination; and he has not the anthropological and clinical stigunda of the female-man. He is, in fact, the very opposite of all this.

In order to make a pederastic relation between the two plansible medico-scientifically, it would be requisite for De. S. to present the autocelents and marks of the active pederasts of 1, 2, and G., those of the passive pederasts of II, 1 or 2.

The assumption lying at the basis of the verdict is, from a psychialogical stand-point, legally untenshie.

With the same right, every man might be considered a pederast. It females to consider whether the explanations given by Dr. S. and G. of their remarkable friendship are psychologically valid.

Psychologically it is not without paralled that so continental and coccutric a man as 8.—without any sexual excitement whatever—should entertain a transcendental friendship. It suffices to recall the friendship of school-girls, the self-sacrificing friendship of school-girls, the self-sacrificing friendship of school-girls, the in general, and the partiality which this sensitive man sometimes showed even for domestic animals,—where no one would think of sodomy. With 8.'s mental character, extracoffinary friendship for the youth G. may be easily comprehended. The openness of this friendship permits the conclusion that it was innocent, much rather than that it depended upon sensoral passion.

The defendants succeeded in obtaining a new trial. The new trial took place on March 7, 1890. There was much evidence presented in favor of the accused.

The previous moral life of S. was generally acknowledged. The Sister of Charity who cared for G. in S.'s house, never noticed anything suspicious in the intercourse between S. and G. S.'s former friends testified to his morality, his deep friendship, and his habit of hissing them on mosting or leaving them. The snal abnormalities previously found on G. were no longer present. Experts called by the court allowed the possibility that they had been due simply to digital manipulations; their diagnostic value in any case was contested by the experts called by the defense.

The court recognized that the imputed crime had not been proved, and exonerated the defendants.

LEGGRAN LOVE.

Where the sexual intercourse is between adults, its legal importance is very slight; it could come into consideration only in Austria. In connection with urningism, this phenomenon is of anthropological and clinical value. The relation is the same, modulis modulois, as between men. Lesbian love does not seem to approach urningism in frequency. The unjority of female urnings do not act in obedience to an innate impulse, but they are developed under conditions analogous to those which produce the urning by cultivation.

These "forbidden friendships" flourish especially in penal institutions for females.

Kramsold (op. sit.) reports: "The female prisoners often have such friendships, which, when possible, extend to mental measurantees.

"But temporary unusual gratification is not the only purpose of such friendships. They are made to be enduring,—entered into systematically, so to speak,—and intense jenkousy and a passion for love are developed which could scarcely be surpassed between persons of opposite sex. When the friend of one prisoner is merely smiled at by another, there are often the most violent scenes of jeuleusy, and even beatings.

"When the violent prisoner has been put in irons, in accordance with the prison-regulations, she says "she has had a child by her friend."

We are indebted to Parent-Duchatelet ("De la prostitution," 1857, vol. i, p. 159) for interesting communications concerning Lesbian love.

According to this experienced author, repugnance for the most disgusting and perverse acts (certus in axilla, inter manner, etc.) which men perform on prostitutes is not infrequently responsible for driving these infortunate orestores to Lesbian love. From his statements it is seen that it is essentially prostitutes of great sensuality who, unsatisfied with intercourse with impotent or perverse uses, and impelled by their disgusting practices, come to include in it.

Besides these, there are prostitutes who let themselves be known as given to tribudists; persons who have been in prisons for years, and in these hot beds of Lesbian love, ex abstinuatio, sequired this vice.

It is interesting to know that prostitutes hate those who practice tribution,—just as men abbor pederasts; but female prisoners do not regard the vice as indecent.

Parent mentions the case of a prostitute who, while intexicated, tried to force another to Lexidan love. The latter became so energed that she denounced the indecent woman to the police. Taxil (op. cir. p. 166, 110) reports similar instances.

Mantegazza ("Anthropol. enituralistorische Studien," p. 91) also finds that sexual intercourse between women has especially the signifitures of a vice which arises on the basis of unsatisfied hypermethesia sexuals,

In many cases of this kind, however, saide from congenital contrary exact instinct, one gains the impression that, just as in men (wife sayes), the caltivated vice gradually leads to acquired contrary sexual instinct, with repuguance for sexual intercourse with the opposite sex.

At least Parent's cases were probably of this instinc. The correspondence with the lover was quite as sentlmental and exaggerated in tone as it is between lovers of the opposite sex; unfaithfulness and separation broke the heart of the one abandoned; jeulousy was unbridled, and led to bloody revenge. The following cases of Leafnin love, by Martegaza, are containly pathological, and possibly examples of congenital contrary account instinct:—

1. On July 5, 1777, a norma was brought before a court in London, who, dressed as a man, had been searried to three different women. She was recognized as a woman, and sentenced to imprisonment for six months.

- 2. In 1773, another woman, dressed as a man, courted a girl, and asked for her hand; but the trick did not succeed.
- Two women lived together as man and wife for thirty years. On her death-hed the " husband " confessed her secret to those about her.

Coffiguou (ep. cir., p. 301) makes later statements worthy of notice.

He reports that this view is, of late, quite the fishion,—partly owing to novels on the subject, and partly as a result of excessive work on areing-markines, the sleeping of female servants in the same bed, seduction in schools by deproved pupils, or seduction of daughters by perverse servants.

The nutlior declares that this vice ("sophism") is mist more frequently among ladies of the aristocracy and prostitutes.

He does not differentiate physiciogical and pathological cases, nor, among the latter, the acquired and congenital cases. The details of a few cases, which are certainly pathological, correspond exactly with the facts that are known about men of contrary sexuality.

The suphists have their places of meeting, recognize each other by peculiar glances, carriage, etc. Suphistic pairs like to dress and omament themselves alike, etc. They are then called "petites sours" (little sisters).

7. NEGROPHILLA.

(Austrian Statutes, § 396.)

This horrible kind of sexual indulgence is so monstrous that the presumption of a psychopathic state is, under all discumstances, justified; and Maschka's recommendation, that the mental condition of the perpetrator should always be investigated, is well founded. In any case, an abnormal and decidedly perverse sensuality is required to overcome the natural repugnance which man has for a corpse, and permit a feeling of pleasure to be experienced in sexual congress with a endayer.

Unfortunately, in the majority of the cases reported, the mental condition was not examined; so that the question whether necrophilin is compatible with mental soundness must remain open. But any one having knowledge of the horrible aberrations of the sexual instinct would not venture, without further consideration, to answer the question in the negative.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Comp. Maschka, Billo., iii, p. 19t (good bisories) notes).—Legrand, La folis, p. 531.

S. INCHST.

(Austrian Statutes, § 132; Abridgment, § 189; German Statutes, § 174.)

The preservation of the moral purity of family life is a product of civilization; and feelings of intense displeasure arise in an ethically intact man at thought of lustful feeling toward a member of the same family. Only great sensuality and defective ideas of laws and morals can lead to increst.

Both conditions may, in tainted families, be operative. Drinking and a state of intoxication in men; weak-mindedness which does not allow the development of the feeling of shame, and which, under certain circumstances, is associated with croticism in females,—these facilitate the occurrence of incestuous acts. External conditions which facilitate their occurrence are due to defective separation of the sexes among the lower classes.

As a decidedly pathological phenomenon, the author has found incest in states of congenital and acquired mental weakness, and infrequently in cases of epilepsy and paranoia.

In many of the cases, probably a majority, it is not posside, however, to find a pathological basis for the act which so deeply wounds not only the tie of blood, but also the feeling of a civilized people. But in many of the cases reported in literature, to the honor of humanity, the presumption of a psychopathic basis is possible.

In the Feldtmann case (Marc-Ideler, vol. i, p. 18), where a father constantly made immoral attacks on his adult daughter, and finally killed her, the annatural father was weak-minded and, healdes, probably subject to periodical mental disease. In another case of incest between father and daughter (Acc. cal., p. 247), the latter, at least, was weak-minded. Lombroso (Archiv. de Paichiafria, viii, p. 519) reports the case of a passant, aged 42, who practiced incest with his daughters, aged, respectively, 22, 15, and 11; he even forced the youngest to prostitute hercelf, and then risited her in a brothel. The medico-legal examination showed predisposition, intellectual and moral imbecility, and alcoholism.

There was no mental examination in the case reported by Saharmeyer (Deutsche Zeitsche, für Stanfourmeikunde, axii, H. 1), in which a mother hid her son of five and a half years on herself, and practiced abuse, with him; and in that given by Lafarque (Joseph Med. de Berdenur, 1874), where a girl, aged 17, had her brother, aged 18, apen herself, brought about membrorum conjunctionem, and performed masturbation on him.

<sup>5</sup> Vals Wariermarck, History of Burnes Marriage, chap. Siv. McMillan & Co., 1881.

The following cases are those of tainted individuals: Magnan (Annmid-psych., 1885) mentions an immerried women, aged 29, who, though indifferent toward other children or even men, suffered frightfully in the presence of her nephew, and could scarcely control her impulse to collabor with him. This sexual pseculiarity continued only as long as the nephew was quite young.

Legrand (Ann. mid.-paych., May, 1878) mentions a girl, aged 15, who seduced her brother into all manner of sexual excesses on her person; and when, after two years of this incestoous practice, her brother died, she attempted to murder a relative. In the same article there is the case of a nearried weman, aged 35, who hung her open breast out of a window, and indulged in abuse with her brother, aged 18; and also the case of a mother, aged 39, who practiced insect with her sen, with whom she was madly in love, became pregnant by him, and induced abortion.

Through Casper we know that depraved mothers in large cities sometimes treat their little daughters in a most horrible fashion, in order to prepare them for the sexual use of debauchers. This crime belongs elsewhere.

9. IMMORAL ACTS WITH PERSONS IN THE CARE OF OTHERS; SEPECTION (AUSTRIAN).

(Austrian Statutes, § 131; Abridgment, § 188; German Statutes, § 178).

Allied to incest, but still less repugnant to moral sensibility, are those cases in which persons seduce those entrusted to them for care or education, and who are more or less dependent upon them, to commit or suffer vicious practices. Such acts, which especially deserve legal punishment, seem only exceptionally to have psychopathic significance.

INDEX.

Abuse, meastersl, 404	Disguisit of contrary sexuality, 319
Arts Se self franciscion, 124	Burga, 57
Methetics and earming, 10:
Asser Indiana, 425	Effectivenes, 270
Anasthesa settalis, acquirel, 42	Ejeculation centre, 31
congratal, 40	affection of 36
Andrigray, 206	Epilepsy and psychopathin surmin, 364
Агная, егодинови, 31	Equas erotims, 111
Attraction, except, 16	Erection centre, 24
	efections of, 25
Baudalaire, 122	Elegation, 200, 221
Brast, 18, 19, 21, 221	Evitation, 197
Bondage, mousil, 341	Eshibition, 383
Sola, 200	Eyes, astropathic, 23
Boys, whipping of (endisoir), 82	Control of the Control
Bress, 19	Family lde, d
	Fetichism, 17
Chemita, St.	and crime, 400
Dapitals as breading-places of sensuality, 7	of agrees, 170
Christianty, inflores of, 4, 6	of feathers, 182
contracted with Mohammedanism, 5	of female strice, 102
Odnhitation, 22	of female person, 167
Contrary serval instant, 255	of feet and shoe 123, 170
causes al. 188	of fam, 181
degrees of, 157	of hair, 20
Corpse, muulation of, 67	of hard, 150
Crurky, passively enhand, 89	of handkerchief, 171
and love 7	of glove 170
and list. 9	of material, 180
sources of, 56	of odors, 21 of alk, 183
Decadence, sureal, #	of reles, 180
Defenication, 197	of water, 23
Dellement of women, 72	religious, 17
Delirium aembum, 54	Fiction and sexual pervention, 123
Denenita and psychoyathin serialis, 264	Flageliation, 25, 152
paretic, and perchapathia sexualis, 363	and manchine, 99
Decartos, 1933	differentiation of 100
	(433)

Flagellation, for redex effect, 90	Enterior con, 266
bernes of 29	Little servale, 24-32
Flagellem valutis, 25	Love and creekly, 9
Friendship and love, 15	and triendship, 10
Prigiditas utores, 46	and religion, #
Prottage, 394	fotichies at 19
	Losbian 428
Oley, 208-	of man and woman compared, 15
Grininger, 204	platenic, U. 12
Oynandry, 204	tree, II
	periodic, 11
Thur, as a Setick, 20	Lost and crasity, 10, 57
Hair-Jespation, 162, 364, 165	and battle, $8, 60
Berolulus 200	and sureles, 82, 365
Harmsphroditian, psychical, 255	and the passine endomnes of creekly, 00
manu of 202-205	and plander, 16
Hippornius, 200	Lospercal, 22
Hono-separity, 186, 285	Lydston, 162, 227
soquired 188	A CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF TH
mates at 188	Magnas, 20, 227
congratial, 222	Maria, 373
degrees of, 1, 194; II, 197; III, 202;	The second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a second section in the second section in the second section is a section in the second section in the section is a section in the section in the section is a section in the section in the section is a section in the section in the section is a section in the section in the section is a section in the section in the section in the section is a section in the section in the section in the section is a section in the section in
IV, 200	Marschalle Office do Rays, 58
explanation of 207	Mandaley, 1
Holder, 202	Maroch, Sacher-, 89
Hypornethesia sexuale, 48	Marochina, 89
cases of 63×55	and fisgallation, 99.
Hypanus, thiraperties, 323-357	and sadium, 148
Hysteria, 370	explanation of, 120
	m women, 187
May and psychopathin somalis, 358	Jarrated, 123
Inhestity and contrary equality, 239	radimentary, 164
July, theoring of, 60	symbolic, 115
Insuray, and contrary scannity, 358	Melanchida, 374
perrodical, 372	Mestalinia, 88
Tion, Cit	Meterosphosis servada parazanza, 206 franction to, 202
Tapateer Wiesen, S.	Moderny, might of 2, 15
Jeronal, 31	III Women, 15
	Mohatsmedian trouses, 5
Kiernas, 227	Monality, progress in 5
Kierenn's explanation of radiem, 150	Motals, decadence of, and pathology, 6
Klost, 88	Majoratos Dil
	The state of the s

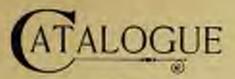

Nurcephilia, 430	Salies, strents, 152
North engants, 24	cases of, 62-67
Secrees, prestrat, 36	th William, 87.
aroust, 54	physiogical relations of 50
epinal, 35	symbolic, 81
Nymphomasia, 353	with saimals, #4
	with other objects, 62
Offictory Stichism, 21	Satyrians, 373
hallmentions and secondary, 28	School of sexual nemons, 11
sense and served sense, 36	Schopenhauer, $1.
The same of the sa	Scythians, insurity of the, 200
Pandegia espudia, 37	Schreck Netting's pase, 554
Permittana meralis, 56	Senile libido, 40, 41
Parancia, 279	Sensuality, 5
Pathological security in its legal aspects,	religious equivalent of, 8
278	Berrants, immoral acts of with children
Pathology, general, 34	632
special, 356	Semnality, source of ethical feeling, I
Pelmate, 416	and the social feeling, I collected, 434	simple covered of 191
false supertation of, 400	Bergal attraction, 16
Pertheila, 88	bondage, 141
Performes as a feticle, 22, 20	dosco, physiology of, 23
Thyunday, 23	instinct in childhood, 37
Frapen, 50	in old age, 14
Programs of contrary sexuality, 319	promytings, first, 7
Psychology, sornal, 1	satisfaction in received cruckly and
Psychopathia sexual's periodica, 271	alone 91
Pulmery, on psychological importance, 7	adortion, 2
relation to poetry, 7	Shire fetichistic (123)
to religious feeling, T	raise of, 126-134
Poststa Indiana, 201	fülk-feticham, 183
	Sea, 51
Raps, 397	Sodowy, 404
Beligien and seasonably, 8	Spanking, dangers of, 28
Record of sexual feeling, 194	Stelearwilly, 122
Boldery, 401	Steeling, 13
Boundar, 199	Sulphenic acid. throwing of, 80
	Seguntian, hypertic, 203-103
Surher Masseb, 80
Sode, Marquis do, 57, 71	Thirt; 401
Sullans, 57, 401	Torture of animals, 201
and masselvins, (1)	Through of contary sexuality, 221
The second secon

Ulriche, 227
Urning, memorial of one, 400
Urnings, 250
case of, 257-279
laws oncorning, 413

Vampirius, 87 Varity, 16 Velve-frichism, 180 Violation of children, 408 Vanginity, 270 Varity, four of, 12 Voice as a fetch, 22 Westphal, 224
Whitechapel murderer, 64
Woman, elevation of, 3 in Chi Testament and Gospela, 4 position of, 2
escual appetite of, 15 rôle of, 13
Woman-batten' bull, 417
Women, definition of, 79 injury of, 70
masochism in, 137

Zones, sergences, 31

SEPTEMBER, 1893.

OF THE

MEDICAL PUBLICATIONS

OF

THE F. A. DAVIS CO., Publishers, Philadelphia, Pa.

MAIN OPPICE-1914 and 1998 Cherry St., Philadelphia. 117 W. Porty-Second Street, New York.

9 Lakeside Building, 254-220 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

7, J. REBMAN-11 Adam Street, Strand, Lordon, W. C., Eng.

ORDER FROM NEAREST OFFICE. FOR SALE BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Prices of books, as given in our catalogues and circulars, include full prepayment of postage, freight, or express charges. Castomers in Canada and Mexico must pay the cost of duty, in addition, at point of destination.

N. B.—Remittances should be made by Express Money-Order, Post-Office Money-Order, Registered Letter, or Draft on New York City, Philadelphia, Roston, or Chicago.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for books sent by mail; to insure safe arrival of books sent to distant parts, the package should be registered. Charges for registering (at paralmer's expense), ten cents for every four pounds, or less,

TATINDEX ON PACE 2.

INDEX TO CATALOGUE.

BOOKS BY PEESS AND IN PREPARATION, PAGES 41 AND RE-

PASS	Tags
Annual of the Universal Medical Sci-	Oxygen Demorphy and Walting Becond-flook of Medical Examinations
40000     -   -	Bround Book of Medical Examinations
ANATOMY.	ter Life-Insurance Keating
Fractical Asptony-Rosening	The Steerest Fortetta, Marchly Physician's Interpenser
Service Large and Then A condition Secretarial Division	Philipping Sylventers - 1
hom-Edinger continues of A	Motivat Sea to tion-efocusions 21
Charte of the Nurse Vascular System-	Anterior and Court of the Part of the Court
these Edinger Charles of the Frares Vaccutar System— Fried and Rogifeton Syrogets of Harmer Analogy - Young . 26	-Waterstile - Access Co. 1 1
Symposium Stamor Analomy-Young 24	The Chinese, Medical, Pointent, and
BACTERIOLOGY.	Persistent Sensitive Real Ding
	Lectoreron Auto Initialization - Bonchard -
Barteriological Diagnosis-Electricity A	Colvernal Medical Journal
CURICAL CHARTS ETC.	A Practical Manual of Discuss of the
Improved Clinical Charter-Radione 3	Name and Advanced to the Control of Spinglion Reguler & Core Rev'll. Strant. 31	The Uttor Normal and Altermatic Chemically and Chemistry Considered
A STATE OF THE PARTY OF THE PAR	-Party
DOMESTIC HYGIENS, ETC.
One-ty-Vengat 12 The Runghter: Her Heatth, Education, 12 and Western Court Property in Property in	NEWYOUR SYSTEM, SPINE, ETC.
The Daughter's Her Health, Education,	Special Concession—Chernoger and Wedlink-Capp.	Directars of the Central Network System Consumption : How to Persons it - Davis & Plain Talks on Appeled Subjects-
Print Dates on Absolute Suggests-	Epstepay   14s Pathulogy and Trestmant-
Hersery, Beatte, and Personal Secrety-	Black are an artist to the same of the
Sincerated	Lectures by Nurrous Diseason-Rainer 20
	ORKTETRICS.
BLEGTHICITY,	The state of the s
Practical Electricity in Medicine and	Education Michoust and others 15
Sargery-Licking and Robot Houses-	Ossistic Stocker-convert  * 38
Massay 12 100 Linears of Woman in	PHYRIOGNOMY.
International Festign of Electro-Thous-	The state of the s
pentics II	Processed and Scientific Physiogeomy-
PEVER
The state of the s	PHYRIOLOGY AND EMBRYOLOGY.
Front its Patients; and Treatment-	Physiology of Companie Ashmili-Smith 21
Hay Ferres Sajone 15	Markeyology v Kylinkus of Learning on-
Hay Ferres-Supres 15	Mantage and the same
GYRECOLOGY.	A WANTED TO A PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE P
Learnes in Gynamica - 5	BURDERY AND BURDICAL OPERATIONS.
Fractical Oyserology Management 12	Processed Sugary-Packer)
	Talographics of the Paper & Asiats-Sons 20
HEARY, LUNGS, KIDNEYS, ETG.	Carnacians-Resentino 18
Estage-Curis	Principles of Bulgary-Beam
Enthers-Dutte
Discount of the Heart and Chymletics in	BWEDIBH MOVEMENT AND MARRACE.
Cachinean Kenting and Schennin 12 District the Counc. Symptoms, and	Smiddle Streams and Manage Treats
Treatment-Purity	Santo-Manage 1 Miles
	- 200 -
HYDENE.	THEOAT AND NOSE.
Climatelings of Southern California-	Journal of Large-Survey Stationary
Remarks	That Perer Conjour
Test Book of Hygiene-Robi	Leagues on the Impures of the New and
MATERIA MEDICA AND THERAPSUSION.	Discont-Supress
	Distance of the New and Threat-Print III
Hand Hod of Maireta Modes, Prostuncy, and Therapastics, Sowen	VENEREAL DIREADER.
Meseria Medica and Thempenting-Others	Syphilis To day just in Amingsin - Burri 4, 22 Neurosca of the Gentin-Urinary System
MARKET OF THE PARTY NAMED AND ADDRESS OF THE PARTY NAMED IN	is the Male-Ultramore 24
International Porket Medical Formation	The state of the s
-Witherstine - Annual Control of the Control	VETABLINARY.
Diagration Thorspealies in Paychoputhin	Age of Descript Asimir-Hubbioper II.
Beautie-Schenick-Nobing =	Physiology of Descentin Asianals—Sultra. F.
MIBORLLANEOUS.
Ministry of the Life of D. Hayes Agnes,	VISITING-LIRTS AND ACCOUNT-BOOKS
M.D. Lib B Officer	Medical Bulletie Visiting-Last or Physi-
H.D. Li, R.—Afrany Book on the Physician Himself—Cainell &	William Call Prevent
1 9	Physician All limping Amount Book . 14

MEDICAL BULLETIN. A Mostly burned of Mostles and Superv.

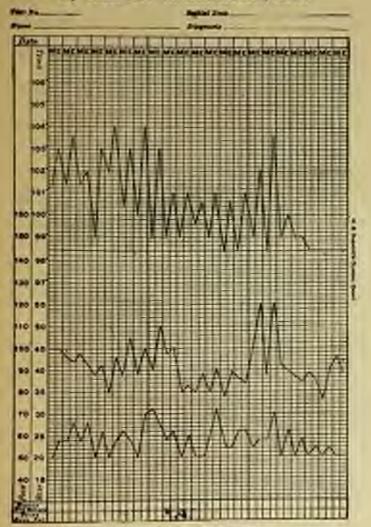

Edited by Jone V, Succession & M. M. B. Scott, contest, and resided. Arrange by the fact predicted around procession. It may be that for the companion of the contests with recognition by the Sandard of the manufacture of the Companion of the contests with the contest of the c

TERMS: $3.00 a year in minute in Paract states Counts, and Mexicon Foreign Subscription Terms: England, So.: Finion, G Re.: Sectionally, 6 marks; Jupus, 3 year; Analysis, So.; Meltand, 3 daries.

Bashore's Improved Clinical Chart.

For the Separate Hotting of Temperature, Poles, and Respiration. Designed for the Convenient, Securate, and Persuanent Doily Recording of Cours in Hospital and Private Practice.

By HARVEY B. BASHORE, M.D.

COTTAGRETED, 1818, PT T. A. DAVIS.

Dine S x 12 inches. Trice, port-paid, in the United 50 Charte, in Tablet Form. States and Canada, 50 Cents, not; in Great Britain, Jr. Cd.; in Prance, 6 fr. 60.

that can diff. (1.1) the initial size of the chart and chores the model of plotters, the matter the Print and the invert the Keptunius. By the purious is that pay or the being the Transportant. On models the Print, and the lower the Margination. By this marked is take for mark the energy to kept with but one count of a large straight int in the terminant of their personal of the straight that all providings will find by a printing of the straight that all providings with build another place conveniently arranged for termining. Conveniently and the termining of the straight of the st

to use the phreshop will secure such a supplier moned of his name as will read to his to copy them at hard a name of inferrinal improvement and beauting the phonon of his parlament of which one hardly be recommended. 122

ROENNING

A Text-Book on Practical Anatomy.

INCLUDING A SECTION ON SUBGREAU AMATOMY.

By Hukuy C. Bonnumo, M.D., Lessures on Anatomy and Surgery in the Philadelphia School of Anatomy; Demonstrator of Anatomy in the Medico-

Chirurgical College, etc., etc.

Pully dissirated throughout with about 200 Wood-Engravings. In one Pully dissirated throughout with about 200 Wood-Engravings. handsome Octavo volume, printed in extra large, atom type, making it specially desirable for use in the dissecting even. Nearly 500 pages. Submittially brand in Entra Cloth. Also is Cd-Cloth, for use in the dissecting-room without soiling.

Price, port-paid, in the United States, $2.50, not; Canada (duty paid), $2.75, not; Great Britain, Jin ; Prance, 16 Pt. 20.

This work is fully illustrated throughout with clear and instructive connectings. It is not as harron as the townstrate books on instruct, but it is not so harron as the townstrate books on instruction, but it corruptes the middle ground, and will find as acceptable place with many students.—Columbus Med. Journal.

There is not an unbecoming word is the book of senirity five handled paper. As a type-graphent specimen it is elegant, "graphentic, comprehently," and interest practical we heartiful sourcement is to all medical discious and practical structure and practical structure. Above Mod Plant.

BOWEN

Hand-Book of Materia Medica, Pharmacy, and Therapeutics.

By COTHERENT BOWER, M.D., B.A., Editor of "Notes on Practice." The second volume in the Physicians' and Shodents' Ready Reference Series. One Time column of 576 pages. Hardsomely bound in Dark-Ries Cloth, Price, port-paid, in the Toited States and Canada, $2.40, not; in Scout. Britain, St. 64 ; in France, 9 fr. 25.

This services amount comprises to its cated in its title as could well be seemed. SN pages about to such would and value into the company—St. Louis Medical and this information on the subjects into the company—St. Louis Medical and this information on the subjects into

BURET

SYPHILIS In Ancient and Prehistoric Times.

WITH A CHAPTER OF THE RATIONAL TREATMENT OF SYPHILES IN THE NINETERATE CENTERY.

By Du. P. Bruny, Paris, France. Touselated from the French, with the author's permission, with notes, by A. H. Onizano-Drummern, Professor of Decemberlogy and Syphilology in the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeon.

No. 15 in the Physicians' and Students' Ready-Reference Series. 220 pages.

Extra Dark-Rine Cloth.

Price, port-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.25, nat; in Secat Britain, 6s. 6d.; in France, 7 fr. 75.

This values, which is one of a series of three (the other two, treating of Syphilis to the Middle Ages and in modern times, now in mittre proporation), given the most complete history of Syphills from prehimoric times up to the Christian Era.

The subject throughout is treated in a clear, concise manner, and readers will find many things which are intercally new.

In order to give some idea of the contents of this first volume, the following are cited to among the subjects treated;

In What does Syphilis Counist? Origin of the Word Syphilis. The Age of Syphilis. Syphilis in Poshistoric Times. February.—Syphilis Among the Chinese 2000 Years Ago. Kess.—Syphilis in Japan in the Ninih Century n.c. Syphilis Among the Auctions Expellin Among the Hebrews is Bildfool Times. Epidemia and Babylouines. Syphilis Among the Hebrews is Bildfool Times. Epidemia - Syphilis Among the Hebrews is Bildfool Times. Epidemia - Syphilis Among the Hendron, 1960 p.c. Swien. Syphilis Among the Greeks-Ficus. Syphilis at Rosse strifer the Constru. Conclusion: Rational Toyatment of Syphile in the Nineteenth Century.

CAPP

The Daughter: Her Health, Education, and

HOMELY SUGGESTIONS TO MOTHERS AND DADMITERS.

By Wilkelian M. Carr, M.D., Philidelphia. This is just such a book as a family photome would advise his indy patients to obtain and read. It assesses many questions which every busy practitions of medicine has just to him in the sick-room at a time when it is neither expedient now when it is neither expedient new tries to impart the information sought.

If is complete in one heautifully printed (large, door type) likes volume of 150 pages.

Handsonely bound in Entre Cloth, price, port-puld, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, not; Great Britain, Er. 6d.; France, 6 fr. 20.

in Paper Cover (Unabridged), 50 cts., net.

In the 144 pages allotted to him by has som-present an animar of humbly wiedom on the physical, meetal, and menti derestopment of the formal rided from three to manufact white is to be found charafters in only the great look of experience. It is, of course, a look for motions, but is not as void of effects in ex-presented in ideas that it can indep be focus-mented for all whose much are sufficiently developed to impreciate its teachings.—Phili-driphia Public Leaper.

Many delicate subjects are treated with still and in a manuser which cannot emice any one as improper or hold. The absolute into cases in which tuned young gifts are alternate restet, even used about life, is offers productive of much baleer, both mental and physical, Quile a number of books written by phys-micigus for popular use hore been prepared in each a way that the professional man can read between the time strong tode for popular favor, etc. These obsertionable features will not be found to be they have been and for this reason it is worthy the confidence of physicians.—Besterd New

CATHELL

Book on the Physician Himself

AND THIS OR THAT CONCERNS HIS REPUTATION AND SUCCESS. A NEW (Tanta) Epition, Author's Last Revision:

By D. W. Cattena, M.D., Baltimore, Md. This is the author's final revision of one of the most metfal, encounty, and popular medical books ever qualitated. It has been wisely and carefully revised throughout. The well-known charming style of the author is preserved intact, while the practical value of the book is truly enhanced by the addition of much of the author's gathered wisdom non-introduced into any previous edition. The volume has been brought to perfection, as far as human effect can actions, and though enlarged to life Hough Octavo Paons the price has not been increased.

Mandagmaly Bound in Extra Cloth, price, in the United States and Canada, post-paid, $2.00, net; in Great Britain, 11s. 6d.; in Prance, 10 fr. 60.

"The Physician Himself" interested our to much that I netually read it Gerough to one stating. It is brimful of the very local advice position for medical man. I, for one, shall ter to profit by n.—Pyd. Walkers Special, Philosophysic.

It is marked with good company were and opinion with exactled maximum and engage-to-se-fed the guidance of medical men.—The Jornal Stefans Joseph

We advise our numbers to buy it. It will give then found for thought and show them have it and how not by sethers repetation and servers.—The Meshord sign.

We cannot too strongly command it to the Ministry of every young sector. Many a secon is pleasably and young sector. Many a paper which muscal offerwise to feared in-tent by bitter experience. Cambin Medical Research.

Of course, one reason for the count power is that it is written with admirable grace and processes, benefits presenting the ups and awars of a point-into life in much a satisful and perfect may. The book will bely any one who will read it. It tells now how to legic parties; leads you true medical ethics preparity, and, carefully studied, the pages of this book will be of great benefit to the young and old.—Charriette Medical Journal.

This book is evidently the positions of an emposind mind and the fruit of a tipe career, I admire its pare tone and feel the value of its parathral positio. Show I wish I could have seen to the position of any same I four I can't have been a feel to be a feel of any same I four I have I four I f -Fraf. James Newton Mysle Chicago, 20.

"The Physician Misseell" is needed affice to the tyre and the sage, the scephyle said the return. It is a Accordance of the spheroise of whose beams a multipled of one profession which that may be succeed. For J. M. Booker, Doors Concrete of Louisekie.

We have need one of the former, and smaller, editions through very carefultr, and know of no work is suchtral therefore more profusion for persons and possession.—Denore Method Times.

This book well do a mortd of good, a good that will be fire-exceiving and constant, and the fact that it has brached its brath offeres process toward a higher and not higher decking, that "the stavistics of the preference" is a consistent and timety aim. - Chicago Chescal Ereiro.

CLEVENGER

Spinal Concussion.

SURGICALLY CONSIDERS AS A CAUSE OF SHINAL INDUST, AND NEEDS LOGICALLY RESTRICTED TO A CERTAIN STRIPTON GROUP, FOR WHICH IN SCHOOLSTED THE DESIGNATION EXICURES'S DESEASE,

AS ONE FORM OF THE TRAUMATIC NECESSION.

By S. V. CLEVENSER, M.D., Convolting Physician Roose and Alexist-

Hospitals; Late Pathologist County Insare Asylum, Chicago, etc.

Special features consist in a description of modern methods of diagnosis by Electricity, a discussion of the controversy concerning hysteria. and the author's original judiological view that the lesion is one involving the spinal sympathetic nervons system,

Feery Physician and Lawyer should own this work,

In one handsome Royal Octavo Volume of nearly 400 pages, with thirty Wood-Engravings.

> Price, port-paid, in United States and Canada, $2.50, net; in Scoat Britain, 14s.; in France, 15 fr.

This work really does, if we may be per a receives a large shape of attention, and the mained to use a trite and Sackwared expression. Statement of the stateme

COLTMAN

THE CHINESE: Medical, Political, and Social.

By Romear Courseau, Jr., M.D., Surgeon in Charge of the Presbyterian Hospital and Dispensary at Teng Chow Fu; Consulting Physician of the American Southern Baptist Mission Society, etc.

Beautifully printed in large, clear type, illustrated with Fifteen Fine Engravings on Extra Plate Paper, from photographs of persons, places, and officers characteristic of China.

In one Royal Octavo volume of 212 Pages. Handsomely bound in Extra Cloth, with Chinese Side Stamp in gold.

Price, post-paid, in United States and Canada, $1.75, not; in Great Britain, 10s.; in France, 10 fr. 20.

The Chicamin is a mourse of absolute curriculty in the American, and anothing in regard for his relationship to the guelloni produces will prove more than guello attractive to the string; doctor. Such is the case with the work before us. It is different to put if subsolve one has begun to mad it.—Mrequise Wed. Meanly.

Ly. Cultimas has emitted a very possible book, Exemitated with reproductions of photo-scaple taken by historic.—Faster Med. and Sary, Jureau.

After hed to a number of hospitals and dis-presenter, he has bed stople expectantly be ductor the medical aspect of the Chinese. The most prevalent documents on such as affect the almosthate trust and eye irrestles. Hereal roughes are the frequent. Shis discusses are abundant and cyphole is for from infrequent. Exystpedas in race and enterio fewer infrequent

Excipation is necessed embedic forces infrequent. Chickens appears in epotentics and is the bright faithy lated. Leptony, of comments at contemplating lated. Leptony, of comments at contemplating lated. Leptony, of comments are the market for embedient, as is employed by many or it would assume a territor preventience in them, where important are parentialed to go about from Tow William Leptony market on the subject distribution of the subject distribution of the confidence of the subject distribution of the subject distribution of the subject distribution in very interpreting and taking, and insuch information is given in an entertaining manner. The political situation is very intelliging manner. The political situation is very intelliging politic facilities only in the subject of the political field good of the subject of the political field good from the intelliging the subject of the subject of the political field good from the subject of the subje

DAVIS

How to Prevent it and How CONSUMPTION: to Live with it.

ITS NATURE, CAUSES, PREVENTION, AND THE MODE OF LIFE, CLIMATE, EXERCISE, FOOD, AND CLOTHENG NECESSARY FOR ITS CURE.

By N. S. Oaves, Ja., A.M., M.D., Professor of Principles and Practice of Medicine, Chicago Medical College | Physician to Marcy Houltai, Chicago | Member of the American

Mullion Association, et-

This plate, practical irratio theoreticaly discusses the prevention of Communities, Regions the Communication, given timely suggestions conservating the different elevation and the Important part they play in the treatment of this Garner, etc., e

Price, post-paid, in Welted States and Canada, 75 Cents, net; in Creat Britain, ta. : in France, 5 fr.

The questions of heroticy, pertisposition, permettin, and hygienic treatment of con-imagine are supply med accepted final with. The chapters on how in any outly polyectation as appropriate and provided follows. Monitoral Jonatora.

The author is very thorough in his dis-remove of the orbiter, and the practical hints which he gives are of analysmith and take. If the citizen gives in such a manner as to make the manner as to make the manner to the community of t

By the Same Author

Diseases of the Lungs, Heart, and Kidneys.

Dy N. S. Davis, Jr., A.M., M.D.

The Nature, Parketogual Americany, Symptoms, Canna, Diagonnia and Treatment of the eliment of these important organs are compenhenelicity discussed in this conveniently numeral volume. Special and careful attention is given to Tevatoreal, while nothing else is signified. No. 14 in the Physicians' and Scalents' Ready Reference Series. 12mo. 229 pages. Extra Park-Henry Clock.

Price, in United States and Canada, post-paid, $1.25, net; Great Britain, 6s. 6d.; France. 7 fr. 76.

The arthor without house how to put without in purvo, without smalling any they can make a few body of the majors around - St. Land Method Mrs.

It requires close thought, emetally and allessessly applied to write a book or like one is written. A systematic treature on the fits.

eases of the Lange. Heart, and Kidneys, and their re-ordinale existion, and sympathy pre-oveding many of the man points of dependence of one upon the other. This fir. Davis has an except in doing to a tice degree, trading the articles a look worthy of most senses study.—Method Poer Press.

DEMARQUAY

A Practical Investigation of the Clinical On Oxygen. and Therapentic Value of the Gases in Medical and Surgical Practice,

WITH ESPECIAL EXPENSION TO THE VALUE AND AVAILABILITY OF OXIOUS, NUMBER, HYDROGEN, AND NUMBER MONOXIDE.

By J. N. Demangerat, Surgeon to the Membring Rospital, Park, and of the Common of State: Member of the Imperial Society of Surgery, etc., Translated, with nates, additions, and emissions, to Salarun S. Walliam, A.M., M.D., ex-President of the Medical Association of Northern New York; Member of the New York Common Medical Society, etc., Royal Octavo, 256 pages; Electrated with H. Wood-Cube.

Price, port-paid, in United States and Canada, Cloth, $2.00, not; Raif-Bunta, $2.00, met. In Great Britain, Cloth, Mr. 66 ; Half-Benria, 17s. 54. In France, Climb. 13 fr. 40; Half-Burria, 12 fr. 60.

This is a hardonne volume of 200 cages, in large peak, on good pages, and mostly illustrated. Arthough teamerally pleading for the many of experience of the sure of experience of the large, but may of experientations. the author close of experience of the large, but as philosophical manner line much greater our tembers.—The Cumulo Medical Record.

EISENBERG

Bacteriological Diagnosis.

TARDLAR AIDS DUE USE IN PRACTICAL WORK.

By James Engineers, Ph.D., M.D., Vienna. Translated and augmented, with the permission of the author, from the second German Edition, by Nonvan H. Pranca, M.D., Surgeon to the Out-Door Department of Michael Resea Houghts!, Assument to Surgical Clinic, College of Physicians and Surgeon, Change, III.

Nearly 200 pages. In one Royal Octavo volume, handsomely bound in Cloth and in Oil-Cloth (for Isbonstory me).

Price, port-yald, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, net; in Douat Britain, Sc. 66; in France, 9 ft. 35.

This book is a novelty in Bacteristopical Science. It is a work of great importance to the teacher as well as to the student. It will be of inestimable value to the private worker, and is designed throughout as a practical guide in laboratory work. It is arranged in a tabular form, in which are given the specific characteristics of the various well combinised bacteria, so that the worker may, at a glance, inform humself as to the identity of a given argument.

There is also an appendix, in which is given, in a coverise and practical form, the technique susplayed by the best laboratories in the cultivation and staining of hacteria; the composition and preparation of the various said, semi-solid, and fluid media, together with their employment; a complete flut of stains and regents, with formula for saise; the methods of microscopic cramination of lasteria, etc., etc., etc., etc.

EDINGER

Twelve Lectures on the Structure of the Central Nervous System.

FOR PHYSICIANS AND STUDENTS.

By Du. Lenwis Retworn, Frankfort-on-the-Main. Second Revised Edules. With 153 Illustrations. Translated by Wellis Hara Veryum, M.D., St. Paul, Mirrs. Edited by C. Erouwe Rioux, A.M., M.D., Professor of Mental and Norrous Diseases, University of Minnesons; Hember of the American Neurological Association.

The illustrations are exactly the same as those used in the latest German edition (with the German names translated into English), and are very satisfic-tory to the Physician and Student using the book.

The work is complete in one Royal Octavo Volume of about 200 pages, found in Exem Cloth.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.70, not; in Great Britain, 30s.; in France, 22 ft. 20.

One of the most indirection and valuable works on the monte anatomy of the immers have been extended. It is estimated, and in clear indirection, the form of becomes, tree tends disminsted, and in clear inspenges. The Purple Meteorial of Mechanical and Mechanica

Since the first works are analous, up to the post of the present has applicated as the saiject of the present and unitate assume of the control netwer system as complete and exlicative as the wirt of the Louisey Edinger, then kinned as requiral morket, and leaving the tended of sich matter as Milling, Wolgot, Coolinch, Magnest, and miners, he has sercected in transforming the mare widersess of neuro-fibres and cells into a dispict of well-marked pultwaps and continue, and is so deter his bands a pleasure text of as analytic and large-en-The Southern Medical Kennet.

Nevery position in clearly desert upon to the text, and others descriptions using night lower a stall pert absence of circum discourse dispersions and dispersions are introduced to render tale one-passes of the arthur's meaning impossible. The book is removed by protected. In undervice the intrinsic emanagements protected. In undervice the intrinsic emanging protected. In this result is interested in a way that too others have been a replicated by a so conclude, —Northwestern Lancer.

GOODELL

LESSONS IN GYNECOLOGY.

By Withham Goodera, A.M., M.D., etc., Professor of Clinical Gypecology in the University of Pennsylvania.

This exceedingly valuable work, from one of the most eminent spicialists and touchers in gynerology, embraces all the more important. diseases and the principal operations in the field of gynecology, and lirings to bear upon them all the extensive practical experience and wide reading of the author. It is an indispensable guide to every precitioner who has to do with the diseases peculiar to women. Turns Exercox. Tissewegisly revised and greatly enlarged. With 112 Illustrations. Hoyal octavo, 578 pages.

Price, in United States and Camela, Cloth, $5.00; Full Sheep, $6.00. Discount, 50 per cont., making it, not, Cloth, $4.00; Shory, $4.50. Fortage, $7 cents sztra. Great Britain, Cloth, $2s. 6d. ; Theop. 25s., post-paid. France, 30 fr. 80.

It is the good a book to have seen allowed to remain out of great, and of the unquestioned of their school. The author has revised the work with special ears, althor has revised the work task marser as the progress in the act reschered section, and he has enterpoint to be two-tactors, and he has enterpoint to be two-tamed at two insects.—After, Jour. of Obstet.

Extended meeting of the contents of the important discount front in the functions of taken up and discount in a communication of a way. We wish every physician in America condition and and correct and the tagger time of the chapter on "the account administration of the chapter on the parameter of the chapter one and kentled case." The sparament treating of nervous countries of alreas of teachers. in a most valuable one. "A music City Mexical

GUERNSEY

Plain Talks on Avoided Subjects.

By HENRY N. Guerroser, M.D., formerly Professor of Materia Medica. and Institutes in the Hahnemann Medical College of Philadelphia; anthor of Guernsey's "Obstetrics," including the Disorders Peculiar to Women and Young Children; Lectures on Materia Medica, etc. The following Table of Contents shows the scope of the book

Coverns Caspter I. Introductory. II. The Infant. III. Child-IV. Adolescence of the Male. V. Adolescence of the Female. tood. IV. Adolescence of the Male. V. Adolescence of the Female. VI. Marriage: The Husband. VII. The Wife, VIII. Husband and Wife, IX. To the Unfortunate. X. Origin of the Sexus. In one next 16mo volume, bound in Extra Cloth.

Legither, which much starts

Price, post-paid, in the Dained States and Canada, $1.00; Great Britain, 6s.; France, 5 fr. 20.

KEATING

Record-Book of Medical Examinations

FOR LOW INSTRUME.

Designed by John M. KEATING, M.D.

This record-book is small compact, complete, and embraces all the principal points that are required by the different companies. It is made is two sizes, viz.: No. I, covering one hundred (100) examinations, and No. 2, covering two hundred (200) examinations. The size of the book is 7 K $7 inches, and can be conveniently carried in the pocket.

No. 1. For 100 Examinations, in Card.	-	- $ .50, set	See St.	3 to 60
No. 2. For 200 Examinations, in Full Leather, with Side Flat.		- 1.00, -	61.	6 (1. 10

HARE

Epilepsy: Its Pathology and Treatment.

BRING AN ESSAY TO WHICH WAS AWARDED A PRIZE OF FOUR TROUSAND FRANCE BY THE ACADOMIC ROPALE DE MEDICINE DE BELGIQUE, DECEMBER 31, 1889.

By Bonner Assess Hand, M.D., B.Sc., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Jederson Medical College, Paris: ; Pornicisa to Sc. Agene Hospital and to the Uni-cess's Dispensing of the Children's Hospital ; Laurente or the Rayal Academy of Medicine to Brigham, of the Motion Swinty of London, etc.; Member of the Sentetation of American

No. 7 to the Physicson' and Students' Ready-Rytomes Servic. (Smc. 229 payer.) Nearly bound in Dark-Rine Class.

Price, post-paid, in United States and Canada, $1.25, not; Great Britain, 6s. 6d.; France, J fr. 75.

The task of proposing the work most force been more interstone, but no clock that for Harry will be replace for his effects to a wide approximation of the work to the profession; for the book will be instructive to those who have not bend abreast with the sevent items ners upon this subject. Indeed, the work is a west of decimnary of epigepton inference guida-rook upon the artners. Abreast and New clogest.

It is representative of the most advanced stion of the profession, and the subject is present of the riad association of superistrium and associate that generally obtains in connection with episeps. Abeliest Age.

Every physicism who would get at the pay of all that is worth knowing in epileps; and who would avoid union countries strong the material thomas of materials percent all material thomas of the countries of meters themes, should get this work. The Amazartas.

By the Same Author

Fever: Its Pathology and Treatment.

BEING THE BOTTSTON PRIZE ESSAY OF HARVARD UNIVERSETY FOR 1800. CONTAINING DIRECTIONS AND THE LATEST INCOMINTOS CON-> CERNING THE USE OF THE SO-CALLED ANTI-PERSONS IN FRUER AND PAIN.

By Bonany Amoust Harm, M.D., S.Se., else, etc., No. 2 in the Physicians' and Students' Route, Replacement Street, Rently Route, Series, Nature, Newty bound in Durk-Bine Cloth.

Handrated with more than W new pigles of tracings of various flows rame, showing isomethely and accurately the action of the Autigratics. The work also contains 25 case (say propared stational tables of 347 cases showing the untoward offsets of the antipy with:

Price, post-puid, in the United States and Canada, $1.25, not; in Break Britain, Co. Cd. : France, T fr. 75.

The author has done in able provid work in shorten the fact at they are haven the received the section of antipyrine haven the received the section of antipyrine action. The Physics of Challeng and States Room, Inches phresenting, the States and States

IVINS

Diseases of the Nose and Throat.

A TEXT-BOOK FOR STUDENTS AND PRACTITIONERS.

to Homes F. Irries, M.D., Lecturer in Larrageless and Ottogy in the Habermann Midded College of Pathologists, Larragedogical Editor of "The Assertal of Ophthalmology, Ottology, and Larragedogy", Member of the American Institute of Homospathy, of the Homes-quelos Medical Society of the State of Pressolvenia, etc. Royal Octavia, 201 Pages. Wree 139 Industriation, Company Opinius, Societ-ing Eighters (18) colored figures from Drawings and Photographs of Anatomical Dissections, etc.

Price, in United States, Extra Coth, $1.00, net; Half-Bunris, $5.00, net. Canada (faty pold), Sieth. $4.60, net : Half-Samia, $3.50, net. Scent Britain, Cloth, 22c. 6d.; Thesp or Half-Russia, 23c. France, Cloth, 24 fr. 60; Half-Bustle, 30 fr. 30.

HUIDEKOPER

Age of the Domestic Animals.

BRING & COMPLETE TREATISE ON THE DESTITION OF THE HORSE, OX, SHEEF, HOO, AND DOG, AND ON THE VARIOUS OTHER MEANS OF DETERMINING THE AGE OF THESE ANIMALS.

By Stree Surrecy Homescown, M.D., Veterinarias (Alfort, France); Professor of Santary Medician and Veterinary Jurispendence, American Veterinary College, New York; Law Dum of the Veterinary Department, University of Permericania.

Repail Sceners, 225 pages, formal for Rutts Cloth. Electronical with 200 Engenvings.

Price, port-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.75, not; in Great. Britisin, 15s.; in France, 12 fr. 30.

This work presents a cureful study of all that has been written on the subject from the surfact Ballon writers. The nather has drawn much valuable material from the attent English, French, and German writers, and has given his own deductions and opinions, whether they agree or disagree with the's investigations as Bracy Clark, Standade (in English), Girard, Chanveau, Leph, Le Coque, Goubeau, and Barrier (in German and French)

The literary execution of the book is very satisfactory, the text is pretainly discriminal, and the relatively and the relatively and the relatively and the discrete relatively appears to the seal for furnishments by the includes subset during the deferrent sugar of the functions do not always stantage; there is,—discr. Fel. Kentee.

Although welles primarily for the veterimixin, this book will be of interest to the destine, physiologist materials, and physician. The smalls of illustration and careful proporation are alife commendable, "Change Mod-Fermoles."

It is profusely identified with 100 engralings, and the next forms a ready well mores the gains of the book to every dealing practitioner, —thus Journal of Dealed Sections.

International System of Electro-Therapeutics.

FOR STUDENTS, GENERAL PRACTITIONERS, AND SPECIALISTS.

Chief Editor, Housewis R. Raumow, M.D., Permanent Member of the American Medical Association; Fellow of the British Openeological Society; Fellow of the American Electra Therapeatic time-lation; Member of the Philadelphia Obstetrical Society; Member of the Society (Member of the Society of Therapeatics) and Batteries," etc. Assisted by aperaid of Thirty Emission Specialisms in Europe and America as Associate Editors.

The character of this work is such that the publishers confidently expect it will stand carbuilted, and he the each masses of the profession, as well as the standard text book in all the colleges upon this important branch of swelling science.

It will be handsomely and clearly printed, thereughly disstrated with engravings, salend drawings, and plates where these will sincidate the test, and at the clear of the release will be a full pricence index.

COMPLETE IN ONE HOTAL OCTAVO TOUTHER OF ABOUT 900 PARCE.

Price, in United States, Errer Cieth, $5.50, not; Shoop, $6.50, not; Hald-Brania, $7.00, not. In Canada (Suty paid), Cieth, $6.00, not; Shoop, $7.50, not; Half-Brania, $7.70, not. In Great Britain, Cloth, 35s; Shoop, 27s, 5d.; Half-Brania, 60s. In France, Cieth, 34 ft. 70.; Shoop, 40 ft. 45; Half-Brania, 43 ft. 30.

With an Personance in October, 1805.

Journal of Laryngology, Rhinology, and Otology.

AN ANALYPOISE RECORD OF CURRENT LITERATURE RELATING TO THE THESAT, NOR, AND EAR. ISSUED ON THE PRINT OF EACH MONTH.

Ritted by Da. Nouses Workersman, of London, and Da. Josey Mariavene, it Gragow, with the active aid and co-operation of Dm. Dundas Grant, Barrier J. Barrie, and Hauter Markonnie. Benifes those specialism in Europe and America who here made assemed in the collaboration of the Journal, a number of new correspondents have undertaken to amout the editors in keeping the Journal up to date, and harmoning it with matters of interest.

Price, 13s. or $3.00 per annum, Dirictly in Advance. Single copies, in 3d. (30 Cents). Sample Copy, 25 Cents.

KEATING and EDWARDS

Diseases of the Heart and Circulation

IN INPANCE AND ADDRESSESSES. WITH AN APPENDIX ENTITLED "CLINICAL STUDIES ON THE PULSE IN CHIEDROOP,"

By Josep M. Knarrau, M.D., Obsieteleina to the Posindelphia Bouptal, and Lectures on Discuss of Women and Children: Surgeon to the Malernity Hospital; Physician to St. Ameph's Hospital; Fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia, str.; and Witzgan & Epwarte, M.D., Instructor in Chical Medicine and Physician in the Hall-teal Dispensicy in the University of Principlesia, Velice of the College of Physician Sensely Assistant Pathologist to the Philadelphia Hospital, etc. Blustrated by Photographs and Wood-Engravings. About 335 pages. Option.

Sound by Cloth.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.50, not; in Scent Britain, Sa. Sd. : in France, 9 fr. 35.

Dec Keering and Edwards have produced a work that will give material and to every dector in the specific emong children. The strict of the took is graphic and planning the congruence points are explicit and exact, and the Hampeotican tenuries include the never that of methods in well as the old and tried agents.—Pitchingh Med Kreum.

Dispos a pure complision, but a restension treatise, and bears evidence of comistration labor and observation on the part of the authors. Two face photographs of dissections subhist satural elements and united regregate-tion; there are also a number of wood-cuts. "Cheprised Medical disastic.

LIEBIG and ROHE

Practical Electricity in Medicine & Surgery.

By G. A. Leruso, Jr., Pu.D., Assistant in Theoreticity, Johns Hopkins University; Lecturer on Medical Electricity, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore; Member of the American Santtone of Electrical Engineers, etc.; and Guennar M. Renn, M.D., Pro-Source of Outstrive and Hygiene, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore; Victing Physician and Surgeons, Baltimore; Victing Physician to Ser Vice and City Houghtain; Extrema of the Maryland Materials; Associate Editor "Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences," etc., Producety (Suctrated by Wood-Engravings and Original Diagrams, and published in one Eogal Octave volume of 385 pages, bound in Extra Cloth.

Price, port-puid in the United States and Canada, $2.00, not; in Great Britain, Ha. 6d.; in Prance, 12 fr. 40.

Any physicists, especially if he he a beginness in electric-therapoption, will be suff to paid for a careful study of this each by Liesing and Books. For a basel on a passel subject the princ is loss, and as use one give a good excase for frequenting in ignorance of no important a subject as electricity in modificate. Edited McLenal and Stopping Reporter.

The opine work is theroughly schooling and grantical, and is really what the authors have almed to produce. "a trustwoothy guide in the application of electricity in the practice of productor and surgery,"-New York Medical

In the permist, with each encounting purp, we find been more and more impressed with the fact that been at last, we have a tractice on electrosis in medicate and recopy which empty fulfills to purpose, and which is sure of general adoption by twister of the thorough considered and supercently to other south in-sended to your time same field. Plants some

MASSEY

Electricity in the Diseases of Women.

WITH SPECIAL REPRESENTS TO THE APPLICATION OF STRONG CURRENTS.

By G. BETTON MASSET, M.D., Physician to the Gymrological Department of the Howard Haspital ; late Electro-theosymulat to the Philadelphia Orthopartic Hospital and Jeffermany for Nervous Diseases, etc. Success Energy. Revised and Enlarged. With New and Original Wood Engravings. Handsomely bound in Burk-Rose Citch. 340 pages. 12mo. No 5 in the Physicians' and Students'

Mondy-Reference Series.

This work is presented to the profession as the most complete treatine yet issued on the electrical treatment of the diseases of women, and is destined to fil the increasing depend for clear and practical instruction in the handling and use of stong currents after the recent methods first advocated by Apostoli. The whale subject is treated from the present stand point of electric science out one and original illustrations, the thorough studies of the unifor and his wide clinical experience rendering him an authority inno electricity itself and its theraperatic applications. The author has enhanced the practical value of the work by including the court details of treatment and results in a master of cases taken from his private and hospital practice.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, not; in Great Britain, Sa. Ed.; in France, 9 fr. 35.

A new edition of this practical moment at the tractic the unitary of its entrance and the rarogamion of the maste. The decertions are simple, say to follow and to vary into practice; the ground is well obviously, and markly is meaned, the surface took being the recent of any steam of January 1 or Newman and Mental Discours.

It is only a few months since we noticed that fast edition of this little book; and it is only accounty to add now that we canneder it the best treatise on this rejeject we have seen, and that the improvements introduced into this edition make it more relatible mixt.—Notice Sychical and New yould Journ.

The style is stead but condensed, thateas details are smilled the reports of cases being pruned of all terelevant instarts. The book is an exceedingly valuable one, and represents in ansonal at study and experience which is only appreciated after a careful reading—Reduct Decree.

Physicians' Interpreter.

IN FORM LANGUAGES (ENGLISH, PRESCH, GRESLAY, AND ITALIAN). SPECIALLY ARRANGED FOR DIAGNOSIS BY M. VOS V.

The object of this little work is to meet a need often keenly felt by the been physician, manely, the need of some quick and reliable method of communicating intelligitly with potients of those actionalities and languages unfamiliar to the practitioner. The plan of the book is a systematic nyrangement of questions agen, the various transless of Practical Medicine, and each question is so worded that the only answer required of the patient is usually Yes or No. The questions are all stantered, and a complete Index renders them always available for quick reference. The book is written by one who is well versed in Engine, French, German, and Italian, being an excellent teacher in all those languages, and who has also had considerable hospital experience. Sound in languages, and who has also had considerable hospital experience. Full Russia Leather, for carrying in the pocket. Size, 5 x 23 inches. 206 pages.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, net; in Great Britale, 6n.; in France, 6 fr. 20.

Many other backs of the same cert, with more expensive vanishabete, here here published, but, from their size, and from their ledge tending developing committee in English and contracting which is per embers to the had the advances or birth by per embersion to the many manual tenders, it is handward; printed, and because in the above in the first and in the above in the first one's highworks, and would income its beater against any ardinary conventations.

difficulty in dealing with foreign speaking people. Who are constantly coming into our city impitate.—New York Medical Januari.

This little sodance it one of the most ingra-nious age to the physicism which we have seen. We heartly comments the book to my one who heavy without a knowledge of the foreign languages, is abliged to bright those who do not know any wes longuages—dif. Long Courter of Madeina.

The Medical Bulletin Visiting-List or Physicians' Call Record.

AREANOND UPON AN ORDHUNAL AND CONVENIENT MOSTRLY AND WEEKLY PLAN FOR THE DATEN RECORDING OF PROPERSIONAL VISITS.

Frequent Rewriting of Names Unnecessary.

THIS Visiting List is accuraged so that the names of patients used be written but over a month instead of your times a month, as in the old-style into. By means of a new feature, a simple device consisting of even on make LEAVES IN THE FORCE OF INSERTS, the first week's visits are recorded in the assail way, and the second week's visits are begue by simply carning over the half-leaf without the necessity of rewriting the patients' names. This very easily under-stood process is repeated until the mouth in ended and the record has been kept complete in every detail of vierr, chance, excert, etc., and the labor and time of entering and transferring master at least purple Cases in the mouth has been saved. There are no intricate rulings; not the least amount of time can be last in comprehending the plan, for it is soquired at a glance.

THE THREE DIFFERENT STYLES MADE.

The No. 1 Style of this Lot provides space for the name record of seventy different manner each month for a year; for physicians who prefer a List that will accommodate a larger practice we have made a No. 2 Style, which provides space for the daily account of 100 different manner each mouth for a year, and for physicians who may perfer a Pocket Record-Book of less thickness than either of these styles we have made a No. 3 Style, in which "The Blanks for the Recording of Visits in" have been made into removable sections. These sections are very thin, and are made up so as to seawer in full the demand of the largest practice, each section providing ample space for the DAILY amount or 210 per-FERENT NAMES for two mouths ; or $40 different names daily each mouth for four months; or arrestly different names daily each mouth for six months. of these sections go with each copy of No. 3 STELE.

SPECIAL FEATURES NOT FOUND IN ANY OTHER LIST.

In this No. I Styres the Printers SATTER, and such matter as the SLASE FORMS for Abdressess or PATICETS. Obstetile Record. Vaccination Record, flush American Birth and Death Records, etc., are fastened permanently in the back of the book. The addition of a removable section does not increase the fluidness reces than an eighth of an inch. This brings the book into such a small compass that no one can object to 8 on account of its thickness, as its being a year areas takes than that of any visiting let ever polyhebod. Every physician will at once understand that as seen as a section is full it can be taken out, filed away, and another inserted without the least inconvenience or trouble. Extra or additional indicate will be farmined as one films for 12 south each or $1.75 per deces. This Visiting List contains calculate, valuable miscellaneous data, important tables, and other useful printed matter usually placed in Physicians' Visiting-Lists.

Physicians of many years' standing and with here practices propounce it. In this No. I STREE the PRINTED SATTER, and such names as the Physicians of many years' standing and with large practices pronounce it was flow Law years nave even sans. It is handsomely bound in fine, strong leather, with flop, including a pecket for loose memorands, etc., and is fernished with a Dixon lead peacil of excellent quality and finish. It is compact and conrement for carrying in the pocket. Size, 4 x 64 lacket.

IN THREE STYLES	-
No. 1. Regular tast, to assume about to patients dody sick much for one year,	. 01.00
No. 8. Intermed to accommodate on patients daily such month for one year,	81.80
No. 2. In which the " Blacks for Electricity Visits in " are re-removable sections,	. $1.74
Special Edition for Great Boston, without printed powers	. 44. 64.

MICHENER

Hand-Book of Eclampsia; OF PURRERAL CONVELSIONS.

N. R. Microscop, M.D., J. H. Stream, M.D.; R. S. Ewiso, M.D.; R. Tauscroox, M.D.; S. Streams, M.D. 16mo, Cloth, Frice, 60 cents, met; in Ocean Britain, 4s. 6d.; in Prance, 4 fr. 20.

NISSEN

A MANUAL OF INSTRUCTION FOR CIVING

Swedish Movement # Massage Treatment

By Proce. Blantype Nicola, into Director of the Seconds Blench Institute, Washington, B.C.; late instructor in Physical Culture and Gyamanian at the Johan Hapkins, University, Bartancoc, Sci., Instructor of Seconds and German Gyamanian at Barrieri Dairecty's Samuel Sci., 50., 40., 40.

This modifies little recision breats this very important subject in a practical assert.

Full seconds are given regarding the mode of applying the Swedish Morroscott and Control of Taxonian Instruction of Control of the Swedish Morroscott and Control of Taxonian Instruction in Control of Control Manage Treatment to various diseases and conditions of the house system with the greatest degree of effectivement. This took is indiquentable to every physician who wishes to have how to bee these valuable highligable of medicine.

Blacksted with 29 Original Wood-Engravings. In case these retenue of 128 Pages.

Newly bound in Cloth-

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1,00, not : in Great Britain, Sr. ; in France, 6 fr. 20.

The present rolume is a modest arcount of the application of the broaded Edvision is and stancing Treatment, in whom the benkinger of the various procedures are clearly that of an off to Contrased to a very profilest manner.

This unions is satisfied to the practices of a subject but for fittle and emission in the continue. If a subject but for fittle and emission is the continue. The issue is get up very creditable ... N. N. Net Jacons.

SAJO US

HAY FEVER And its Successful Treatment by Superficial Mocous Membrane.

By CRARLES E. SAFOTO, M.D., Stresselly Lectures on Ethiodoxy and Larywaysleep in Jefferson Medical College; Carlof Edition of the Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences, the With III Engravings on Wood. 183 pages. Thus. Itemed in Clotte, Berneld Edges.

Price, past-paid, in the Delted States and Canada, $1.00, not; in Great Britain, St. : In Prance, 6 fr. 20.

STRAUB

Symptom Register and Case Record.

Designed by D. W. Straub, H.D.

throng in plain view, on one onle of the about To x 10; lather, the Clinical Record of the sick, Including Date, Name, Rould-mor, Bornpatien, Symptoms. Impertion (Amendation and Percussion), Blittery, Respension, Pulse, Tomperames, Diagonsia, Pergerora, Tourment (special and greens); and Remarks, allcontoniently amorped and with surfo room for reporting, or each call, for fordifferent calls, each item named above, the whole forming a clinical history of individual cases of great value to every Practitioner.

Published in still Board Tableto of 50 sheets each, at 50 cts, not per tablet, and in Dook-form, flexible binding, with Alphabetical Marginal Index, at 75 pts., not.

C21

Physician's All-Requisite Time- and Labor-Saving Account-Book.

BRISH A LABORE AND ACCREWS BOOK FOR PHYSICIANS! USE, MEETING ALL THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE LAW AND COURTS.

Designed by WILLIAM A. SEIBERT, M.D., of Huston, Pa.

Portably no class of people lose some money through carelessly kept accounts and everlooked or neglected bills than physicians. Often detained at the bedride of the sick until late at night, or deprived of even a modicum of neet, it is with great difficulty that he spares the time or puts filmself in condition to give the same care to his own financial interests that a murchant, a lawyer, or even a farmer steroom. It is then plainly apparent that a system of bookkeeping and accomis that, without surritizing accuracy, but, on the other hand, ensuring it, at the same time policies the keeping of a physicism's bunk of half their complexity and two-thirds the labor, is a convenience which will be eagerly welcomed by sheamants of overworked physicians. Such a system has at last been derived, and we take pleasure in offering it to the profession in the form of The Physician's All-Requisite Times and Labor. Saving Account Book,

There is no exaggeration in stating that this Account-Rook and Ledger reduces the labor of keeping your accounts more then one holf, and at the mine time secures the greatest degree of accuracy. We may mention a few of the especies advantages of The Physician's All Requisite Time-and Labor Saving Account-Book, as follows :-

First-Will meet all the requirements ; of the law and courts. Second-Self-explanatory; no cipher en46.

Thee -In completeness without earnficing negating; Fearth—No posting; can sarry only. AM -Universal; can be commenced at any time of the year, and can be continued indefinitely until every accrem is filled.

Suth-Absolutely no waste of space. Several One person must used be sick every day of the year to fill his account, or might be ten years about it and require no more than the systee for one account in this leager.

Sold - Deable the number and many times more than the number of nocounts in any similar book; the 200 cage book contains space for 900 accounts, and the 900-page book contains space for 1800 ac-COURSE.

Most There are no smaller spaces. Teath—Compart without ascrifeling completeness; every account complete as some page-a decided advantage and recommendation.

Diversib-Uniform site of leaves.

Twelffs-The statement of the most complicated account is at once hefore you at any time of wouth or year-in other words, the account melf as it stands is its simplest statement.

the weeth-No transferring of accounts. tuluaces, etc.

To all physicians desiring a quick, accurate, and comprehensive method of keeping their accounts, we can safely say that no book as sujfishle as this one has ever been devised. A descriptive circular showing the plan of the book will be sent on application.

NET PRICES, SHIPPING EXPENSES PROPAIR.

No. 1. 300 Pages, for 900 Accounts per Tean, Size 12:12, Sound in M. Burnis, Raised Each Bands, Cloth Sides, No. 2. 600 Pages, for 1800 Accounts per Tean,	2to 11. PL $5.00	Cuends painty paints $5.50	theat Detain. 20c.	Preser. 00 fr. 30.
Dies 13rdl, Bound in MRussia, Raised Rack-Bands, Cloth Eldes,	8,00	8.80	12s.	45 fr. 40

PRICE and EAGLETON

Three Charts of the Nervo-Vascular System.

PART L. THE NEEVES. PART II .. THE ABTERIES. PART III - THE VEISE.

A New Edition, Revised and Performed, Arranged by W. Henny Parce, M.D., and S. Ports Eagnerver, M.D. Endorsed by building anatomism, Clearly and benefitfally printed upon extra durable paper.

It is therefore readily sees that "The Nervo-Vascular System of Charts" offers the following superior of vantages :-

1. It is the only arrangement which combines the Three Systems, and yet

8. It is the only instance of the Crarial, Spinal, and Sympathetic Nerrous Systems being represented on one chart.

1. From its most size and clear type, and being printed only upon one side, it may be tacked up in any convenient place, and is always ready for fresh-ning up the memory and reviewing for examination.

Price, part-paid, in United States and Canada, 50 cents, not, complete ; in Great Britain, Jr. 64. ; in France, 3 fr. 60.

For the stations of antionary there gas pen-diar in, no more concine way of acquiring a smoothings of the nervey, friends, and arrived a of the human system. It presents at a glance than founds and beaustors in the great divis-ions of the help. If will save a weekl of sets, one reading, and will superus itself, on the said of the property was recovered, could

The price is nominal and its value inestimable. No arguest should be written it.—Pacific Exceed of Medicine and Surgery.

These are three minutally around chart-for the use of simbouts, to assist in memo-ing their assistanced sedies. - Refute Net and Corp. June.

PURDY

Diabetes: Its Cause, Symptoms # Treatment

By Casa. W. Punny, M.D. (Queen's University). Reservey Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Kingston; Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario; Author of "Bright's Discuss and Allied Affections of the Kidneys;" Measley of the Association of American Physicians; Member of the American Medical Association; Member of the Chings Academy of Sciences, etc.

CONTENTS - Section I. Historical, Geographical and Climatelegical Conaderations of Diabetes Mellins. II. Physiological and Pathological Considera-tions of Diabetes Mellins. III. Endocy of Diabetes Mellins. IV. Montal answerp of Diabetes Mellins. V. Symptomatology of Diabetes Mellins. VI. Treatment of Diabetes Mellins. VII. Chainsi Illustrations of Diabetes Mellins. Prestment of Dubetes Mellings.

VIII. Disheres Insipidus; Eddicymphy.
Plant. Dark Blue Extra Chith. Nearly 200 pages.
No. 8 in the Physiciana' and Students' Ready Reference Series.

Price, pert-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.35, not; in Great Britain, Co. 64.; in France, 7 dr. 75.

This will prope a most contribution to well be meet inferenting treatile upon a discussional practice upon a discussional brognessity fails to the led of every practitioner. The event has been earlies with append where of bringing out the features of the discusse or it occurs in the United Nation. The nation is a very judiciously arranged the rote column, and it will offer many processed attractions to the practitioner, whatever the processed of the processed o

Indeed which have dealt with the united of distance, we know of passes but to the coughly regarders. Its relations to the prographical resultines which said in the United State, was should in now complete in the contact, of the symptomicalous and treatment, of this effection. A member of hidder, showing the parterniagent sugar in A very large condition of the colorie investigate, that very memberably in the rains of the work. Members from

REMONDINO

History of Circumcision.

FROM THE HARDEST TERMS TO THE PARKET. MICHAE AND PRESIDENT REASONS FOR ITS PERSONNANCE; WITH A HISTORY OF EURIGIOSS. HERMAPHROISEN, MIC., AND OF THE DEFFERENT OFERA-THOSE PRACTICES STOR THE PREPOCE,

By P. C. Richosmico, M.D. (Jefferson); Momber of the American Medical Association; of the American Public Health Association; Vice-President of California State Medical Society and of Southern California

Medical Society, etc.

In one pent 19mo volume of 346 pages. Handsonely bound in Extra Back-Blue Cloth, and directrated with two fine woodlengravings, showing the two principal under of Circumcision in socient times. No. 11 in the Physicians' and Students' Bendy Beforence Series,

Price, port-pold, in United States and Canada, $1.25, not; in Great Britain, 6s. 6d.; in France, 7 fr. 76. A Popular Edition (unabridged), bound in Paper Corees, in also issued. Price, 50 Cents, net; in Great Britain, 3s.; in France, 3 fr. 60.

Every physician should read this book; he will there find, in a condensed and or temptized form, what there is known concerning Circumcision. The book deals with simple facts, and it is not a discertation on theories. It deals, in plain, pointed language, with the relation that the prepare bears to physical degeneracy and disease, loses all its utterances on what Ana occurred and on what is known. The author has here gathered from every source the material for his subject, and the definctions are ministakable.

This is a very full and sensitive look. To also reader who wishes to know all about the sensitive who is not those all about the sensitive with the vision per and one of the right of this approximate to east, its advantages, dangers, etc., this is the look.—The Austhore Crime.

The operative chapter self he parties, lade uneful and interesting in physicians, as a contain a cereful and importal review of all the operative procedures, from the most simple to the most eleberate, paying particular expertise to the subject of after decisions. It is a correlative state and instruction work, and should be used rose liberally by the probe-rion.—The Hall Broof.

The hathor's views in regard to circum-tiates, its invession, and its visuals, are well formated and to performance as a people factor memory is well established.—Colombia Red Journal.

By the Same Author

The Mediterranean Shores of America.

SOUTHER CALIFORNIA: Its CRIMATIC, PRESIDAL, AND METROPOLOGICAL COSPETROSS.

By P. C. REDOSSIDOS, M.D. (Jufferson), etc.,

Complete in one handsomely printed Octavo volume of arerly $15 pages, with 45 appropriate allestrations and 2 finely excented mans of the region, showing altitudes, ocean corrents, etc. Bound in Extra Cloth, Price, port-paid, in Writed States and Canada, $1.20, not; in Scoat Britain, On. $6. : In France, 7 ft. 75.

Chosper Edition (unshridged), bound in Paper, post-pald, in Trited States and Canada, 75 Cents, not; in Great Britain, 4s.; in France, 5 fr.

Italy, of the Old World, they not excel mor even approach this region in point of solubrity of climate and all-around hesithfulness of environtient. This book fully describes and discusses this wonderfully examing recentry. The medical profession, who have long desired a trustworthy treatise of true scientific value on this celebrated region, will find in this volume a satisfactory response to this long-fell and oft-expressed wish.

ROHÉ

Text-Book of Hygiene.

A COMPRESSIVE TREATISE OF THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF PREVENTIVE MERCUSE THOSE AN AMERICAN STAND-POINT.

Br Groom H. Rouë, M.D., Professor of Obstatrics and Hygiens in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Hallamore; Member of the American Public Health Association, etc.

Every Sanitarian should have Kohe's "Text-Book of Hygiene" as a work of reference.

Second Edition, thoroughly revised and largely rewritten, with using illustrations and valentie tables. In one handsome Royal Octavo-volume of over 400 pages, bound in Extra Coth.

Price, port-paid, in United States, $2.50, not : Canada (duty paid), $2.75, not : Sreat Britain, 16r. : France, 16 ft. 20.

the preminent feature is that there are no separations, words; every scattere is deport in the point sought. It is, therefore, case pushing and severy more independent more many fraction in lattle space,—The Poople Record of Manyon and Surgery.

It is apprentionably a work that about the in the hands of overy physicism in the country, and moderal electrons will that it's most extend and referable best-book.—The flucture functions.

The first colling was expeller exhausted, and the book passly became in aethority to physimais and meshary officers, and a text-book row presentily adopted to the colleges throughset America. The second edition is a good improvement ever the first, all of the matter leting the coughly revised, march of it temp twellten, and many believes being made. The survey the best is jurished one banders page. The bull has the original revised into at leting a bandersky haven being and provided orders relating generally (fruitzial) with reliable informers for every terms of the subject matter.—Medical Ecoloid

The number is how Processor Robe has made the break or resultable and switzehalding with to take to make mostler movemently emislossed. Altapolics, the masses is a good exposure of bygions and sendary retunes true the person American issued point, and will repay with pleasant and pointed, and real true to prove to its person. American issued point, and will repay with pleasant and pointed to person.

By the Same Author

A Practical Manual of Diseases of the Skin.

By Grouge H. Ronk, M.D., Professor of Materia Medica, Therapenties, and Hygiene, and formerly Professor of Dermatelogy in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, etc., assisted by J. Wurtans Lond, A.B., M.D., Lecturer on Dermatelogy and Businging is the College of Physicians and Surgeons; Assistant Physician to the Sein Department in the Dispensary of Johns Hopkins Hospital.

In one neat 12th o volume of over 200 pages, bound in Extra Dark-Blue Clath. No. 13 in the Physicia at and Students' Ready-Reference Series.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.25, not; in Great Britain, Co. 64 : in France, 7 fr. 75.

The reacrecan character of this work makes it specially desirable for the use of students and general practitioners.

The nearly one humbred (198) reliable and carefully prepared Fornuls at the end of the volume add not a little to its practical value.

All the various forms of skin diseases, from Acue to Zoster (alphabetically speaking), are succincily yet amply treated of, and the arrangement of the book, with its excellent ender and unusually full table of contents, goes to make up a truly satisfactory volume for ready reference in daily practice.

SENN

Principles of Surgery.

By N. Succe, M. D., Pu. D., Pentrance of Position of Surgery and Clusters Surgery in Read State-of College, Chicago, III.; Frubesia of Surgery in the Chicago Polyclasis; M. Irading Surgeon is the Milennikes Southall, Consulting Surgeon to the Milennikes County

Requisit said to the Mitwardow County Insate Asylten.

This work, by one of America's greatest surgious, is thoroughly contributed the significant and bravity of statement are among the complement moving. The author's long, and considerations researches to every direction in this important held are a guirentee, of assembly treatest authorises, that army branch of the relations to treated authoritationly, and to such a manage as to bring the greatest gale in incontribute to the practitioner and student.

In one Royal Octave volume, with 109 time Wood-Regratings and 616 paper.

Price, in Cloth,	Clotted Studen. $4.50, not	S3.00, bol.	Contr Durant 26s. Ed.	27 fr. 30
" Theep or j-Burela,	E.50 *	6.10 -	30x.	33 fr. 33

STRIBEN SERVE, M.D., Professor of Cinmal Surgery Medical Department University of the Cily of New Lott, writer: "These has large been goest need of a wish on the jets signs of surgery which would fairy Charlest the present advanced state of horseless of the virtues subpose emirated in this tolame. The west seems to use to meet this want hemistory."

PRANK J. LOTE, M. D., St. Louis, Mo., input-"Si necessi incredible ideal there where previous in ignet have, done subtract costs in guide before, and J. do not guiderstand how our simdent correcceded in mantering the principles of modern surpery by attempting to read our observed by M.-Morek, American surpery should be proud of the production, and the prevent generation of surgence was post 2 debt of guarante.

The work intentionally and rempart, without a fact contitod or a sentency too much, and it not only union instructive but fractating reading. A comparison must of form a sect is his method, he presented and directs much diversight original investigations for additions to homology, and the positival climatics of the discoverying. The flucture of francing and formal Francisco.

After permaing this work on several different occusions, we have come to the constitute that it is a resolution work, by a man of primaril shelity — The Chemida Medical Greens.

The work is exceedingly present, as the chapters or the treatment of the version constitute of the version constitute of the version considered are based on course design through an complete, and under carried out to may parentshing surpress—Redner Boomd.

The first theregions is mornly of the highest posite. It should be adopted as a best bank in all of our schools of viscosity best bank in the contraction of the con-

By the Same Author

Tuberculosis of the Bones and Joints.

Dr N. Stean, M.D., Postly.

Ministrated with appearin of One Hundred (100) Engravings and Plates, many of them related. Reyal Octava. Gree 200 pages.

	United States.	Canada (deep poid)	Grant Sevenie.	Tower.
Price, Extra Cloth,	$1.00, not	$4.40, met	22: 51	24 25, 60
" Cheep or 4-Attenta,	5.00 "	0.50 "	20c.	30 ± 30

To got an idea of the teops of the west read the following white of chapters; Blobers Provide which Strained the Taberralus Nature of the Sociality Sciences Darses of Emised Merches Revision Telegranus. Histology of Telegranus. Bergman of Taberralus. Committoe. Telegranus. Telegranus. Biology of Telegranus of Taberralus. Superiors and Diagnosis of Taberralus. Bone Telegranus. Symptoms and Diagnosis of Taberralus. Bone Affection. Proposite of Telegranus of Bone. Telegranus of Diagnosis of Telegranus. Emission of Bone. Telegranus of Justic Special Position in the Pathology of Symptom Telegranus. Emission in Telegranus and Diagnosis. Read Telegranus. Telegranus and Telegranus. Telegranus Telegranus. Telegranus of Telegranus. Telegranus of Telegranus. Telegranus of Telegranus. Appendix and Telegranus. Committee and International Resource Resolite of Resource. Appendix and Symptol Resource. International Symptom. Telegranus of Special Bone. Telegranus of the Bones of the Tent. Telegranus of Patric Resources of Special Resources. Telegranus of Application of Application and Applications of Application and Applications of Applications and Applications of Applications.

All these subjects are handled in the multiple trapple, doesn't and viverence state, and always with the justicitud side of the question, kept in turns, and heave modified decommy or described pattern had. We know all he book of equal featuring their approximaand utility upon the common and important cities of come companied under Tubercumes of House and Jones. The Electronics are temperate and good, and the privileg and other details of looking a book howe here attended to with an enterprise and emission creditable to the publishers.—Circulated Medical College.

SHOEMAKER

Materia Medica and Therapeutics.

WITH ESPECIAL REPERENCE TO THE CLISHEAL APPRICATION OF DECOR.

By John V. Shinnanen, A.M., M.D., Professor of Materia Medica, Piarmacology, Therapeuties, and Clinical Medicine, and Clinical Prosomer of Diseases of the Sain in the Medico-Chirurginal College of Philadelphin; Physician to the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital; Member of the American Medical Association, of the Pennsylvania and Minnesota State Medical Societies, the American Academy of Medicine, the British Medyat Association; Fellow of the Medical Society of London, etc.

Second Edition. Thoroughly revised. In two volumes. Royal Nearly 1110 pages. UKBAYA

Volume I in devoted to pharmany, general pharmacology, and therapealies, and remedial agents not properly chased with drugs. .

Volume II is wholly taken up with the consideration of drugs, each remely being studied from three points of view, viz. : the Preparations, or Materia Medica; the Physiology and Toxicology, or Planmacology; and lastly, its Therapy. Each volume is thoroughly and carefully indexed with clinical and general indexes, and the second volume contains a most valuable and exhaustive table of doses extending over several doublesolumn octavo pages,

THE VOLUMES MAY BE PUTCHASED SEPARATELY,

$2.75, net 3.60 "	25s. 10s.	20 fr. 20
$4.00, pet	29s.	Proces, 20 ft. 50 28 ft. 60
	Circula (cory paid)	Cienals (cory paid) Great Broom. $6.00, net 196.

The well-known practical usefulness of this enmently standard work is now greatly increased by the very recent and accurate information it grees, from a clinical stand-point, concerning the new and useful drugs introduced to the medical profession since the issue of the first edition, two years ago; so that it is thoroughly abreast of the progress of thempettic science, and hence really indispensable to every student and practitioner.

REVIEWS OF THE FIRST EDITION.

The value of the book like in the fact that It were of the book like in the fact that it was a setting about the last of nor versolves which have defined to it the last of nor versolves which have defined to it the last fire year. The Paper are precededly free flow their said belowing the last the paper devoted to the special supplied to the paper devoted to the special sense of the paper devoted to the special sense for the paper devoted to the special sense of the paper devoted to the special sense of the paper devoted to the special sense of the paper devoted to t in community surprised at the amount of maderial compresses a solution solution to the The locals will prove valuable solution to the physician's library. Georgicals Mad. Prime. To be a meritance over, with many respec-features. It is yieldy (Berrisaded by sectional percentages of the province in processes applica-tion of the various forces decreased. In these this work makes a profit resuptate surpris-position of the schools of the recovering reason abovely summinged for handy reference.—Med. World

SHOEMAKER

Heredity, Health, and Personal Beauty.

INCLUDING THE SELECTION OF THE BEST COMMETICS FOR THE SKIN, HAIR, NAMES, AND ALE PARTS RELATING TO THE BODY.

By Jone V. Sercchard, A.M., M.D., Professor of Materia Medica, Pharmacology, Therapeutics, and Chinical Medicine, and Clinical Professor of Diseases of the Skin is the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; Physician to the Molico-Chirargical Hampital, vis., etc.

The health of the skin and hair, and how to promote them, are discussed, the trumment of the naile, the arbjerts of ventilation, foot, clothing, warmth, bathing; the circulation of the blood, digestion, rentilation, in fact, all that in daily life conduces to the well-being of the body and refinement is daily enlarged. upon. To these stores of popular information is added a list of the best medicated sespe and tollet scope, and a whole chapter of the work is devoted to household consider. The work is largely suggestive, and gives who and timely advice as to when a physician should be consulted. This is just the book to place on the writing-room tolly of every physician, and a sort that aill prove aufal in the hands of your patients.

Complete in one Annisome Royal Ornaro volume of 420 pages, beautifully and clearly printed, and bound in Extra Cloth, Bevelol Edges, with side and back gilt stamps and in Half-Morocco Gilt Tep.

Price, in United States, post-paid, Cloth, a2.50; Half-Morocco, $3.50. not. Canada (duty paid), Cloth, $2.75; Half-Morocon, $3.90, not. Great Britain, Cloth, 16n ; Malf-Morecon, 15n 6d France, Cloth, 15 fr. ; Half-Morocco, 22 fr.

The book reads on take the fulfillment of a

The book reads not him the fulfillment of a task, but lake the researches and observations of one thereughty is lare with he subject fails appreciating its importance, and withing Le the pleasarr he superisons in it. The most is very comprehensing and complete in its same. Addition The book before us is a most remotable positioning and a most extraction and a most extraction one. The book before us is a most remotable positioning and a most extractioning one. The book is equally well played for the latty or the preferance. It toke as how to be heafthy, happy, and is leasaffful as possible. We can have see that been a limited as in a literal from another, we have ever read. It was like a word, and will be premot mail families with pleasance and protes. Buy it, read it, and be surprised. and profit. Bey it, read it, and be surprised.

pleased, and improved.—The Scathers Chair.
This bank is written primarily for the lairy, but well prove of interest to the physician is seed. Though the nather poor is some others into technicalities to good and the confine interest in the former of peak Register, and in their respect to the are of proof plane Register, and in their respect are at master extensive Experience, and in their respect are atmitted malphets. Participation, the best as western from a theorem, therefore a vanisher such peak a terminal from a theorem of the control of the peaking interesting book, both incomplific and principles in the control of the processor and the resident. The bank is well written and processed in the resident The bank is well written and processed in the processor.

SHOEMAKER

Ointments and Oleates: Especially in Diseases of the Skin.

By Jone V. Shokkaken, A. M., M.D., Professor of Materia Medica, Pine-maculagy, Therapentics, and Clinical Medicine, and Clinical Professor of Discussion. of the Skin in the Medica-Chicarcical College of Philadelphia, etc., etc.,

The anther conclude concludes his preface as follows: "The reuter may thus obtain a competer of the whole subject of intrection as it exists tailay in the civilized world. In all cases the mode of preparation is given and the theraperifical application described seriative, in to far as may be done without needless repetition Success Energies, revised and calarged 198 pages. Thus, Neatly bished in Dark-Hips Cloth. No Cinthe Physiciani' and Studente Ready Reference Series.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.50, not; in Great Britain, Se. Cd.; in France, 9 fr. 35.

It is invariable as a ready reference when continuents or obsides are to be used, and is serviceable to both druggers and phonomer. County Newton Mound.

We the physician who feels empertain as to the lend form in which to prescribe medicines by way of the skin tim book will proper rais-ular, owing to the many proceptions and formular which dot in pages, while the consoun motor of the teck materially asks in making the book a useful one—Medical Areas.

SMITH

Physiology of the Domestic Animals.

A TEXT-BOOK FOR VETERISARY AND MEDICAL STUDGETS AND PRACTITIONERS.

By Hoxner Means Surre, A.M., M.D., Professor of Companyive Physiology in University of Pennsylvania: Fellow of the College of Physiological Analysis of the Natural Sciences, Philadelphia; of American Physiological Society; of the American Society of Naturalists, etc.

This new and important work, the most thereughly complete in the Raglish language on this subject, treats of the physiciony of the domestic animals a a mult comprehensive manner, especial prominence being given to the subject of toom and solders, and the character of the diet for the berhovers under different conditions, with a full consideration of their digrature peculiarities. Without being overlandsmed with details, it forms a complete text book of physiology adapted to the nie of sticlests and practitioners of both veterinary and kinnan includes. This work has already been adopted as the Tent-Book on Physiology in the Veterinary Colleges of the United States, Gress Britain, and Canada. In one Handsons Hoyal Octavo Volume of over $50 pages, productly Sentrated with more than 400 Pine Wood-Engravings and many Colored Plates.

$5.50, Not 28s. Price Cloth. - - $5.00, Net 8.60 H 32t. 结乱的

A. Liastrano, M.D., H.F.R.P., V.S., Pre-lament of Austrano, Operative Surgery, and surface Medicine is the american Venezimery sings, New York, writer—"I have simul-ned the seath of Dr. Er. M. Smith con-tain R one of the best sublimes to extension; medical reason of the best sublimes to extension; medical reason of the best sublimes to extension; medical reason of the same time."

E. M. Banarson, A.M., M.D., Profession of Expending in the Chengy Ventranor College, writer—"I have carefully symmetric the Smith's Physiology, speciated by yet, and the R. H. Schuller and the subject of the Smith's Physiology, seed are not writed as who deally be ultimate in full laters ledge of the principles of physiology, seed are not writed as all a pure smallering of the carefull points."

Nurth's processports of his subject is as or the side of the states of the states position and to the same of the states of the sales of t fell understanding of the text. Dormal of Comparative Modeliniae and Security.

Veterinary praemitioners and profitation will read it with pleasure. Veterinary structure and profitation will read it with pleasure. Veterinary structure are traded in which would be used on pagings for the read they also be professed, cannot be seen they also be professed, cannot be succeed as which would be used to professe for the read they also be professed, cannot be succeed as their text-block in physicalogy at an arriver Professionary Review.

Altograther, Professor Smith's "Physiology of the Domestic Antonion" is a broper production, and will be believe with delights in both the human medical and vetocitary medical ways for Inthonesia Band to place, besides, in all agreements of Introduction—Parts. Paging Mal. V. Vet, in the Breithy Modeline Review.

The negligible flow professional resident of the work and in the Breithy Modeline Review.

The negligible control of the work of foods and dispersion in toological theory of the section of the work of foods and dispersion in the surface of foods and objection in the work of species of the colour of the work of the colour of the section of the work of the colour of the section of the work of the colour of the to be that a part proportion of space is progress, to each, in view of those extreme importance to the practitioner — for one Lembet.

SOZINSKEY

Medical Symbolism. Historical Studies in the Arts

Brandy, "The Care and Culture of Children," etc.

Nearly 200 pages. Nearly bound in Dark-Blue Cloth. Appengel easy (Dustrated with appeared of thirty clity new Wood Engravings. No. 5 in the Physicians' and Students' Ecoly Reference Series.

Price, post-paid, in United States and Canada, $1.00, not | Great Britain, Sc.: Trance, 6 fr. 20.

He who has not have to more fully study the more agreement seconds of the past, will highly print this treat hand. He interesting discourse upon the past in fail of augusties thought— American Lewest.

Life an opin to a dry not chart doors of medical interators, through which iss scarri-stages, is this much sleveled to medical consides and mythology. As the author opty Include layer, desper judgments can not will endure as seemed and nighteen makker. "A Com-malium Programmer." By the program of the program of the party and admire-late and necessarily admired to not foreit to necker these moderal signators which have come down to me and to excitate or placerical greated show experiences. An accounting amount of rally making it constanted within the covers of the bank, and every page of the work beam tellers of the publicabilities greate and existing ment of the publicabilities greate and existing ment of the ment antappely decreased author.

[conduct Lorent.

STEWART

Obstetric Synopsis.

By John S. Stewart, M.D., formerly Demonstrator of Chatetries and Chief Assistant in the Gynecological Clinic of the Medico-Chiracyteal College of Philadelphia, with an introductory note by William S. Strewart, A.M., M. D., Professor of Obstetrics and Gyanoslagy in the Medico-Chirospical College of Philudelphia.

By abusents this work will be found particularly useful. It is based upon the teachings of such well-known authors as Playleis, Parvin, Luck, Galabia, and Capeaux and Tamies, and contains much new and important matter of great value to both student and practitioner.

With 42 Hilminstein. 202 pages. 12mo. Handsonely bound in Dark-Blue Cloth. Xv. 1 in the Physicians' and Students' Roody Reference Series.

Frice, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, not; in Great Reitaln, fa. : France, 6 fr. 20

Dullargie Minimu, M.D., Professor of Onsteiner, Ruch Medical College, Chicago, Di., pape 1–72 here examined the 'Obstetion symmetry,' by John X. Stewart, M.D., and r. given not gloculary to characterize the work as systematic, occurse, portpersons, and author-tic. Among mountain it is one of the heat."

It is bell stimen, excellently (Emirated, and bully up to dark in every respect. Here we find all the essentiate of Obstetties in a wrickel, Australia, European, Parymeng, Pergusany, Indian, Purperal State, and Obstettie Operation all being ratefully and ac-recruity described a Highato Medical and Accepted Journal.

It is clear and concise. The chapter on the development of the describes in conceinity pains factors. The physical contribution of the chapter of the factors of the contribution of the c well-drawn, new expensions, and the book is of a bury convenient size wife, Louis Mellins' and Burgoost Journal.

ULTZMANN

The Neuroses of the Genito-Urinary System in the Male.

WITH STREET, AND IMPOTESCE.

By Dr. R. ULTERANY, Professor of Genito-Utimery Diseases in the University of Vienna. Translated, with the author's permission, by GARDER W. ALLES. M.D., Surgeon in the Genito-Urinary Department, Boston Dispensity, Full and complete, yet torse and comine, it handles the subject with such a vigor of touch, such a character of detail and description, and such a directors. to the result, that no medical man who once takes it up will be content to lay it flows intil to person is complete,—nor will one reading be enough.

Professor Ultrasson has approached the subject from a somewhat different point of view from most surgious, and this gives a peculiar value to the work. It is believed, moreover, that there is no convenient hand-book in English tron-ing in a broad manner the Genito-Urinary Neurosea.

STROTHS OF CONTENTS.—First Part.—I. Chemical Changes in the Urine in Cases of Neurosca. II. Neurosca of the Universe and of the Sexual Organic classified as ; (1) Sensory Neurosca ; (2) Motor Neurosca ; (3) Security Neurosca Second Part-Sterlity and Impotence. The treatment is all cases is described clearly and minutely Historied, Itmo Hardsonely Bound in Dark-Blue Cloth. No. 4 in the Physicians' and Students' Roudy Reference Series.

Price, port-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.00, not; in Great Britisin, Sa ; in France, S fr. 30.

This book is to be highly recommended, owing to the clusters and brevity. Althoughter, we do not know at my book of the same may each contribute a mark model produced to a same many to be a desired open on the model produced in the same is short space.—Abstract Arms.

Its scope is large, not being confined to the case condition, where such contribute a second to the section of t minded of his delightful manner of presenting his thoughts, which ever no otherwise criginal ity and appointment.—Worldy Med. Howev.

I sad in me small degree to throwing and will and in me mail degree to decrease light on the more present of mean of the full for the sub-man perfect any saves of the full for the sub-man perfect any saves of the charac-to which these escaps expectable setset—The Motion Ayr.

VOUGHT

A Chapter on Cholera for Lay Readers.

HISTORY, SYMPTOMS, PREVENTION, AND TREATMENT OF THE DISEASE.

By WALTER VOIDING, FR.R., M.D., Medical Director and Physician in-Charge of the Fire Island Quarantine Station, Post of New York; Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, etc. Illustrated, 12ms, 185 pages. Flexible Class.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, 75 cents, net; Speak Britain, in ; Prance, 5 fr.

By complying with and conforming to fined this is perfectly practicable) the mitractions so clearly, fully, and yet bringly given in this little volume, absolute security against the disease is natured.

It is written by so experienced and competent an archestry—our wire last betted tend to hand condict with an extensive cublence—and in each a clear, associati style, as to be easily comprehended and mule available by every blodesped has lambivided

The following Connersum Table or Converts shows the scope and completeness of the work; Definition; History of Cholers; Cholers in America; Causes of the Disease; The Disease of Regards Beings; The Germ in the Bolls; The Disease in Epidemic Perm; Symptome; The Diagnosis of the Disease; Prognose; Treatment; Prevention; Method of Hamiling on Outbreak of Cholers on Siephoned; Quantum; Disinfection.

A very thorough and outveniently arranged index adds greatly to the practical usefulness of the book.

WITHERSTINE

The International Pocket Medical Formulary

ARRANGED THERAPETTICALLY.

By C. Stravitz Witnessers, M.S., M.D., Associate Editor of the Annual of the Universal Modkell Sciences", Visiting Physician of the Rome for the Aged, Germaniton's, Philadelphia; Late Hotse-Surgeon Charity Hospital.

More than 1800 fermiole from several hundred well-known authorates. With an Appendix containing a Passingful Table, the newer remedies included; Important Incompanities; Tables on Dentition and the Palse; Table of Dropa in a Fundracion and Doors of Londanaus graduated for ago; Formula and Doses of Hypodermatic Medication, including the mover remedies; Uses of the Hypodetentie Springe; Formula and Doses for Intelligent. Next Describes, Garyles, and Eye Waster; Formula for Suppositories; Use of the Thermometer in Discret. Poisson, Amidotes and Treatment; Directions for Post-Sories and Motico Legal Economistics; Treatment of Asphysia, Superroke, etc., Assisted Especies and Disinfectable; Obstetrical Table; Directions for Ligations of America; Urinner Amilysis; Table of Eruptive Fevers; Motor Paints for Recognital Treatment, etc.

This work, the less and most complete of its kind, contains about 275 printed parent breides extra blank leaves policiously distributed throughout the book, affecting a place to record and index favorite formula. Elegantly printed. with red lines, edges, and harders; with illustrations. Bound in heather, with tide fap.

The alphabetical arrangement of the dismura and a thund-letter index

As a student, the physician needs it for study, collisional reading, and for Percelling the ferrocite prescriptions of his professors, in kerture and clinic; or a record graduard, he needs it as a reference hand dook for daily use in prescribing; as an old procedioser, he needs it to refersh his messary on old remedies and considerations, and for information concerning newer remedies and more medical approved plans of tirelessent.

No lives, programme medical man can afford in he without it.

YOUNG

Synopsis of Human Anatomy.

BEING A COMPLETE COMPAND OF ANATOMY, INCREDING THE ANATOMY OF THE VINERA, AND NUMBEROUS TABLES.

By Janes K. Youso, M.D., Instructor in Orthopsedic Surgery and Assistant Demonstrator of Surgery, University of Pennsylvania; Attending Orthopastic Surgeon, Out-Patient Department, University Hospital, etc.

While the suthor has prepared this work especially for students, sufficient descriptive matter has been added to render it extremely valuable to the busy practitioner, particularly the sections on the Viscours, Special Senses, and Surgical Austomy.

The work includes a complete account of Osteology, Articulations, and Ligaments, Muscies, Fascias, Vascular and Nerrous Systems, Alimentary, Vecal, and Respiratory and Genito-Urinary Apparatus, the Organs of Special Sense, and Surgical Austrony.

In addition to a most carefully and accountely prepared text, when over possible, the value of the work has been enhanced by tables to facilitate and minimize the labor of students in acquiring a thorough knowledge of this important subject. The section on the teeth has also been especially prepared to meet the requirements of sindents of dentistry.

lifustrated with 76 Wood-Engravings. 330 pages. 12mo. Bound in Extra Dark-Blue Cloth. No. 3 to the Physicians' and Students'

Boody-Reference Series.

Price, post-paid, in the United States and Canada, $1.60, net; in Great Britain, Sc. 6d : In France, 9 fr. 35.

Every asserting word has been excluded, and of regard to the very limited lives at the motival value of related to the very limited lives at the motival value of the lives of the related to a reference-book, as it presents the farm short which he evalue to refer his in memors in the layering quarter quarter constrain, with clearmen. Now Food Medical Journal.

As a communion to the disserting table and

As a companion to the directing table, and a convenient reference for the practitioner, it his a definite field of unefoliate. Pittsburgh Medical Review.

The look is made more adiabatical than the recognitionates. Its vigos, and not is not to expedience to be correct around and read at old moneto-a property which the student will resultly appreciate. - Firstly Action Review.

The Universal Medical Journal

(Formarly THE SATELLITE).

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE OF THE PRODUCES OF EVERY BRANCH OF MERC-CINE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Edited by Charles E. Sajous, M.D., Editor-in-Chief of The Annual OF THE UNIVERSAL MEDICAL SCIENCES, and C. SURSER WITHERSTINE, M.S., M.D., Associate Editor.

Subscription Price, in the Telited States of America, $3.00 per year; in other countries of the Postal Unice, Sa. 64, er 10 fr. 50c.

Subscribers to The Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences will now receive THE UNIVERSAL MEDICAL JOHNNAL free, as formerly they did Tox Savelaire. The Universal Medical Johnsal contains 31 pages of Text, Original Articles (a New Feature), Clinical Notes, and Correspondence by emisent foreign and American physicians, etc. The Best Time to Subscrabe is... Now? It is improved in appearance, matter, style, size.

Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences.

A YEARLY REPORT OF THE PRINCESON OF THE GENERAL SANITARY SCHEMES THRESHIPPY THE WORLD.

Issue of 1893 Ready in June, 1893.

Edited by Craterins E. Sarovit, M.D., formerly Lecturer on Larguagelogy and Shinology a Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, etc., and densate Associate Edition, assisted by over Two Hamilton Corresponding Edition and Collaborators in America, Europe, Asia, and Africa. In First Revist. Octavo Vonctories or amore 500 Passes Each, bound in Collaboral Half-Resis, Magnifloratin Haustrated with Chromo-Lebographe, Engrewings, Maps, Charle, and Dagrams. Being intended to enable any physician to possine, at a moderate cost, a complete Componenty History of Universal Medicine, edited by many of America's and Enrope's thion teachers, and experies in every densit of print, paper, binding, etc.

SOLD ONLY BY SUMMEDITIES, OR SENT DESIGN ON RECEIPT OF PLUCE, SERVING REPRINE PRIVATE.

Sabeniption Price per Year (methoding the "UNIVERSAL MEDICAL SQUENAL" for one year); In E. S. 5 vols. Cloth, SIA.00; Stall Resells, SIS.06. Casada (doty paid), Cloth, SIA.00; Hall Resells, SIX.00. Great Science, Cloth, Si Su; Hall Kasata, E5 10s. France, Cloth, 03 b. 00; Ball-Resells, 254 fr. 35.

The University Microcan Journals is a Monthly Magnetic of the Progress of Every much of Medicina in All Parts of the World, Editot by the Chief Editor of the Assetut and Examps Wrennerton, M.S., M.D., American Editor. Supplied to asheribers in the Anorgan free of charge; to all others, $5.00 per year in advance.

EDITORIAL STAFF OF THE "ANNUAL OF THE UNIVERSAL MEDICAL SCIENCES." CONTRIBUTORS TO SERES 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891, 1892.

RESPONDE CHIEF, CHARLES E. SAJOUS, M.D., PRILADELPEIA.

SENIOR ASSOCIATE EDITORS.

M.D. LLD. Pathiddpiin.

ASSESSMENT AND ASSESSMENT ASSESSMENT AND ASSESSMENT ASSESSMENT

Armon Aftert L. A.M., M.D., Broadju, 1888, 1888 1881 1887 1887 acceptable William, M.D., Parindelpoia, 1888. ING. LOS.

Sear, Landon Christ, M.D. New York, 1888, 1881, 2005. A Course M.D. Philadelphia, 1889.

SELFORM J. P. Cruret, M.D. Padadophia, 1989 1800 rdd, 1800 Ornepun, S. H., D.D.H., Ph.D. Padadophia

STITERAN, John. M.D., Ph.D., Charleston, 2008,

HARMANIA John R. M.D., I.I.D., Washington, 100, 100, 100, 100. HARM, Birdyri Amery, M.D., P.Sc., Philanter-phia, 100, 100, 100, 100, 100. Harvey, Previous R. M.D., Parindelphia, 100, 100, 100, 102. HOLLING, W. M.D., Parindelphia, 100, 100, 100, 101, 101, New York, 200, 100, 101, 101

House, Franklis H., M.D., Shence, 360, 1801. DAME

Howest, W. H., Ph.D., M.D., Ass. Arbor, 1889. 1802. 1802. 1802. 1817. Henry M.D., Albany, 1809, 1809. 1819. A.S., M.D., Chicago, 1809, 1809, 1809, 1801, 180

January, W. W. M.D., Washington, 180, 180, 180, 181, 180, KRAINSON, John M., M.D., Philadelphia, 180, KRAINSON, John M., M.D., Sem York, 188, 1880, Lorenzewern, Moren, M.D., Philadelphia, 1889, 1888, 1888.

LOOMS, Albred L., M.D., LL.D., New York, 1808.

CHASE Howevy M. A.M., M.D. Chicago, 500.

Mayroy, Walter P., M.D., F.R.M.S., Detroit, ion, ion, ion land lend lend Mayroy, H. Newell, M.D., M.A., De Sc., F.R.S., Entitione, 1900, 1900, Mayroy, Buckeye, M.D., New Orleans, 2000, 2001, 1900.

MEANN J. Foring M.D., Philledelphia, 200, 200,

MILLS, Charles K., M.D., Philadelphia, 1800.

Œ

SENIOR ASSOCIATE EDITORS (COMMUNICAL)

Mixes, Chia, Sedgwick, M.D., Berken, 1988, 1988, 1986, 1981, 1992

Measurement, E. E. M.D. Publishma 180.

PARTY THOUSAND PRINCIPLE THE PRINCIPLE OF THE PARTY OF TH

RABBET, Ambress L. M.D. New York, 1908,

Resident A D A M W.D. See Vot. 1884 TSKI.

House, Geo. H., M.D., Radamere, 1908, 1909

SECURITY, E. C., M.D., Previdence, 1903, 1803, 1803.

160. cv. Nicholas, M.D., Ph.D. Milwenker, 1611, SHARTPARE E O. M.D. Petindephia 1808.

Allen J., A.M., M.D., Philadelphia, 1986, SMITTER.

1901, 1902, 1903, 1813; New York, 1908, 1908, 1908, 1902, 1903, 1902, 1903, 19 serious, E. C. M.D. New York, 1900.

streams, Lawre a., M.D., New York, 1988, 1989.

series Louis a. M.D., New York, 1988, 1989

Victoria, S. F. M.D. Roston, 1807 Witters, J. Williams, M.D., Philipshiphia, 1888,

WHITE DR. DEC. T. M.D. CHRISTIN, 1988, 1988,

JUNIOR ASSOCIATE EDITORS.

HALLOY, J. M. M.D., Publisherphin, 1986.
Blanc, Arthur Amer, A.M., M.D., Publisherphin, 1986. 1981. 1981. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1982. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1983. 1984. 19

Corper Sademonische A. N., M.D., Philadelphia. 1988. [PR].

Captus & M., M.D., Philadelphia, 1988. [Beatain, 1878.] B. M. D., Washington, 1988. [Beatain, C. N., M.D., Philadelphia, 1989. [Beatain, C. N., M.D., Philadelphia, 1980. [Beatain, C. N., M.D., Philadelphia, 1980. [Beatain, C. N., M.D., Philadelphia, 1980. [Beatain, A. A., M.D., Philadelphia, 1982. [Beatain, A. A., M.D., Philadelphia, 1982. [Printed St. Leonard, M.D., Chrymand, 1983. [SC. Printed St. Leonard, M.D., Chrymand, 1983. [SC. Printed St. M. Constantine, M.D., Philadelphia, 1984. [Beatain, C. M., M.D., Philadelphia, 1984. [Beatain, C. M., M.D., Philadelphia, 1984. [Beatain, C. M., M.D., Philadelphia, 1984. [Beatain, M.D., Philadelphia, 19

HERRY William, M.D. Pratasholphia, 1988, 1989, J. Accessor, Henry, M.D., Rosston, 1983, 1983, Accessor, Henry, M.D., Rosston, 1983, 1983, Lance, Harriston, M.D. Parliadelphia, 1988, Lance, Harriston, M.D. Parliadelphia, 1988, Mr.Donarde, W.Ele G., M.D. Albany, 1988, Provinces Chem. R. M.D. Polishelphia, 1983, Provinces Chem. R. M.D. Polishelphia, 1983, Provinces Chem. R. M.D., Atlantic City, 1988, 1988, 1981, 1983, Link, 1982

Property, W. M., M. D., Atlantic City, 1986, 1986, 1981, 1982, 1981, 1982, 1981, 1982, 1983, 198

STRANGEL Affect M.D. Philadelphia, 1902 Vonactor, H.F. M.D. Koston, 1901, 1902 Walerthine, Enigoly H., H.D., Ballimore, 2002, 3900

WARDER, P. M., W.D., New York, 1802, 1802, WRITE - Builder L., A.M., M.H., Fanniscophia, O'REEL CHEE

Winds, Brende H., M.D., New York, 1888, 1888, 1600, 1601 Well-re, Lawrence, M.R., Politskitchia, Pres Wylnas, Walter, A.H., M.D., Wastington, 2001

ASSISTANTS TO ASSOCIATE EDITORS.

Description A. A. M.D. Philiphologica, 188.
George George M. M.D. Philiphologica, 2008.
George George M. M.D. New York, 2008, 1809.
George K. M. M.D. Korrow, 2008.
George K. M. M.D. Warthington, 500.
George G. M. D. Warthington, 500.
George G. M. D. M.D. New York, 1809, 1809.
George G. M. A. M.D. New York, 1809, 1809.
George G. M. A. M.D. New York, 1809, 1809.
Kalver G. Warthington, C. H. A. M.D. Washington,

Nu a NEEL, S. P., M. St., Claritons S. 180. Marries, Edward, M. Dr., Philadelphia, 1881, 1882.

McKitt, E. R., M.H., Christian, 100, 100, 101, 1502

NYREA F. H. M.D. New York, 1988, 1889, Particular P. W. H. Philadelphia 1889, 1889, Particular P. W. S. M. W. D. Philadelphia, 1889, 188

STREET, G. G., M.D., Boston, 1881, 1882, 1882, 1884, 1

Water Specks H. M.D. New York 1998. Waters H. C. M.D. New York, 1998. Waterstorn, Thompson S., M.D. Philadephia.

William W. H., M.D., Cherman, 1988 Wilson, C. Merry, M.D., Philadelphia, 1988 Wilson, W. H., M.D., Philadelphia, 1981, 1988.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A GREAT SURGEON.

MISTORY OF THE

Life of D. Hayes Agnew, M.D., LL.D.

By J. HOWR ADAMS, M.D.

This facinating life history of one of the world's greatest surgeons is non-ready.

Dr. J. Howe Adams, the author, has been for many years a member of Dr. Agnew's family, has had the valuable aid of Mrs. Agnew, and also access to documents and papers of massual value and interest that would have been denied to most writers; so that the biography here presented is written, as it were, from the inside, and thus made doubly interesting and valuable as the narrative of the career of an emisson physician, surgeon, and benefictor of mankind. Royal Octavo, 316 pages, handsomely printed, with Portraits and other illustrations.

Price, in United States, Entra Clark, $2.50 net; Ealf-Morocco, Olfa Top. $2.50 net, post-paid. In Canada (duty paid), Cloth, $2.75 net; Ealf-Morocco. $2.50 net. Great Britain, Cloth, bin; Half-Morocco, 10s. 6d. France, Sloth, 15 fb.; Half-Morocco, 22 fc.

BOLD ONLY BY BUSICEPTION, OR SENT DIRECT ON RECEIPT OF PRICE,

THE ONLY COMPLETE AND EXHAUSTIVE EXPOSITION OF THE SUBJECT.

Psychopathia Sexualis,

WITH ESPECIAL REPERING TO CONTRART SEXUAL INSPINCT: A MEDICO-LIBRAL STREET OF SEXUAL INSPIRED.

By Dr. R. von Krafff-Erico, Professor of Psychiatry and Neurology, University of Vicina. Authorized Translation of the Seventh Enlarged and Revised German Edition, by Charles Gilbert Charlesce, M.D. Professor of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Marion-Sime College of Medicine, St. Louis; Fellow of the Chicago Arademy of Medicine; Corresponding Member of the Detroit Academy of Medicine; Associate Member of the American Medico-Psychological Association, etc.

Professes you Kraift Ehing's study of the psychopathology of the sexual life easily supersed an all previous attempts to treat this important subject scientifically, and it is sure to commend itself to members of the medical and legal professions as a scientific explanation of many social and criminal enigmas to which no work in English offers a solution.

GENERAL SCHEME OF THE BOOK.......L. Fragment of a Psychology of the Sexual Life; the Sexual Instinct; Sensonity and Morality; True Love, etc. II. Physiological Facts; Sexual Maturity; Control of the Sexual Instinct, etc. III. General Pathology; Importance of Pathological Manifestations; Sexual Perversion. IV. Special Pathology; Abnormal Sexual Manifestations in Mental Diseases; Insurity. V. Pathological Sexuality Before the Criminal Court; Frequency of Sexual Crimes; Increase; Less of Responsibility.

One Royal Octave Volume. 432 pages.

	Helled Sames.	Camba oberryalds	Great Rolesia.	Printer
Cloth,	$2.00, not	$3.30, net	17s. 6d.	35 fr. 60
thorp,	4.00 "	6.90	25s. 6d.	24 fr. 60

BOLD ONLY BY BUSSOMPTION, OR MENT DIRECT ON RECEIPT OF PRICE.

RANNEY

Lectures on Nervous Diseases.

PROM THE STAND-POINT OF CHERRIAL AND SPINAL LOCALIZATION, AND THE LATER METHODS EMPLOYED IN THE DELOSORS AND TREATMENT OF TRESS APPRILIOSS.

By Ammour L. Basser, A.M., N.D., Professor of the Amstony and Physiology of the Nervous System in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital; Professor of Nervous and Mental Diseases in the Medical Department of the University of Vermont, etc.; Author of "The Applied Austomy of the Nervous System," "Practical Medical Austomy," etc., etc.

It is now generally conceded that the nervous system controls all of the physical functions to a greater or less extent, and also that most of the symptoms encountered at the belaids can be explained and interpreted from the stand-point of nervous physiology.

Profusely illustrated with original diagrams and sketches in color by the author, carefully selected wood engravings, and reproduced photographs of typical cases. One handsome royal octave volume of T88 pages.

SOLD ONLY BY SUBSCRIPTION, OR SENT DIRECT ON BECEIPT OF PRICE.
SHIPPING EXPENSES PREPAID.

Price, in United States, Cloth, $5.50; Sheep, $6.50; Half-Russia, $7.50. Canada (duty puld), Cloth, $6.00; Sheep, $7.35; Half-Russia, $7.70. Great Britain, Cloth, 32c.; Sheep, 37c. 66.; Half-Russia, 40c. France, Cloth, 24 ft. 70; Sheep, 42 ft. 45; Half-Russia, 43 ft. 30.

We see glad to note that De. Hanney has published in book form his abstracted network on nervine disease. His look semistan over seven handool large yages, and in profusely districted with unique of dispression of sketches in colons, and this many carefully estored wood-care and reproduced photographs of typical cases. A large amount of valuation information, set a little of which has but recounty appeared is medical literature, is pre-smiled in reseport force, and then made made savened to. In our opinion, iv. Kanney's finds angular service of the made of the made of the medical profession, fat, even though the author's views may be assessing upon to openion, it enters the most been provided by the author's views may be assessing upon to openion, it cannot be disputed that his work bears evidence of acceptable method and better opinion,—American Journal of Jacobs, Joseph and Change of the profession of the

STANTONS

Practical and Scientific Physiognomy;

100

Mow to Read Faces.

By Make Ormeran Stanton. Conjuntly illustrated. Two large

Royal Octavo volumes. 1220 pages.

The author, Max. Mart O. Stavrov, has given over trenty years to the preparation of this work. Her style is easy, and, by her happy method of illustration of every point, the book reads like a nevel and memorizes itself. To physicians the diagnostic information conveyed is invaluable. To the general reader each page opens a new train of ideas. (This book has no reference whatever to physicology.)

SOLD ONLY BY SUBSCRIPTION, OR SEXT DIRECT ON BECKEPT OF PRICE.
SHIPPING EXPENSES PREPAID.

Frice, in United Dutter, Cloth, $3.00; Sheep, $11.00; Raif-Russia, $11.00; Canada (futy paid), Cloth, $10.00; Sheep, $12.10; Raif-Russia, $14.30. Scent Britain, Cloth, 55c; Sheep, 60c; Half-Russia, 50c. France, Cloth, 30 fr. 30; Sheep, 30 fr. 40; Half-Russia, 43 fr. 30.

